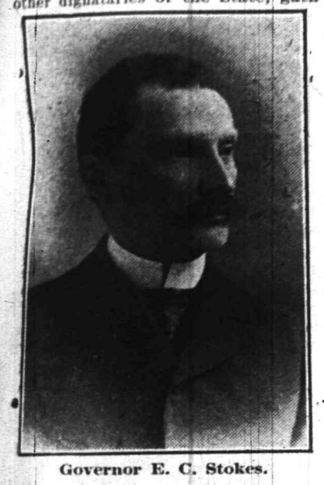
JUNIORS EXTEND HEARTY WELCOME TO STOKES

State's Chief Executive Guest of Honor at the Annual Banquet at the Casino.

OVER 200 PRESENT

Senatorial Question But Lightly Touched Upon in the Speech-making—S. St. J. McCutchen Toastmaster.

More than two hundred citizens of Plainfield and other parts of the State, together with Governor Edward Casper Stokes, Senators Ernest R. Ackerman and Joseph T. Frelinghuysen, Judge Francis Scott and other dignataries of the State, gathered at the second annual banquet in the Casino, last night, given by Franklin, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield councils, Jr. O. U. A. M. The affair was a great success in every detail. The dinner left nothing to be desired and the fine list of speakers proved a delightful part of the evening's programme.



Governor E. C. Stokes.

The spontaneous and hearty welcome extended to Governor Stokes and the other visitors was a pleasing feature of the occasion. Especially was this true, when Mayor Charles J. Fisk, the first speaker of the evening, declared that if the people had their say Governor Stokes would be the next United States Senator. This brought forth a genuine outurst of enthusiastic applause from everyone.

Only in one other instance was the United States Senatorial contest referred to and that was by Governor Stokes in his opening remarks. He said on this question: "I am pleased to visit Union county—a county which has an ex-Governor (meaning Foster M. Voorhees) who has no further troubles, and which is the home of an United States Senator who is perfectly comfortable at this hour. I am also glad to visit Plainfield, the home of a unanimous Mayor, and I was thinking how others would like to feel just as unanimous at this time."

Samuel St. John McCutchen, of North Plainfield, who is a member of the State Board of Education, was the toastmaster, and he filled the position perfectly. After putting the assemblage in good humor by his witticisms, he announced the rules of the game, which were that no one could speak as long as he wanted to, except the toastmaster, and here he asked if James Martine was present, knowing the latter's tendency toward oratory. He said that when a man reaches Congress it is different. There he can talk into the Congressional Record, but if any one present felt inclined to kick over the restrictions they could have their speeches printed in a local weekly.

In introducing the first speaker, Mayor Fisk, he referred to him as a man without a party, carrying the vote of the Republican party in one pocket and that of the Democrats in the other. The Mayor's subject was "Our City."

"After such an introduction," declared Mr. Fisk, "I feel like the small boy who said you would scarcely expect one of my age to speak. I extend greetings and congratulations to you all and I herewith present you with the keys of the city, not for tonight but for all time for every good citizen who is ready to fight for the stars and stripes. We as citizens of Plainfield do not appreciate what we have here and others who do not live here don't know what they are missing. This is a typical American city, where the citizens are patriotic, enterprising, progressive and ambitious. This is due to the character of the population. There are not very many rich men in Plainfield, but all work as one man, and it is one place where the government is by the people. We have a population of about 20,000, four banks, sixty miles of macadam roads and some day we hope to own our water supply. We have grown so fast that another community has sprung up next door. We want that little girl for we have fallen in love with her. Some day there is going to be a wedding. Plainfield is going to ask her to come over. We are going to ask the Legislature to be at the wedding and we are going to ask one who sits with us tonight, and who, if the people had their voice in the matter, would be the next United States Senator, to sign the wedding certificate."

State Council Secretary William H. Miers was the next speaker, his toast being "Our Order." He reviewed the history of the order from its inception, told of its incalculable benefits and stated that today it numbers 46,000 members in New Jersey. He told of the success of the order in securing the adoption of satisfactory naturalization laws, the maintenance of the flag on every public school-house and the Bible therein and quoted a number of statistics showing how the order had been beneficial to hundreds of members and relatives through the sick and funeral benefits. He paid a glowing tribute to the public school system of the State and to Governor Stokes for his interest as a member of the order.

Judge Francis Scott, of Paterson, who is a member of the State Board of Education, was introduced as the next speaker. His toast was "Naturalization and Immigration."

He said that the subject was one very dear to his heart. He had been forced to naturalize those who were not fit to receive such papers. "I come from a foreign city—Paterson," continued Judge Scott, "a place of unsavory reputation, but unjustly so. In coming here I feel as though I was in another country, but that is no reflection on my own city. The new naturalization law passed last year makes the future secure and it is satisfactory in every respect, and if the Jr. O. U. A. M. had anything to do with its adoption it deserves the gratitude of every citizen. President Roosevelt is also to be praised for his work in behalf of the law.

"I believe in commissions, Governor Stokes believes in commissions and we all believe in Governor Stokes. Steps have been taken through a commission in this State to handle the hordes of foreigners who come here. Under the old law anyone could get in, it depending on the conscience of the Judge. It is a common occurence to have an applicant for papers say in answer to the question as who is President of the United States, that it is George Washington or Governor Stokes. In the case of the latter it may be prophetic.

"The new law covers in detail nearly all of the errors of the old one. The applicant must swear that he intends to reside here permanently and one of the best features is that he must speak the English language. Governor Stokes deserves great credit for his efforts in helping to eliminate the purchasable vote and to keep out the vast horde of undesirable people that flock to these shores. The immigration laws are not so satisfactory, I am sorry to say. A million immigrants a year, who can neither read or write, are coming to this country and three-quarters of them at one port of entry. We have got to handle them and digest them and in this respect Governor Stokes' commission will help to solve a perplexing problem. America can take care of herself. I believe that we can handle the negro question, although I think it was one of the mistakes of the century to give the black man a franchise to vote, at a time when he had no other qualification than a black skin. How can the law be administered? Limit the number of immigrants. Suspend immigration for a period if the foreigners are coming in too fast. I don't believe in a literary test. This is not absolutely necessary, but I should insist on a physical test. We want honest, strong immigrants, but not paupers and the ignorant poor classes of other countries. I believe in the United States of America, a Republic instead of an Empire, in George Washington instead of Napoleon Bonaparte, that today is better than yesterday and that tomorrow will be better than today."

Mr. McCutchen in introducing the next speaker, Senator Joseph T. Frelinghuysen, who spoke on "Citizenship," said that he desired to present the bridesmaid for the marriage of Plainfield and North Plainfield. The Senator from Somerset said that Mayor Fisk had referred to fair North Plainfield, and while he was not opposed to divorce and believed that compatibility of temper desirable he would take the offer of marriage into consideration.

Continuing Mr. Frelinghuysen said that he felt proud of the principles of the Jr. O. U. A. M., and he congratulated the members of the order. He

CHICKEN SUPPER OF W. R. C. A SUCCESS

EXCELLENT COOKERY ENJOYED BY 250 DINERS, IN PLEASANT ATMOSPHERE.

Success to a notable degree marked the chicken supper held by the Women's Relief Corps, the G. A. R. auxiliary, at G. A. R. hall, East Front street, last night. Fully 250 suppers were served, and the menu and cookery were such as to send the 250 home, if not exactly "loud in their praises," at least earnest and decided.

Three large tables were attractively laid, and the walls were hung with the national colors. The dinner was informal, and the homelike atmosphere added to the enjoyableness.

The committee in charge was made up of Mrs. Andrew Cox, chairman; Mrs. Sarah Mattox, Mrs. Sarah Baglin, Miss Mary Smith, Miss Virginia Devine, Miss May Howlett, Mrs. Frederick Wenzel, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins. Mrs. Baglin, Miss Howlett, Miss Smith and Miss Devine presided at the table. Mrs. W. C. Smith assisted the committee in preparing the supper.

AWARDED $125 IN SUIT AGAINST AUNT'S ESTATE.

Mooney Had Asked for $500 as Compensation for Caring for Her.

The case of the heirs of the estate of the late Miss Agnes A. Stansbury against the executor, Samuel R. Mooney, was heard before Judge Atwater at Elizabeth on Wednesday. The suit was brought by F. S. Cutter, of Sandford avenue, to secure a final accounting, and the court allowed the executor $125 instead of $500 as claimed by him.

Mr. Mooney put in a claim against the estate for $500 for services rendered by himself and wife in taking care of his aunt, Miss Stansbury, during her last illness, covering a period as he claimed of two months.

The evidence showed that Mr. Mooney had not attended his aunt more than five weeks and the court decided that a remuneration of $25 per week, amounting in all to $125, was all that he was justly entitled to.

Miss Stansbury lived for some years with her sister in Rahway and in the spring of 1895 went to visit relatives on Staten Island. While there she was taken ill. Meanwhile, her nephew, Mr. Mooney, who was afterward named the executor of the estate, took charge of her until her death, and later put in a bill for $500. Mr. Cutter and the other heirs took exception to the claim on the ground that it was excessive. The care of Miss Stansbury was looked upon as a labor of love and that no agreement was made as to compensation.

A SCOTCH PLAINS WEDDING.

Miss Minnie Guest Made the Bride of John H. Lewis, of Flemington.

Miss Minnie Guest, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Guest, of Scotch Plains, and John H. Lewis, of Flemington, were married at 6 o'clock Wednesday night at the home of the bride's parents. There were guests from Westfield, Plainfield, Somerville, Flemington, Middle Valley and Scotch Plains. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James F. Hoffman, of Drew Theological Seminary, Madison.

The bridesmaid was Miss Mattie Hull, of Scotch Plains, and Mr. McAuslen, of Philadelphia, was the best man. A reception followed the ceremony and super was served. After a wedding journey the couple will reside at Flemington. The bride was formerly employed as a saleswoman at H. A. Bonn's store on West Front street.

S. S. A. L. Meet.

Over 100 entries have been received for the initial meet of the Sunday-school Athletic League at the Y. M. C. A. tonight. Not that many individual contestants have entered, but numbers of the 62 young men registered will double up in the different events. The competition is expected to be keen. Some of the entrants are youths who have done noteworthy work in Y. M. C. A. and secular school athletics, and some new marks may be set up.

Mr. Whiton Gives His Lecture.

John M. Whiton delivered his lecture on Sicily before the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church last night. It had been twice postponed. The attendance was large. Mr. Whiton showed seventy-five of the views with which his story of travel is illustrated.

State Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The third biennial State convention of the Y. M. C. A. will be held at Elizabeth, February 21 to 24. W. D. Murray, of this city, will be one of the principal speakers. Plainfield Y. M. C. membership will be well represented.

CITY TAX RATE TO FIGURE IN CONSOLIDATION PLANS

RECOMMENDATIONS OF COMMISSION WILL BE BASED UPON INCREASE.

In the opinion of those well informed concerning the investigation into the question of consolidation of the borough and city, which is being conducted by a commission appointed a few weeks ago, the recommendations of the commission either for or against the proposition, will be based solely on the increased expense to the taxpayers of Plainfield. One of the most important questions to be taken up soon will be that of tax rate. Under the consolidation plan there would be undoubtedly an increased rate and the chances are that as Plainfield has the largest population the greatest expense would be upon its taxpayers.

There will also be a consideration of the fact that North Plainfield would have to be supplied with sewers, greater police and fire protection, which would mean a great expense and the question to be decided is would the taxes paid by the residents of the borough be adequate to meet the increase. The question of tax rate will probably be one of the most difficult and it is said that upon that will largely depend the recommendations of the commission. It is said that the tax rate question will be taken up at the next meeting of the commission for consideration.

NO CONTEST OVER WILL OF MR. AND MRS. ISAAC DUNN.

All of Wife's Property Is To Revert to Her Sister, Mrs. Cuming, of This City.

There will be no contest over the disposition of the property of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Campbell Dunn, who were killed at the Stelton crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad on December 18. The will of Mrs. Dunn has been filed with Surrogate Peter Francis Daly at New Brunswick, and its terms make a contest on her property impossible. Letters of administration have been asked by Mr. Dunn's family, there being no will.

At the time of the tragedy it was said that both Mr. and Mrs. Dunn had left wills leaving their property to one another, and that to settle the estates it would be necessary to prove which died first, something eye-witnesses were unable to testify to. Mrs. Dunn's will, however, disproves these suppositions. It provides that all her property shall go to her children, if she had any, which she had not, and, failing issue, it was to be divided into five equal parts, two going to her sister, Mrs. Ada M. Cuming, of this city, and three to her husband, he to have the income from his share during his lifetime and to draw on the principal only in case of his exhausting his private means. The husband's share was to revert to Mrs. Cuming at his death. The Dunns were reputed to have a large amount of property.

Rev. Dr. Lewis Will Preach.

Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, has gone to New England, where during the next three or four weeks he will represent the American Sabbath Tract Society at the denominational churches. Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons, of Grace M. E. church, who was to preach at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, tomorrow morning, will be unable to do so because of illness, and Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis will occupy the pulpit. His theme will be "The Bible Strengthened by Higher Criticism." Strangers will be welcome.

Passengers Have Narrow Escape.

While the 5:45 eastbound express to New York was passing through Garwood, last night, the passengers in one of the coaches were greatly frightened by the breaking of window glass, and Paul Symons, of East Third street, narrowly escaped injury. Some one threw a couple of large stones at the train, and they smashed the window panes into a thousand pieces. The broken glass fell about the face of Mr. Symons and other passengers, but fortunately did not cut them.

New Law Has Good Effect.

The good effects of the new naturalization laws were in evidence at Elizabeth, today, when County Clerk James C. Calvert sat to receive applications for papers. Out of the number that applied first papers were granted to only one person and no second papers were granted, which was due to the fact that the applicants were unable to come up to the requirements.

COMPANY K TO HOLD CAUCUS MONDAY NIGHT

MEMBERS LIKELY TO SELECT LIEUTENANT KITCHELL FOR CAPTAIN.

The members of Company K have notified that following the drill on Monday night, February 4, at the armory, there will be a caucus for the purpose of selecting a captain to succeed Captain Martin, who was recently elected major of the Second Regiment. At the meeting all other vacancies existing will be filled.

As stated in The Daily Press a few days ago the position of captain is likely to be given to Second Lieutenant Harry B. Kitchell, formerly of this city, but now residing in Westfield. Several other candidates have been considered, but the general opinion seems to be that Lieut. Kitchell will be the choice of the members of the company.

Lieut. Kitchell has been a member of Company K since its institution in this city and has been one of the most active in all its affairs. He has distinguished himself on the State range at Sea Girt, where he has won many medals for his fine markmanship. He has always been popular with the members and it is believed that the success of the company will continue under his leadership.

POLICE APPOINTMENTS LIKELY MONDAY NIGHT.

Reported That Chairman of Committee Will Offer Resolution for Confirmation.

The February meeting of the Common Council will be held Monday night, when several matters of importance are expected to be taken up. It is likely that the chairman of the police committee will be prepared to offer a resolution about filling the newly-created offices in the police department, which was laid over at the last meeting. At that time Councilman Frank Randolph, chairman of the committee, wanted the three appointments confirmed by one vote, but according to the rules this cannot be done, a separate vote being required for each appointment.

The appointments made by Mayor Fisk are as follows: Captain, Christian Frederickson sergeant, Jonn Flynn; detective-sergeant, Florence McCarty. As yet no outward sign of disapproval has been seen in Common Council meetings to the appointments, although Councilman Tyler by opposing Mr. Randolph's resolution, indicated that he might have something to say on the subject when action is taken.

CONCERT AND DANCE.

Pleasant Affair Held by St. Faith's Guild Last Night.

Under the auspices of St. Faith's Giuld, the Plainfield Brass Band gave a concert at the parish house of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, last night. Dancing followed the concert. The attendance was large. The auditorium was handsomely decorated with flowers, and large framed portrait of George Washington.

The band played excellently, under the leadership of David Lawson. Ten numbers were rendered, and all of them were enthusiastically applauded. The band was tendered a testimonial luncheon after the concert.

The Guild conducted an ice cream sale in connection with the dance. The whole membership worked as a committee in charge, under the direction of Mrs. Herbert Guinn and Miss Edna Willis.

Martin Ptaschinski Dead.

Martin Ptaschinski, aged 83 years, an old resident of the borough, died in the State Hospital, Trenton, yesterday, where he was accepted three weeks ago for treatment. He was taken ill several weeks ago with mental trouble and it was thought best to remove him to Muhlenberg Hospital. He soon grew worse and upon the advice of the family physician, Dr. A. H. Dundon, Mr. Ptaschinski was taken to the State Hospital. His trouble did not yield to the treatment given and he failed rapidly, passing away yesterday morning. The body was brought to this city in the afternoon. The funeral services will be held from the late home on Duer street, Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Mr. Ptaschinski leaves four daughters, Mrs. Charles Smith, Mrs. John Schorb, Mrs. Schaffer and Miss Helen Ptaschinski, of this city, and a son, George Ptaschinski, of Newark.

SPLENDID SINGING BY GRACE CHURCH CHOIR

"THE DAUGHTER OF JAIRUS" RENDERED WITH MARKED EXCELLENCE.

Unusual excellence marked the presentation of Stainer's "The Daughter of Jairus," by the choir of Grace Prostestant Episcopal church last night. The choral work was all that could be desired, and the solos were splendid. A large congregation enjoyed the programme.

The work is short, but it is intensely religious and it was presented with a noteworthy degree of impressiveness last night. Mrs. Theodore Mantz, William Tallamy and Arthur Chamberlain sang the solo parts as the most exacting would have them sung. Mr. Tallamy's singing was especially fine. His enunciation, expression and phrasing were of that high order of merit that calls for the highest words of praise in the critic's vocabulary.

W. E. MacClymont, the organist, directed the singing with his usual skill. The works that are being presented at Grace are worthy of larger congregations than they have drawn. They are given solely for the benefit of the music-loving public, and the latter would be but caring for itself by showing that they are appreciated. The music-lovers who failed to hear last night's service missed an evening that would have lingered long in their memories.

MRS. ELIZABETH C. MORRIS.

Passed Away Suddenly at Home of Her Nephew, E. M. VanBuren.

Miss Elizabeth Crary Morris, aged 82 years, died suddenly last night at the home of her nephew, Edward Morris VanBuren, on Central avenue, from heart failure. She was born in New York and had been a resident of this city about twenty-five years. She lived a quiet retired life, and while not publicly identified with any charities, was a liberal contributor to those in this city, which included the hospital and the missionary societies of Grace church, of which she was a member.

Prior to moving to Plainfield Miss Morris used to spend some time at the country seat of her father at Belleville. She is survived by a sister, Mrs. D. T. VanBuren, three newpehs, Lewis G. Timpson, Edward M. VanBuren, Laurens H. VanBuren, of this city; two other sisters, Mrs. William Stiger, of New York, and Mrs. Robert Helfenstein, of Elizabeth, and a niece, Mrs. F. R. Lefferts, of New York.

The funeral services will be held from the residence of Edward M. VanBuren on Central avenue, Monday morning at 11 o'clock. The interment will be in the family plot in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn.

AFTER POLICE JOBS.

Nine Candidates Were Examined Mentally and Physically Yesterday.

Nine candidates for the vacancies on the police force were examined yesterday. They were pounded and tested for physical defects at the Y. M. C. A., by Dr. C. B. Lufburrow and Physical Director Listman, in the afternoon, and put through a course of mental sprouts at the Council Chamber by City Stenographer George H. Wean, at night. The result of the examinations will not be made known until after the Police Board reports on them.

The candidates are: Frank Sweeney, 29 years old; Joseph Murphy, 35 years old; J. D. Ammerman, 21 years old; Theodore W. Miller, 24 years old; William R. Overland, 25 years old; Cornelius McCarthy, 22 years old; William J. Hartpence, 31 years old; William E. Karlsen, 31 years old; Tobias W. Nolan, 27 years old.

A DOUBLE CELEBRATION.

Mother and Son Observe Birthday Anniversaries at Same Time.

An event of unusual interest occurred at Oak Tree, last night, when a double birthday celebration was held at the home of Mrs. Eugene Van Court. Last Sunday Mrs. VanCourt was sixty-seven years old and her son, W. E. VanCourt, celebrated the forty-ninth anniversary of his birthday yesterday. Both anniversaries occurred in the same week. The events were observed at the same and place.

A sumptuous dinner was served, about twenty-five guests being present. After the feast the time was spent in playing parlor games and enjoying excellent music. Both Mrs. VanCourt and her son were the recipients of many handsome gifts from relatives and friends. They have been residents of Oak Tree for many years and are well known in Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Leggett and son, Raymond, of Morristown, Morris county, were in Plainfield today. Mrs. Leggett is a daughter of Mrs. R. C. Fisher, of West Fourth street, who is critically ill with paralysis.

BIKE THIEF USED ALIAS

Pawned Knife Leads To a Disclosure of Damaging Facts.

WHEELS CLAIMED

And Three Complaints of Larceny Against the Young Man—Pleads Guilty and Is Held for Grand Jury.

James Wilson, the young man who confessed to the theft of four bicycles after his arrest Wednesday night, following an unsuccessful attempt to sell a stolen wheel to Clarence Thorn, a dealer, pleaded guilty to three charges of larceny before City Judge Runyon, sitting as a State magistrate, this morning. He was held for the grand jury in $150 bail. He does not know anybody here, and is not hopeful of getting a bondsman.

The prisoner is referred to as Wilson, because that is the name he gave when his pedigree was taken at the station house, but there are well-founded doubts as to his right to bear it. The police learned this morning that he gave another name to the management of the Somerville hospital a week ago, when he went there with a companion, who was hurt by falling from a train at Bound Brook. He gave his name there as William Walters, and James Wilson was the name given by the injured man. It his confession to Chief Kiely, yesterday, the prisoner said his companion's name was William Racine.

The disclosure of the prisoner's use of at least one alias came as the result of the discovery that he had pawned a hunting knife here. Chief Kiely taxed the prisoner with having stolen the knife, and the young man said "Racine" had given it to him. Chief Kiely called up the Somerville hospital this morning, after the prisoner's hearing, and asked the authorities there to question "William Racine." They didn't know anybody by that name, and the disclosure of the alias followed.

The discovery convinced the Chief that "Wilson" and "Racine" were a pair of crooks. The investigation into his past and that of his injured pal will be prosecuted with renewed interest.

Wilson made no statement to the court. He pleaded tersely, and was taken back to his cell. He is a good-looking young fellow, clean-cut in appearance, and not at all of the criminal type. Judge Runyon commented on his appearance after the hearing.

Wilson told Chief Kiely yesterday, in a statement supplementary to the written confession, that he was moved to steal because he was "up against it." He said he had never stolen before, and wouldn't have taken the bicycles if they had not fallen so temptingly across his path. The chief took the statement with some seasoning, but he had been impressed by the prisoner's apparent frankness in talking of himself and his thefts.

Three of the bicycles have been claimed by their owners. They belong to Dr. R. E. Emerson, Edward Conway and Edward Baker. Dr. Emerson and Conway got their bicycles from Harry Dreier's store, and Baker's wheel was found at Thorn's. It was the Baker wheel that led to Wilson's arrest. Thorn recognized it when the thief brought it to his shop for sale Wednesday night, and telephoned to the police.

The fourth wheel, held at Thorn's, is still unclaimed, but it is thought to belong to Health Inspector William Addis. M. C. VanArsdale has been looking for his bicycle since last week and it was thought the remaining one at Thorn's was his, but he said it wasn't after seeing it. Addis lost his wheel last Friday. He will look at the unclaimed bike this afternoon.

The complaints against Wilson were made by Dr. Emerson, Conway and Baker. As soon as the fourth wheel is claimed another complaint against him will be drawn up.

Open P. P. A. Meeting.

Everybody interested in the question will be welcomed at the meeting of the Plainfield Protective Association, to consider the report on the election and gas lighting conditions here, at the Casino, tonight. The meeting will be open to all citizens. It will begin at 8 o'clock.

of having one's credit good possibly at this time of the year, is a little more noticeable than at any other. Perhaps yours is in excellent shape, but you have already used it as far as you care to go, and are still a little short. Then step in and let us assist you. We're taking care of winter's needs for hundreds whose credit is good, but who hesitate to obligate themselves any further to their friends, and particularly for a loan of a little cash. We loan any sum for any time and accept return payment weekly, semi-monthly or monthly.

We give you a written statement showing the exact cost of a loan, also the exact discount we allow every month the loan is paid before contract time. You will find us always willing to give you facts at our office. If you cannot call, write or 'phone us, and our confidential agent will call and give you full particulars.

The possession of household goods, piano, organ, horses and wagons are sufficient evidence of your ability to pay.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The February dance to be held Thursday night of next week by the Suburban club will be one of the most enjoyable dances the club has yet held. The committee in charge is working hard with this end in view and is preparing to take care of the largest crowd of the winter.

Of course you are interested in your public library and intend attending Rev. William Mulford's lecture on Washington Irving to be given in the parlors of the Baptist church Wednesday night of next week.

Day and Gahagan, one of the Suburban Club's two-men teams entered in the bowling tournament being rolled on McLaughlin's alleys, Plainfield, have dropped out because of Mr. Gahagan's leaving for the South.

Strawrides seem to be popular with the young people everywhere but here. Hardly a night has passed since sleighing commenced but what three or four sleigh loads have passed through town.

Joseph Perretta, the village barber, is beginning to wear a smile again. Nearly a month has passed by without having his shop broken into or a window broken.

Some of the local Jr. O. U. A. M. members attended the Junior banquet held last night in the Casino, Plainfield.

Mrs. Otto Peterson, of Newark, has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Clark, of Prospect avenue.

The regular monthly church covenant meeting will be held tonight in the parlors of the Baptist church.

WESTFIELD.

Henry C. Sargent, of Westfield, well known in mechanical circles and for many years associated with the Ingersoll-Sargent Rock Drill Company, is seriously ill at his home from a stroke of paralysis.

Miss Sarah B. Agnew, of the State Library Association, is in charge of recataloguing the books of the Westfield Public Library. She has announced that the work will take several weeks.

The new officers of the relief association of the Aeolian works at Garwood are William Littlefield president, Fred E. Inipp secretary and Daniel Snyder treasurer.

The spring meeting of the Northern New Jersey Conference of the Congregational church will be held in the Congregational church here Thursday, March 7.

Douglass Lane, musical director of the Westfield Methodist church, has called a meeting for February 4, at the church, to organize a vocal society.

BERNARDSVILLE.

An invitation has been extended to the women of the village to become members of the Bernardsville Improvement Society, and it is understood that a number of applications will be received at the next meeting, to be held in Lyric Hall next Tuesday evening.

Eugene Van Riper will have charge of the prayer meeting tonight at the Methodist church, and speak on "Work and Workers." Mr. Van Riper was a member of Dr. C. H. Yatman's first class of trained workers.

The King's Daughters meet at the home of Miss Eleanor A. Tunison this afternoon.

NORTH BRANCH.

Jacob H. Kershaw, of Somerville, has been a guest for a few days of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron J. Thompson, near North Branch Depot.

The congregation of the Springdale church tendered its pastor a donation visit Wednesday night at the home of John C. Cooper.

Theodore Staats will entertain a large number of young people tonight at a dance at the North Branch Hotel.

Miss Anna Case, of South Branch, organist in the Reformed church at Neshanic, has been ill at her home.

William Conover, of Somerville, has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Conover, near this place.

James Van Fleet has returned from a visit to relatives in Raritan.

SOMERVILLE.

Mrs. Griggs and Miss Annie McMurtry entertained the Woman's Club at their rooms yesterday afternoon.

Miss Lillian Meseroll has been spending part of this week with Mr. and Mrs. Van Nuys, at Belle Mead.

Mrs. Kenyon and Miss Augie Kenyon have been staying this week at Allenhurst.

William J. Kirby has been spending a few days in Baltimore.

C. V. Knowles has left for a trip abroad.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Charles F. Starker's household goods were moved yesterday to the house he recently built on Washington avenue.

Mrs. Elizabeth Beatty, of Hackettstown, has returned home after a visit to her sister, Mrs. F. W. Vail.

Miss Tillie Miller will entertain the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church tonight.

John W. Wagner has been appointed sexton for the year at the Methodist church.

Several local teachers attended a lecture at the Plainfield High School last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Apgar are happy over the arrival of a small son.

Frank Smith, of Topeka, Kan., is visiting A. G. Nelson for a few days.

The parish meeting of the First Baptist church will be held tonight.

Dr. P. W. Brakeley was in New York yesterday, on business.

The Guild of Holy Innocents' church met last night.

George Vliet is recovering from an attack of diphtheria.

William Herlich has recovered from a brief illness.

George Jenner has been a sufferer from grip.

H. L. Pierce was in New York yesterday.

MARTINSVILLE.

The following women will be in charge of the apron and necktie sociable next Tuesday evening at Mrs. Harriet Edmonds' home: Miss Olive Elliott, Miss Josephine Taylor, Miss Doris Van Winkle and Miss Ella Davis.

Mrs. Ella Parson, of New Brunswick, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Ida May Codington, at Mt. Horeb.

James E. Van Nest, of near Mt Horeb, is spending a week with relatives in Philadelphia.

BASKING RIDGE.

The Shapeskeare Club will meet tonight with Miss S. Ella DeCoster at her home on the Morristown road. The study of King Henry V. will be commenced at this time.

The Whist Club will meet this evening at the home of Miss Agatha Grenfock on the Liberty Corner road.

Frederick C. Sutro, of New York city, spent a short time recently at Ozonia farm, his summer home.

The prayer meeting of the Presbyterian church was led Wednesday evening by Herman Childs.

URGE GOULD FOR OFFICE.

Effort Will Be Made to Place Millionaire on State Education Board.

Asbury Park, Feb. 1.—It is said in political circles here that another effort is to be made to lift George Gould, of Lakewood, into the limelight of New Jersey politics. This time it is sought to give Mr. Gould a position on the State Board of Education, to succeed Edmund Wilson, of Red Bank. Those who pretend to know say that the matter rests entirely with Mr. Gould, and that he can have the office if he desires it or will accept it.

The appointment should naturally go to Monmouth county, but as there is an irreconcilable contest on in this county between R. A. Tusting, of Asbury Park, and T. Frank Appleby, of the same city, it is believed the Governor will appoint an Ocean county man. Thus far, though frequently urged to stand for important offices in the State, Mr. Gould has refused to mix himself in politics, and it is generally believed he will not favor the present proposition.

Wise Guys' Annual Dinner.

The Wise Guys Club held its annual dinner at Maul's Washingtonville Hotel last night. Speeches and songs were enjoyed at the conclusion of the menu. The committee which made the arrangements was composed of Henry Hansen, William Callahan, John Lynch and Frank Day.

T. C. Smith, of Madison avenue, has recovered from an attack of the grip.

HOLD-UP MAN TRACKED BY FOOTPRINTS IN SNOW.

Cranford Police Distinguish Themselves By Capturing Fellow In Short Order.

Cranford, Feb. 1.—The police of Cranford distinguished themselves yesterday morning by capturing John Stefen, formerly of New Brunswick, for whom an alias warrant had been issued on a charge of assault made by Albert Heitman, of Roselle Park, a conductor on the Main Line trolley.

Stefen held up the trolley car, of which Heitman was in charge on Tuesday night. It was the last car from Elizabeth, and after it had passed through Cranford and was about to round the curve at Lincoln avenue, Stefen, who was the only passenger, stepped out upon the rear platform of the car and pulled the trolley pole down. Conductor Heitman jumped off his car and put the pole on. As he was about to board the car Stefen pulled a revolver from his pocket, and, pointing it at Heitman, told him to deliver up his cash.

Heitman called to the motorman, who ran to assist his partner. Stefen, seeing that he was about to have two men to handle, ran across the fields. The car proceeded westward to the trolley junction, where the police of Westfield and Cranford were notified.

The Cranford police tracked Stefen by marks on the snow, which led to 207 Walnut street, where the man boarded. Stefen was employed at the Droescher Oil Stone mill, and here the police rounded him up yesterday morning. When taken before Judge Mendell, Stefen denied being away from his boarding place on Tuesday night. He also claimed that he had another boarding place at Garwood. He claimed that he came here from New Brunswick last Saturday.

Conductor Heitman positively identified the man as the same person who drew the pistol upon him on Tuesday night. William Allen, of Cranford, who was a passenger upon the car to this place, also identified Stefen. Stefen, in default of $200 bail, was sent to the County Jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

FALL LIKELY TO BE FATAL.

One Painter May Die and Another Is Seriously Hurt by Accident.

Elizabeth, Feb. 1.—One man was probably fatally and another seriously injured Wednesday afternoon by the collapse of a scaffold at a house where they were working on McLane street, this city. The victims were two painters in the employ of Contractor Jacob Gordon, who is interpreter for the Union County Court. The men fell thirty-five feet.

One of them, Samuel Goldstein, twenty-two years old, and single, had his skull fractured and back hurt. He lives at 759 Trumbull street.

The other man, Samuel Black, fell on top of Goldstein and had his spine broken and was hurt internally. At the Alexian Hospital, where the painters were taken, it was said yesterday that Black cannot recover. He is thirty-two years old, married and resides at 758 Trumbull street.

Mr. and Mrs. Thilo Failer, of West Second street, are rejoicing over the arrival of a boy, born to them on Sunday.

J. R. Truell, of Central avenue, who underwent an operation in Boston, a few days ago, has fully recovered.

PERSONAL.

Miss Lizzie Frech, of Raritan, has been visiting friends in town has returned home.

John P. Hall, of East Fifth street has been detained at home the past few days by illness.

Percy Sandford, of Englewood has been spending several days in town with relatives.

Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, of East Fifth street, is recovering from an illness of two weeks with grip.

Mrs. Julius Feley and daughter of Winsted, Conn., have been guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Dunn, of Sandford avenue.

Mrs. Charles Woolston, of Park avenue, who has been at the hospital under treatment, is much improved and hopes to return home in about a week.

Slight improvement is reported in the condition of Letter-carrier William Deamerest, of the borough, who has been detained at home by a serious illness.

Miss Edna VanCleaf, of East Millstone, who has been visiting relatives here for several weeks, is spending several days with her uncle and aunt in Jersey City.

Edward Cooley, of Watchung avenue, who with Mrs. Cooley and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sanford, of East Front street, are in Virginia, writes home that his health is much improved. The weather is delightful and Mr. Cooley has enjoyed several hunting trips.

POINTS FOR THE BUYER

For general trucking call on John Winzenreid, of Lee place. His work always gives satisfaction.

A. H. Enander, the Watchung avenue plumber, is always prepared to attend to all orders. His work is the best.

Boice, Runyon & Co., coal dealers, would like to fill your bins with the fine quality of anthracite. No better anywhere and so reasonable in price.

Have any trouble with the supply of milk, cream, butter or eggs you are getting? If so patronize Bokaw's creamery on East Front street and your troubles will disappear.

That celebrated Flemington sausage, in bags, at Barnes' grocery, 7 Park avenue, is delicious, with cakes these cold mornings. Try it and you always buy it. Also, everything usually sold in an up-to-date grocery.

When shopping bear in mind that "The White Store," A. E. Force & Co., proprietors, offers exceptional bargains in every department. A visit to this store will quickly convince you of the wisdom of trading there. No matter whether you want a dress or a paper of pins you will find them here and of the best at low prices. Trading stamps with every purchase.

COFFEE WAGONS FOR EAST ORANGE POLICE

Traveling Restaurant As Auxiliary Patrol and Preventative to Use of Liquor.

East Orange, Feb. 1.—With the purpose of putting a stop to intoxication, which has got so many of the local policemen into trouble lately, the Police Committee of the East Orange City Council is considering the use as an auxiliary to night patrol a horse, wagon and supply of hot coffee and waffles or rolls. Chief of Police Bell has been instructed to look the field over and find out what a temperance cart will cost.

The members of the committee have looked up the temperance records and have decided that the policemen have drank to excess to keep warm. Four policemen have been before the committee lately charged with unsteadiness on post. Three were dropped, and the other, who is the son-in-law of the chief, was fined.

Theatrical Trust Leaders Indicted

New York, Feb. 1.—The Grand Jury has returned indictments against Marc Klaw, A. L. Erlanger, Daniel Nixon, I. P. Zimmerman, Charles Frohman and Al Hayman, the leaders of the theatrical trust, charging them with conspiracy. The complainant is David Balesco. The indictments are voluminous affairs and cover fully seventy pages of typewritten matter. The gist of these indictments charges the men with conspiring to injure the trade of independent theatres. Mr. Hayman and Mr. Frohman are at present in Europe, but inasmuch as it is a misdemeanor, counsel can appear for them in their absence. Edward and Abe Lauterbach represent the theatrical managers, and will appear in court this afternoon to arrange the fixing of bail.

Legislator a Suicide.

New York, Feb. 1.—Assemblyman William J. Donohue, thirty-three years old, of No. 132 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn, representative of the Fourteenth Assembly district, Senator Carren's home district, in the Legislature, committed suicide yesterday in Edward Lingers' saloon, No. 6 Oakland street, by shooting himself in the head. The only probable cause which the police could discover was that he had been drinking heavily and feared he would lose a suit which he had pending against the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. When the case was called yesterday by Justice Fawcett he was dead.

—The Jolly Twenty-Four Club will hold a dance and euchre at the Plainfield Camera Club rooms tonight.

WHAT'S THE USE?

What's the use of making trouble when it's with you every day—
What's the use?
What's the use of doing things in the most inconvenient way—
What's the use?
What's the use of hunting worry?
What's the use of fret and stew,
When there's not a ghost of reason
To believe it eases you
What's the use?

What's the use of lamentation when a good thing passes by—
What's the use?
What's the use, when you may laugh and shout, to turn it to a cry—
What's the use?
What's the use of breeding frenzy
And indulging in a howl
When the world is not disposed to Listen to your peevish growl?
What's the use?

What's the use of blaming others for the fault that is your own—
What's the use?
What's the use of shifting burdens you should carry all alone—
What's the use?
Will it make your burden lighter
If the world refuses to
Weep about the home made troubles
That have made their home with you?
What's the use?

How De Musset Bought a Lunch.

One day, says Harper's Weekly, three friends in Paris were taking a walk together.

"I should like to have an exquisite lunch," said one of the three.

"I should be satisfied with a lunch," said the second, "which is a little short of being exquisite."

"And I," remarked the third one, "should feel content with any kind of lunch."

Unfortunately none of them was possessed of the necessary money.

Presently one of the trio was struck by an idea. He led his friends to a music publisher and made him an offer: "Buy from us a song. This gentleman wrote the text, that one set it to music, and I shall sing it, as I am the only one of use with a good voice."

"Well, sing it for a trial," answered the publisher. The young man complied, and the publisher seemed to be satisfied. He paid fifteen francs for the song, and the friends hastened joyfully to a restaurant.

The author of the text was Alfred de Musset, the musician was Monpor, and the singer Dupre. The song, which was bought and paid for with fifteen francs, "The Andalusian Girl," yielded the publisher 40,000 francs.

Close Questioning.

The Washington Star gives an account of an investigation of election frauds in the lower section of the State. In the course of the proceedings it developed that the ballots in an important precinct had not been sealed after the final count, thereby being exposed to fraudulent practices. The chairman of the investigating committee closely questioned the election judge as to why the prescribed duty of carefully securing the ballots had been neglected.

"Could you not obtain any mucilage in the town?"

"No, sir."

"Could you not procure some sealing-wax, someshoemaker's wax, if nothing else?"

"No, sir."

"Well, then, sir why didn't you go out into the woods and get some resin? Do you mean to tell me that there were no pine trees around there shedding tears at your infamous rascality?"

Puritan Book Titles.

The chats about books serve to recall some of the publications of the Puritan age and the queer titles they bore. One runs "The Seven Sobs of a Sorrowful Soul for Sin, or the Seven Penitential Psalms of the Princely Prophet David; whereunto are added William Humin's Handful of Honeysuckles, and Divers Godly and Pithy Ditties, Now newly augmented." Another, equally long-winded, was "A Reaping Hook, well tempered for the stubborn Ears of the coming Crop; of Biscuit baked in the Oven of Charity. Carefully conserved for the Chickens of the Church, the Sparrows of the Spirit and the Sweet Swallows of Salvation." After these "The Spiritual Mustard Pot to make the Soul Sneeze with Devotion" is quite time!

Steel Dinner Knives.

Steel dinner knives should be cleaned every time they are used. Otherwise they will look black and dull. Bristol brick with soap is the best thing to use. Let the blade of the knife rest flat upon a board and rub the steel with a bit of soaped cloth diped in the brick reduced to a powder. Some housekeepers use a small potato for cleaning knives instead of a cloth. If the blades have become rusted cover them with olive oil and quicklime. Put away for two or three days, then rub with brick.

Escaped.

$2 White Waists $1.00

If you have not seen these waists you cannot have a right understanding of their beauty and charm. The price at which we are selling them is likely to discredit them in the eyes of a great many who may not stop to investigate for themselves. But we want to assure you that we have seen many waists selling at $2 to $3 that have not been made of as sheer and fine lawn as has been employed in the making of these lots. And the models are of the smartest sort—strictly up-to-date, including the popular Gibson, Christy and other novel effects.

Everyone of the two hundred dozen waists in this purchase are just from the factory, have never been on sale before and are fresh, clean and nice.

These waists are made of beautiful sheer Persian Lawn. Some of these beautiful models are made with yokes of Valenciennes and Cluny laces in the most exclusive patterns and designs; some in square, pointed and round effects; others with fronts of all over embroidery; still others with dainty pin tucks and fancy beading and rich lace collars. Sleeves are in many styles—half, three-quarter, seven-eighths and full length, and many are prettily lace trimmed. Some of the waists button in the back; others in front. There are styles suitable for all figures, and the sizes run from 32 to 44. Count yourself lucky to get such waists at..... $1.00

GERMS CAUSE DYSPEPSIA

IF YOU DON'T KILL THE DISEASE GERMS THEY WILL KILL YOU. PEPSOIDS DRIVE THE GERMS OUT OF THE STOMACH AND REBUILDS IT. WRITE FOR A FULL SIZED BOTTLE—FREE.

A noted physician of Pittsburg, Pa., in a recent letter to Dr. Oidman says:

"In your prescription known as 'Pepsoids' you have given the medical world the greatest and most valued discovery in medicine of the present century. You have at last solved the problem that has baffled the skill of the best physicians of recent times, how to cure permanently all Acute or Chronic Stomach Diseases known as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Catarrh of the Stomach and Digestive Weakness. I have used your prescription, 'Pepsoids,' in hundreds of cases without a single failure. I attribute the success of your treatment mainly to the fact that the disease germs of the stomach cannot resist Pepsoids. Your theory that most Stomach Diseases are brought about by multitudes of nefarious disease-breeding germs must be correct, judging from the remarkable results attained from the use of your 'Pepsoids.' I consider 'Pepsoids' the best and most valuable remedy yet discovered, for the treatment of stubborn stomach ailments."

Pepsoids cure Dyspepsia and all Stomach Diseases, in a new way, by repairing the wornout lining of the Stomach and at the same time, destroy all disease-breeding germs. Dyspepsia and the worst forms of Stomach Disorders once cured in this way never returns.

Pepsoids are sold at drug stores at 50c. a bottle on an absolute guarantee or money refunded.

If you have not used Pepsoids before, we will send you a 50-cent bottle FREE. Send us your name and address and you will receive promptly, a full sized bottle.

You do not obligate yourself to pay a cent. All we ask, after Pepsoids have cured or greatly benefitted you is, that you recommend Pepsoids to your friends. Try Pepsoids to-day—they will cure you. The Vio Chemical Co., Chicago, Ill. 9

Bernards School Overcrowded.

Bernardsville, Feb. 1.—When the new $100,000 schoolhouse, erected and donated by Frederick P. Olcott to the residents of Bernardsville and Bernards Township, was planned, it was generally believed that the accommodating capacity of the building would not be taxed for many years to come. This opinion was based on the assumption that the increase in attendance would be normal, as indicated by existing conditions. The reverse of this, however, has taken place, as shown by the fact that the enrollment has more than doubled that of previous years and gone far beyond anything that could be reasonably expected. The question now confronting the Board of Education is one of supplying more and adequate room, and in this connection the erection of another building during the coming vacation period is under contemplation.

New Job For Cleveland.

New York, Feb. 1.—Grover Cleveland has been unanimously elected, and has accepted, the position of chairman of the recently organized Association of Life Insurance Presidents, and will also act as its chief counsel, at a salary of $25,000 a year. In addition to these duties Mr. Cleveland will act as referee in cases of dispute between the companies and will also remain a trustee of the majority stock of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, but for these services he will receive no compensation from any source.

NOTES AND INCIDENTS OF FOREIGN LIFE.

The Hottentots in arms against the Germans in Southwest Africa number only about 150, but, owing to the size and nature of the country, which is mostly bare of supplies, even fodder, the German military authorities consider 8,000 troops the smallest force that should be kept in the field, without exposing the settlers to attack.

The colosseum that is to be erected in London for the Olympic games of next year will provide sitting accommodations for no fewer than 367,000 spectators. It will hold four times as many as did the Colosseum at Rome.

In the reduced regiments of the British Army there are now twice as many non-coms and commissioned officers as are needed, and promotion promises to be so slow that a great many of the latter are sending in their papers, rather than waste their years in the service.

A number of doctors have offered their services free to the anti-suicidbe bureau of the Salvation Army, just opened in London, Birmingham and Bristol.

The public school children of Hull, England, were required recently to write essays on "alcohol." Some striking remarks were made in the course of them, such as: "Seafaring men who are in the habit of drinking are liable to collide with other vessels." "Today many people are in jail for committing suicide while under the influence of drink." "Alcohol is a mockery; at least it biteth like a servant, and stingeth like a hatter."

The Rev. Dr. Hunt, of Burgess Hill, England, remarked to his parishioners in the course of a recent lecture that he saw advertised many alleged cures for insomnia, but had never seen recommended the surest and cheapest remedy—going to church.

Cornelius O'Sullivan, for forty-four years head brewer of Bass' ales at Burton-on-Trent, England, died on January 8. He was an Irishman, made many scientific discoveries and was a member of the Royal Society.

After having been in use for 159 years an Axminster carpet is in the carpet factory at Wilton, England, having some slight repairs made to it.

According to official statistics France imports annually 170 tons of human hair, twenty-five tons of which come from Italy and 100 tons from China. Apparently the London Gentleman's Magazine is not altogether enamored of Carnegie's favorite game. It says: "Golf is a noble game, but it requires the best part of a county and a beast of a caddie with a load of furniture before you can play it at all."

When the Ameer of Afghanistan arrived the other day at Agra it was raining in torrents. As he rode at a walking pace, between lines of British troops, the General in command, seeing he had no overcoat, expressed regret at his getting wet. The Ameer replied :"I had a greatcoat in the carriage, but, seeing the army—my friends—lining the roads without coats, I felt that it would have been unbecoming in me as a soldier to wear one."

The general in command of the 33d Infantry at Arras has ordereda large mirror to be fixed in the barrack yard so that the soldiers may make sure they are spruce before they pass the gates.

ARRANGED HER FUNERAL.

Aged Newark Woman Named People She Wanted at the Service.

Mrs. Annie Kreamer, eighty-two years old, who committd suicide in her rooms at No. 416 Fifteenth avenue, Newark, some time Monday afternoon by swallowing carbolic acid, made full preparation for the funeral which was held yesterday.

Under date of January 23, she made out a list of eighteen persons she wished to have attend her funeral. The note reads:

Mr. George Brueckner: To be interred between her two daughters and two sons, in Woodlawn cemetery. This is Mrs. Anne Kreamer's wish when she passes away from this world. This to be given to Mr. George Brueckner when the time comes. Persons who are to be in the four coaches.

Then follow a list of eighteen of her relatives and friends. Mr. Brueckner is an undertaker.

Pin the Ring Case.

A useful case for hatpins, pins and rings is made of a piece of fancy ribbon with one of soft flannel tacked on to it and the two bound with narrow ribbon. At one end are sewed two or three little pieces of chamois leather, scalloped round the edges. This is to stick the pins into. At the other end a little bag is made, which draws together at the rim and is intended for rings. The hatpins are run into the lining, and the whole case is rolled and tied with ribbon.

Mrs. F. W. Iredell, of Madison avenue, is detained at home by illness.

Mrs. Dudley S. Miller, of Orchard place, has recovered from a recent illness.

Mrs. G. R. Vanderhoef, of West Front street, has recovered from a recent illness.

Mrs. William Springer, of Newark, who has been visiting relatives here has returned home.

Miss Carrie Smith, of Newark, has returned home after spending several days with friends in town.

IF A DEADLOCK ENSUES.

The question as to what would be the result in the Senatorial question if a deadlock should ensue in the Legislature has been answered by the Newark News in the following editorial:

"There is an impression among some of the citizens who have not had opportunity to obtain accurate information on the Senatorial question, that if Mr. Dryden should not receive enough votes to secure his election and a deadlock ensues in the Legislature, he would continue in office until his successor is chosen and qualifies. This is not the case. If Mr. Dryden is not elected and is able to prevent the election of any other Republican until the Legislature adjourns, New Jersey will have only one member of the United States Senate after Mr. Dryden's term expires.

"This was the case in Oregon a number of years ago. A struggle there lasted through the whole of a legislative session, and for two whole years Oregon had but one Senator. Delaware has had even more bitter experiences. Ever since the beginning of the fight against "Gas" Addicks and the gang of politicians he represented there has been a bitter struggle over the election of United States Senator. In the past twelve years Delaware has at times had but one Senator, and a part of the time has had no Senator at all, the Legislature failing to fill either of the vacancies.

"Should it happen—which is not at all probable—that the New Jersey Legislature adjourn without agreeing upon any man to succeed Mr. Dryden, this State will be represented in the United States Senate by Senator Kean alone. Mr. Dryden does not hold over. When his term expires he will have no further voice in the shaping of national legislation. The fact that there will be a vacancy and a lack of full representation is what spurs the Republican members of the Legislature to make every effort to agree upon another candidate when they feel certain that Mr. Dryden cannot be elected."

The action of the January Grand Jury in placing the stamp of disapproval upon the custom of making gifts to the foreman and clerk has been commended in every part of the county. There was never any good reason advanced as to why it should be done and the wonder is that it was not stopped long ago. The foreman has duties of importance to perform but his reward should be the honor and the consciousness of faithfulness to the trust imposed, instead of some costly gift for which the jurors were taxed.

That Ohio preacher who married thirteen women was just determined to make trouble for himself. If he had stopped at twelve things might have been different.

Silver Wire In His Heart.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 1.—In the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital Professors Mann and Ashton fed fifty feet of fine silver wire into an aneurism of the heart of Frederick Williams, a barber, yesterday. The aneurism was pricked and as the silver wire was fed into the opening through a needle it was coiled around inside, so as to form a framework on which the blood could coagulate. It is hoped the blot thus formed will grow into a new tissue and form a wall, so that when the aneurism does burst the aorta will remain intact. The surgeons cannot yet tell whether the operation was a success.

CIRCUS MAN CALLED RELATIVES "BAD LOT."

Michigan Kin of Millionaire James A. Bailey Fighting to Break Will.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Feb. 1.—The contest brought by Michigan relatives to set aside the will of James A. Bailey, the showman, was heard yesterday by Surrogate Millard, of Westchester county.

Mr. Bailey, who died in Mount Vernon about a year ago, left his entire estate, including the controlling interest in the Barnum & Bailey, Sells, Forepaugh and Buffalo Bill shows to his widow, Ruth McCaddon Bailey, cutting off the contestants, who live in Michigan, without a cents.

The estate, it is said, amounts to about $5,000,000.

The contestants, nephews and nieces, claim to represent about three-fifths of the estate. Through their Detroit attorneys they are trying to prove that the showman was mentally incompetent when he made his will, and that Mrs. Bailey and her brother, Joseph McCaddon, also a circus man, exercised undue influence over him.

In their depositions they alleged that all of Mr. Bailey's brothers and sisters in Michigan became insane before they died.

Daniel W. Childs and Hergert G. Hull, of New York, who were attorneys for Mr. Bailey at the time he drew the will, testified that he was perfectly sane and competent then.

Mr. Hull said that when Mr. Bailey made the codicil to his will he said that he had a lot of bad relatives.

"They are a bad lot," said he, "and would make trouble for Mrs. Bailey if they could. I want to make a will that they can't break."

Mrs. Bailey testified that when she first met her husband in 1868 he led her to believe that he was alone in the world, with no parents or relatives.

It was several years, she said, before he told her he had run away from his aunt's home in Detroit to follow his circus life. Mrs. Bailey said that when she married Mr. Bailey he was advance agent for a circus with a salary of $25 a week.

Later he had a wagon show, and she traveled with him as mistress of the wardrobe.

She denied that Mr. Bailey was ever in an insane asylum, sanitarium, hospital or institution of any kind, and said that his mind was always clear as a bell.

The case was adjourned in order to call the physicians who attended Mr. Bailey in his last illness.

SOUTHERN MILLS FIGHT TO SAVE CHILD LABOR.

Railroads and Coal Operators Also Against His Bill, Says Beveridge.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Senator Beveridge yesterday resumed his speech in behalf of the measure prohibiting interstate commerce in articles which are the production of child labor.

He said three-fourths of the cotton factories of the South were opposing the bill; that the railroads of the South were opposing it, and that the coal mine operators of the South were opposing it.

When Mr. Beveridge made the statement that the recently enacted Child Labor law of Georgia was "a dead letter" Mr. Bacon took issue with him.

Mr. Beveridge asserted there had been filed 3,000 applications for permits for child labor under the law.

"How many of them have been granted?" asked Mr. Bacon.

"All of them," replied Mr. Beveridge.

Senator Tillman acknowledged the very great evil of child labor in his State, and asked Mr. Beveridge to submit all the evidence possible that it might be used in a crusade for State legislation.

Adding to the difficulty in his State, he said, was the Northern millionaire who came down there, invested his money in cotton mills and then influence the Legislature against Child Labor laws.

"The Senator is to a certain extent right," interrupted Senator Gallinger; "there is Northern money in South Carolina, and God help South Carolina if there was not Northern money there!"

"Rather than have Northern money there exercising its lobbying influence," retorted Mr. Tillman, "I would to God the Senator and all others would keep Northern money out of my State!"

Death Notice Bride's Gift.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 1.—Among the death notices in an afternoon paper here yesterday appeared this advertisement:

"BURGER—Suddenly, on Tuesday, January 29, 1907, Lois A., aged 18 years.

"Chicago, York, Pa., and Norfolk, Va., papers please copy. Funeral at Portsmouth, Va."

Instead of being dead, the young woman is very much alive. She was married Wednesday, in defiance of the wishes of her parents, to Hugh McConville, and is now with her husband at his home, in Portsmouth, Va. "To all intents and purposes she is dead the me," said John D. Burger, the father of the bride, "and I have sent her a copy of the death notice as a wedding present. I want her and everybody who knows us to understand she is dead to us to all intents and purposes. She can never come home. I will never see her again."

Not Jewish But Idumean.

Protest should be made against the idea which has been given currency through the press that the degenerate manners represented in the shocking and abominable representation of life at Herod's Court were in any way characteristically Jewish. Both in the drama "John the Baptist," represented by Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe, and in the shockingly degenerate tone drama by Richard Strauss, which horrified visitors at the Metropolitan Opera House on Tuesday night, the impression was given that the wild riot of lust and cruelty represented in both were in some sort characteristic of ancient Jewish life. This is quite erroneous. The Herods were Idumeans, and were foreign rulers of the Jewish people, supported on their thrones by the menace of Roman power behind them. The true virility of the Jewish people of the period was shown seventy years later, when they faced, single-handed, the whole power of Rome in a manner which extorted admiration from the Roman victors themselves.—American Hebrew.

Wings and Flies

By Tom Muir.

"The County Chairman," the play with which the New Plainfield theatre was opened, will return on February 11. The leading role will be taken by Maclyn Arbuckle, who played it during the original run of the comedy at Wallack's theatre. When it was presented in this city before Theodore Babcock appeared in the role and George Thatcher was seen as "Sassafrass Livingston."

Justice Leventritt, of the New York Supreme Court, has granted the permanent injuction asked for by Edwin Milton Royle restraining Charles B. Dillingham and Mrs. Carter Payne from producing "Cleo," which was to have been the actress' starring medium. It was said in court when argument was heard that over $50,000 had been spent in the production of the play, and that it was to have begun at Buffalao next Monday. The justice says he considered it expedient to render an early decision so that the parties might, if possible, compound their differences. According to the contract there were to be no changes in the play without the consent of Royle, and the author contended that Mrs. Carter Payne had not carried out this part of the contract.

Joe Hortiz, who is the star in "Our Friend Fritz," to be at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow, had a theatrical company out when he was fifteen years old. He had a show out in the small towns around and about St. Louis. It consisted of ten people, all of the barn storming variety. The title of the show was "Frisky Fritz." It was a great troupe so he says and showed in any kind of a hall that they could get. While running this company Mr. Hortiz used to work in a factory. So after each performance at night he would have to run back into the city so as to be ready for work in the morning. Each night he would come out and take his place as the star in "Frisky Fritz." With the money he made in the factory he says he moved the company and paid their board many a time when they had had a bad night. At the close of the first season, which lasted six weeks, he had made a profit of $178, which was a large sum to his idea. He kept running these small troupes out every year until at last he was picked up by a prominent minstrel man and featured as a singer and from that day on he has followed that line of work, until this new venture of his which in a way is an order of the late J. K. Emmet's plays.

Snakes Not Sleepy.

Winter seems to have come into his own, but early in the week there were still signs of the misplaced spring that threatened last month. Wakeful snakes at this time of the year are supposed to be indicative of the quick approach of budding blossoms, and two of the liveliest snakes he ever saw, whatever the season, confronted Paul R. Collier, a surveyor, when he helped a man on Woodland avenue, near the city line, dig a post hole several days ago. The shovel disclosed two blacksnakes less than four feet below the surface, and both of them were as active as if winter and hibernation had never been heard of. They wriggled out of the hole and Collier had to swing his shovel fast to kill them. Snow was on the ground at the time.

Offers Blood for Girl.

New York, Feb. 1.—Heroic measures were decided on yesterday after a consultation of physicians to save the life of Miss Ellen B. Platt, daughter of Frank H. Platt and granddaughter of Senator Thomas C. Platt, who is critically ill of typhoid fever at the home of her father, No. 242 West Seventy-fourth street. By the transfusion of blood from a healthy subject it is hoped to conquer the disease, and a senior student of Yale University, a close friend of Livingston Platt, brother of the young woman, has offered himself for the operation.

MRS. STEELE LEAVES PORTLAND.

Bret Harte's Daughter No w On Her Way to New York.

Mrs. Jessamy Steele, daughter of Bret Harte, and formerly of this city, left the Portland, Me., almshouse last evening to take the 6 o'clock train for New York.

"They have been good to me here," she said; "as good as if I had been a high priced boarder, but I am delighted to get away to new scenes and brighter prospects. I have been stranded in Portland nearly a year. I had hoped to find some literary or musical employment here, but failed in my endeavor, and even my attempt to give recitals from my father's works increased my burden of indebtedness.

"Accepting charity is a heart touching business, but I appreciate the kind spirit in which it is proffered, and shall accept it as a means to my re-establishment on a more sound footing. It is my desire to get on the stage. I shall trust to the good judgment of Miss Robson, whose guets I am to be in New York, asa to whether I can begin at once a fulfilment of that desire." Miss Eleanor Robson, who is appearing in the dramatic version of Mr. Harte's story, "Salomy Jane," will give a benefit performance for Mrs. Steele next week.

ATLANTIC'S TREASURY SHORT NEARLY $25,000.

Experts Trace Raised Bills and Padded Payrolls to a Former Clerk.

Atlantic City, Feb. 1.—Nearly $25,000 has mystreiously disappeared from the city Treasury during the last two years, is the substance of the report submitted by the expert accountants who have been overhauling the accounts of the city. John T. Andrews, formerly chief clerk in the City Comptroller's office, is now under $10,000 bonds on charges of larceny and embezzlement from the city.

The experts declare a former chief clerk carried fictitious firms and individuals as city creditors, and accuse him of paying large sums to such accounts, of altering receipts and bills, and also of padding the labor pay rolls in the Department of Labor.

They also show a system of padding the city pay rolls so as to make xecess charges amounting to over $4,000; the balance of the money that is alleged to have been taken, the experts say, was obtained by raising bills from a few dollars to hundreds.

WOMAN THREY SHOE AT BURGLAR, WHO FLED.

Thump Against Door Too Much for Nocturnal Visitor's Nerves.

Williamsport, Pa., Feb. 1.—Williamsport's gentleman burglar is busy these nights. Friday night Mrs. John Dailey thought she heard a rat gnawing in a closet. She threw her shoe, which made a great thump against the closet door.

The "gnawing," it developed, was the sawing by a burglar of a first-floor window, but the thump of the shoe evidently frightened him away.

Wednesday night the burglar selected the home of Mrs. Lydia Augruch, a wealthy widow living in the Grampian suburban section. The entire household was away, and the intruder evidently spent the greater portion of the night in the house, as it was ransacked from top to bottom.

Money and a revolver were taken. A track in the snow across the lawn was the only clue left for the police.

Would Open New York Streets.

New York, Feb. 1.—Declaring it was impossible because of quicksand to proceed further with the construction of its tunnels in Thirty-second and Thirty-third streets, in sections between Madison and Seventh avenues, without opening the pavement, counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company yesterday applied to the Rapid Transit Commission for permission to complete the work by the open trench method. After long arguments by representatives of the company and property owners for and against permission to dig two trenches from building line to building line, sixty feet in depth, through these important streets, the question was referred, on motion by Mayor McClellan, to George S. Rice, chief engineer of the commission, for investigation and report.

Miss Rita Dalley, of Raritan, has been spending several days with relatives here.

Russell Stewart, of East Fifth street, is convalescing from an attack of pneumonia.

Look Into Starvation Plea.

New York, Feb. 1.—Investigation is being made by the Charity Organization Society concerning a man who, under the name of Alois Hoffman, has signified his willingness to sell his skin for grafting purposes in order, he says, to save his wife and two children from starving. There was an advertisement yesterday in the newspapers signed "Janitress." She is the wife of the man who declares he is ready for such a sacrifice, and they live in a tenement house, in East Eigthy-eighth street.

ANNUAL REPORT OF RAHWAY REFORMATORY

SUPERINTENDENT MARTIN DETAILS WORK OF THE PAST YEAR.

Trenton, Feb. 1.—In his annual report to Governor Stokes, Captain Martin, the superintendent of the Rahway Reformatory, says:

"Opinions differ as to the desirability of convict labor under contract, but the fact remains that contracts for the use of this labor are in force and should be made as productive as possible until, at least, the State does away with the system."

In connection with the superintendent's report there are also reports from Harlan P. Hough, the physician of the institution, also a report from Robert J. Shearer, principal of the school of the reformatory.

The report shows that at the close of the year there were 405 inmates confined in the institution. At the opening of the year of 1906 there were 376 persons in the reformatory. During the year one prisoner died; seven escaped, three of whom have been captured; one released by order of the court; three transferred to insane asylums; two returned to the Middlesex county jail, 224 paroled; 48 returned for breaking their paroles, and 216 received during the year.

Of the annual appropriation it is shown that at the close of the year there was a balance of $304,742.09. In this balance is the sum of $300,000 appropriated for the erection and completion of the new wing. The total earnings of the institution during the year were $17,849.50, of which amount $13,871.89 has been turned over to the State Treasurer.

The commissioners in the report join with Captain Martin in seeking an appropriation so as to enable them to provide a better water supply and a large sewage system. Appropriations are also asked for a new engine, dynamo and boilers for the power house. It is also pointed out that the commission has no funds with which to furnish the new wing.

In speaking of the trade schools Mr. Martin says he is again compelled to direct the attention of the Governor to the absolute necessity of no longer delaying the erection of at least two suitable buildings in which may be housed the present eight trade schools that are now either without accommodation at all or are required to locate in the engine and boiler rooms of the power house than which no more unfit place could be found.

Dr. Hough, the physician of the institution, reports that the health of the inmates has been particularly good and he makes special mention of the fact that there was but one death at the institution during the year. The one death was caused by typhoid fever. The disease, the doctor says, was traced to the drinking water, which is supplied to the institution from the Rahway River.

Mr. Shearer, the school principal of the institution, says that in addition to the usual studies, that have added a stenographic class. In this class the principal states that many of the inmates have attained a speed dictation of 100 to 115 words a minute. The total membership of the classes reaches 404 persons.

RAILROADS MUST PAY "MAIN STEM" SCHOOL TAX.

Gov. Stokes Will Use Entire Resources of the State to Enforce It.

Trenton, Feb. 1.—With a view of having the Perkins "main stem" tax act of 1906 upheld by the courts, Governor Stokes has announced that the entire resources of the State will be used to defeat the efforts of the railroads in their fight to have the law declared unconstitutional.

Attorney General McCarter has announced that in order to meet the arguments and work of the large number of the legal representatives of the railroads he has retained former Supreme Court Justice Van Syckel to assist him in his efforts to uphold the constitutionality of the Perkins law.

The Attorney-General said he would do all in his power to have the case advanced upon the causes already listed for argument, and if successful in this would use his best efforts to have the court render a decision in the matter at the very earliest possible moment.

The Attorney-General also said that if it was found necessary that he would employ other legal talent in addition to the services of former Justice Van Syckle.

Red Cross Aid for China.

The American National Red Cross is arranging to send 5,000 bushels of wheat for Spring planting to China to help relieve famine conditions there. It hopes to make the shipment at once from the Pacific coast. This step is being taken at the request of American Consul Rodgers at Shanghai, the acting representative of the Red Cross, who cabled last week that "famine conditions are still worse; Chinese officials sending refugees home; smallpox prevalent. Will wheat for spring planting be sent?" The Red Cross announced this week that $17,000 had been collected for the Chinese famine fund, and that of this $5,000 had been abled to Mr. Rodgers for immediate use.

COOPER REMEDIES

In Immense Quantities.

We claim that the sale of them in Plainfield is larger than any other proprietory medicine ever introduced in this city. We are receiving wonderful endorsements of these preparations daily from people who have purchased them from us.

We unhesitatingly say that we have yet to see a case where they have not given complete satisfaction.

To all who suffer from stomach trouble and rheumatism who will call on us we will take pleasure in explaining the nature and remarkable effect of these new medicinal formulae.

WE SELL THEM AS FOLLOWS:

Cooper's New Discovery, $1.00 per bottle, six for $5.00. Cooper's Quick Relief, 50c per bottle.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The arrangement of a good moving picture bill is a task more difficult than that of the arrangement of any other class of entertainment. First of all is required discrimination of a high order, due greatly to the tremendous field of subject matter, of widely diffused differences and thought. It is the master hand that can choose the most popular. Archie L. Shepard makes the claim of doing so, for he has consulted popular taste and the public is its judge, consequently the appeal for their approbation is merely the endorsement of their own judgment. The judgment decides in favor of the people's choice, subjects that interest the many, subjects that appeal to their sympathies, that enliven with comedy or humorous interest come in climaxes to a surmounting laugh or thrill, and leave a lasting after effect. That only is the class of pictures used by Mr. Shepard whose company will be at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

Joe Hortiz, who has been selected as the star of "Our Friend Fritz," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night, is the possessor of the greatest yodeling voice ever heard. It is said by many who have heard him that he surpasses all who have ever attempted that class of lyics. Admirers of vigorous up-to-date melodrama will find in "Our Friend Fritz" considerable to rouse their enthusiasm.

Some of the scenes of "When Women Love," the newest heart interest play, are claimed to have never been surpassed on the stage. One of these is the brilliant lawn fete, in which, in front of the great house, brilliantly illuminated, a brook and a fountain of running water are shown, the water being brilliantly lighted with various colored electric lights. In the course of the fete, a vaudeville entertainment is given on the lawn. The scene is one of the brightest and most attractive to be seen this season at the New Plainfield theatre where "When Women Love" will be given next Tuesday night.

"As Told in the Hills," one of the strongest theatrical attractions of the season, will come to the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night. The principal character is that of Pamnena, the daughter of an Indian chief who was adopted by an emigrant and his wife and reared as their own child. The character is regarded as one of the strongest and most interesting that has been created in any modern melodrama, showing as it does the influences of education and refinement on a typical "child of nature," who has inherited all of the strong characteristics of her Indian father and mother. In the play she appears as the ideal type of young womanhood retaining the best traits of chartcter that she has inherited and combining them with the accomplishments acquired from her life in an American home and an advanced education.

Wilton Lackaye will be seen in his own version of Victor Hugo's epoch-making masterpiece, "Les Miserables," at the New Plainfield theatre, matinee and night, February 12. Mr. Lackaye calls his play "The Law and the Man," which will strike theatre-goers familiar with the work of the great French novelist as being particularly appropriate. In his work of adaption, the actor-playwright has followed with remarkable fidelity and skill the story as told in the five novels which are segregated under the one title. In many instances and really as far as practical for stage use the dialogue is that of Hugo himself. The piece is in a prologue and four acts.

The February Burr McIntosh Monthly.

The color work of this beautiful magazine has always been a source of great admiration of those who have seen it, particularly, as the publishers have been able to get some most unique effects by the use of color. The February number, now on the news stands, is unusually strong in this respect. In its pages of celebrities fine reproductions of photographs are shown of Geraldine Ferrar, Emma Eames, Madam DiCisneros, Madam Jacoby, M. Renaud, M. Delmores and Fernand Sonbeyran, all of the Metropolitan Opera Company. An extremely pretty page illustrates scenes from "Madam Butterfly" as presented by the Savage Opera Company. An interesting illustrated article on American opera singers on the German stages will be appreciated by all Americans who are interested in music. Under the always interesting caption, People of Note, Professor Stoddard, the author, Charles Klein, the famous playwright, the late Samuel Spencer, of the Southern Railroad, Cardinal Gibbons, representing the Church of Rome in America, the late Walter Appleton Clark among the foremost illustrators of the day, and H. H. Rogers, of Standard Oil fame, are prominent. A specially interesting form is printed in a shade of purple, illustrating in text and picture the winter exhibition of the National Academy of Design. Altogether this issue is unusually beautiful as well as extremely varied in its contents.

Augustus Nash is detained at his home on Prospect avenue with an attack of the grip.

Mrs. White and son, of Hartford, Conn., who have been visiting in Plainfield, are now stopping with Mrs. White's mother, Mrs. Williams, of Roselle.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

We live by the joy we give.

Significance is not a matter of bulk.

Good-will on earth is God's will for man.

A week end religion is weak at both ends.

There are no saints without their service.

He who cheers another encourages himself.

There are no single admission tickets to glory.

No man can be free, who holds another in bonds.

Many have found life's crown bending over a cradle.

The dew of heaven is not in the mildew on the sermon.

The path of happiness always leads by some sad one's side.

It often takes a vacant place to bind the family fast together.

Giving is always a poor investment when it is an investment only.

The true servants of heaven are known by an atmosphere of happiness.

The only way to get some folks to forgive and forget is to lend them a dollar.

He who is always looking for a soft place finds one in the slough of despond.

Nothing worth seeing comes from the life that knows nothing of the unseen.—Chicago Tribune.

WARPED WISDOM.

Better not be witty than half-witted.

Uneasy lies the head that wears a frown.

Love your enemies—but not John Demijohn.

To a big-headed man the world is very small.

Heart failure and cash failure often go together.

Too bad that most good eating is bad for one.

Knockers get big audienees, but no gate receipts.

You can have a mighty hot time on a cool million.

The best man at a wedding cannot always prove it.

If you are a gay old dog you have no right to whine.

A cheerful lie is often better than the solemn truth.

Two heads are better than one—especially at kissing.

You can also tell a man by the company he doesn't keep.

The last person to forget a kindness is the one who does it.

When a man makes a show of himself he's not always comedy.

Many a man smacks of freshness, but freshness gets no smacks.

It's a wise Satan who keeps his beard away from the candles.

WISE MAN'S VIEWS.

Here is a little screed of life formulated by a wise man:

I have grown to believe that the one thing worth aiming at is simplicity of heart and life.

That power leaves a bad taste in the mouth.

That congenial labor is the secret of happiness.

That the world is a very interesting and beautiful place.

That meanness, hardness and coldness are unforgivable sins.

That one's relations with others should be direct and not diplomatic.

That pleasure exists, not in virtue of material conditions, but in a joyful heart.

And many other things which seem, as I write them down, to be dull and trite commonplaces, but are for me the bright jewels which I have found beside the way.

PITY 'TIS 'TIS TRUE.

In love, at least, consistency is a fool.

A man is as old as his arteries; a woman is as old as her art.

If she has bad manners, she's poor; if she is eccentric, she's rich.

Man was created first—women have kept him waiting ever since.

Remember that there is no praise quite so sweet as praise that is undeserved.—N. Y. Evening Post.

EASTERN PROVERBS.

Do not unto others that which would offend thee; this is the sum of the law, and every other law alters with occasion.

Thou thinkest thyself alone and reckest not of the ancient wise one sitting in the heart; in his presence thou sinnest who knoweth the evil deed.

Let a man speak what is true, and speak what is pleasing; let him not speak what is true but unpleasing, nor what is pleasing but untrue. This law changes not.

No other reaps the fruit of a deed which a man commits in this world of men; the fruit of every deed which a man commits, he shall reap, and no deed whatsoever goes without its fruit.

In the true light seek thou the little master of the house within, while thou holdest in check the wind blowing before the door and the leader of the senses? Why many words? Through words a man cometh not to vision. Behold the master within the body! Why wanderest thou further in the darkness of errors taught by the books?

After much search in many doctrines the wise have determined the four ways of giving that lead to welfare in this world and the next. To those who fear shall a man give confidence; to the sick, medicine; to those that desire knowledge, he shall give knowledge; to the hungry, food.

NEWSPAPER WAIFS.

Uncle Frank (who has been 24 hours in the house)—Have I told you the story of the rat and the bird, Dulcie?" Dulcie—"Yes; twice."—Punch.

"De man dat thinks he can't make mistakes," said Uncle Eben, "is makin' one of de mos' dangerous dat is, right there."—Washington Star.

Friend—Is the bride you're working for getting to be a good housekeeper? Cook—No, she hasn't learned to keep out of the kitchen yet.—Detroit Free Press.

Rollingstone Nomoss—Can you oblige me with a little help, lady? Mrs. Subbubs—I'm afraid not. All my help left this morning. It's very hard to get help in the suburbs.—Philadelphia Record.

"I got a shock from a 'lectric battery, to-day," said the first hobo. "Gee! It's a funny kind of a feelin'; feels just like taking a bath." "Say," exclaimed the other one, "you must have a great memory."—Philadelphia Press.

Schoolma'am—Now, tell the truth, Johnny Jones. You know what will happen if you tell a lie, don't you?" Johnny Jones—Yes, ma'am. I'll go to the bad place. Schoolma'am—Yes, and that isn't the worst of it. You'll also be expelled from school."—Chicago Daily News.

JUST REMARKS.

Men are disposed to use many useless words in the writing of a letter.

When a woman reaches middle life she increases her demand for attention.

A woman first fiercely resents criticism and afterward considers the force of it.

Men are disposed to base an opinion on how it will effect their own interests.

Some men fall into the habit of praising themselves without being aware of it.

When a woman engages in church work she makes enthusiasm overrule judgment.

The majority of men have no hesitation in assuming their ideas in politics to be absolutely correct.

The love correspondence of a woman is disgested and remembered no matter how foolish it may seem to others.

To a man there is a pleasure in being spoken of as charitably inclined. —Philadelphia Bulletin.

DILKS AND GADDIS GET ANOTHER THREE

HANDED TO THEM BY WOOLSTON AND CUNNINGHAM.

Gaddis and Dilks had three games handed to them in the bowling tourney, last night, practically on a silver platter. They came from Charlie Woolston and Sam Cunningham, the latter rolling the poorest he has done at any time since he learned the game. His best score was 141 while he is generally looked upon as a 200 man. Woolston's best was 182 and in one game he dropped to 145. Gaddis rolled poorly and if the opposing team did as it should have done, they could have easily overcome Dilks' average of 182.1.

Mullen and Conklin played two sets of games last night and started off by taking three straight from Causebrook and McLaughlin. Conklin was the "candy kid" with an average of 186.1 and his partner was close behind with 184.1. In the second series with Nash and Skelly later they lost two out of three, one of them by a single pin.

The scores:

Gaddis	136	190	150
Dilks	181	201	201
vs.
Woolston	145	182	167
Cunningham	141	136	133
	286	318	306
Causebrook	163	187	190
McLaughlin	184	163	144
vs.
Mullen	157	213	183
Conklin	195	163	201
	352	376	384
Mullen	186	135	195
Conklin	175	169	160
vs.
Nash	170	170	199
Skelly	192	185	145

BOWLING

In the standing for the Central Journal Bowling League trophy, it was stated last night that the Elizabeth Club and the Parks are tie for first place. The Parks have won 16 and lost 5 games, while Elizabeth has won 13 games and lost 8. There is a difference of three games to the good for the Parks, but the average is nearly the same. Tonight these clubs will roll on the Park Club alleys, when the home team hopes to increase its lead.

INTER-Y. M. C. A. MEET.

Plainfield and Passaic Associations to Contend February 21.

Arrangements are being made for an athletic meet between the Plainfield and Passaic Y. M. C. A.'s. The teams will contend on February 21, at the local gymnasium.

The events will be of a character to try out the best there is in both associations. The winning team will be awarded a shield, and there will be medals for individual winners.

JUNIOR FIVE FAST.

Defeat Heavier Leal's Combination In a Lively Game.

Keeping up their winning gait, the five rapid youngsters on the Y. M. C. A. junior basketball team defeated the Class of 1909 team of Leal's school at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon. The score was 13 to 8.

The Leal's players were markedly heavier than the juniors, and a less stout-hearted and cagey a combination than the youthful association stars would have succumbed to fright at the appearance presented by the school lads. The juniors played a swift and admirable game, overcoming as hardy a combination as they have ever faced.

Line-up and score:

Y. M. C. A.	Leal's.
Robbins	Campbell
Vanderbeek	Lawrence
forward.
Richardson	Gluck
centre.
Manley	Duke
Vail, Lindzey	Adams
guard.

Goals from field, Robbins (3), Vanderbeek (2), Campbell, Duke, (2); goals from fouls, Robbins, Richardson, Vail, Campbell (2).

BURGESS TAKES LEAD.

High Dives Into First Place in Y. M. C. A. Competition.

By winning the running high dive event, last night, Burgess pushed Banks out of first place in the all-round Y. M. C. A. athletic championship competition. He leads by a few points.

Burgess dived five feet seven inches, which is only two inches shy of McNaughton's local record. McNaughton's big dive, which is practically a national record, was made at Newark. Stutsman dived five feet five inches into second place. Banks and Douglass were tied for third with five feet 3 and one-half inches.

Log Cabin Gun Club Meets.

The Log Cabin Gun Club met at the Casino, last night, to consider plans for the coming year. The old officers were re-elected and it was decided to hold several special events during the season for prizes. This club, organized two years ago, has been steadily growing in numbers and has been very successful. The club has grounds and a clubhouse near the Plainfield Country Club and every Saturday during the spring, summer and fall shoots are held there.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian church will hold an entertainment on Monday night, February 18. Home talent will present the programme.

Prepartory services will be held at Warren chapel tonight and the Lord's Supper will be observed on Sunday morning. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor, will be in charge.

In connection with the Epworth League meeting in Vincent chapel, tonight, there will be a social. All the young people of the church and congregation are invited.

Just bear in mind that the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church will hold its annual turkey supper on Thursday and Friday nights, February 7 and 8, and that Kenneth Stuart's orchestra will render popular selections.

CLOSED PORTALS.

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., will meet Wednesday night and initiate six candidates.

There will be initiation and several applications received for membership at the meeting of Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., tonight.

Martha Washington Council, No. 23, D. of A., will hold a dime social on Thursday evening, February 7, at the home of C. S. Bye, Chatham street.

Crescent Company's Dance.

Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R. K. of P., gave its annual reception and dance in the rooms of the Camera Club last night. It was largely attended and proved an enjoyable social occasion. The committee in charge comprised William Baker, Harry L. Keen, Fred Douglas and John H. R. Hall.

Y. M. C. A. Circus.

New talent is being added to the Y. M. C. A. circus programme daily. It was announced this morning that B. G. Hanson, well known locally as a juggler, would appear. Tornello, the wire-walker and juggler, will also appear. The circus will be held February 11 and 12.

—Neuman Brothers recommend the White Label canned goods handled by them as being the best to be found in the market. They especially recommend whole asparagus and fancy Maine corn.

WELCOME TO STOKES

paid a compliment to Governor Stokes, adding that his name should be dear to the hearts of all, for he has given the best years of his life for his State and he knew it to be the prayer of everyone that his life be spared for many years of service. He then referred to the fact that Somerset county furnished a signer to the Declaration of Independence in the person of Dr. John Witherspoon, at one time president of Princeton College, and he described his spirit of independence in quoting from the "Old Farm," a story by the late Andrew Mellick, of this city. The Senator declared the American to be a distinct type of citizen and he paid tribute to the thousands of adopted sons who have come here and given their lives for the country. New Jersey had taken a step in the education of foreign born and he considered that the State has a duty to perform in preserving the nation, the sanctity of the home and the ballot.

In presenting the last speaker, Governor Stokes, Mr. McCutchen referred to him as a "modest little gentleman." Turning to the chief executive he said, "I am the ruler for this evening and you are the subject." Mr. McCutchen briefly described his association with Governor Stokes, when the two with J. B. Betts formed a commission to revise the school laws, and he said that the willingness of the Governor to admit an error, he considered to be the finest trait and evidences of a great man.

As Governor Stokes arose to speak, the entire assemblage stood up and greeted him with applause. It was at the outset that he said that it was a pleasure to come to Union county, a county the home of an ex-Governor, who has no further troubles, the home of a United States Senator who is perfectly comfortable at this time, and he was glad to visit the home of a unanimous Mayor.

"You have the spirit of growth," continued the Governor, "and now you want to absorb Mayor Smalley and the toastmaster of the evening. I am willing to sign the matrimonial papers, although I never signed my own. Still, I think it would be a good way to get my hand in. The United States has grown like the farmer who wanted to annex only the land adjoining his own. You can put England sixty-nine times on the map of the United States, without any danger of her slipping into the sea. However, territory never made a nation. It seems as though God intended the United States to play the important part in the world's history.

"The Panama Canal will bring that point 10,000 miles nearer to New York. As Senator Beveridge has said that a ship starting for the Orient will be greeted by the American flag in Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines. The resources of this country are adequate for the growth. Four single days' earnings of the American people will pay for the Panama Canal, and it begins to look as though Gladstone's words that we are becoming the workshop of the world are coming true.

"Throughout the world we see American products, American enterprise and we have ships second to none. The American people are a free people, with every opportunity to reach the highest places. We lead in the peace negotiations, being an important factor in the peace tribunal, where forty-seven matters of dispute have been arbitrated, notably the Japanese and Russian differences and the Venezuela controversy."

Governor Stokes closed his interesting talk by giving a graphic picture of the work of the United States in Cuba, the Philippines. He referred to the fine public school system, a united country of 80,000,000 people and he said that with mighty hopes for the future and with perfect reliance in Him who rules above, the country could march on with confidence and courage. As the Governor closed his speech, the orchestra began playing the "Star Spangled Banner," while the audience rose and joined in the chorus. This was followed by an informal reception when all were given an opportunity to meet the Governor and other speakers.

It was announced early in the evening that State Councilor Frank R. Sharp and Dr. Grafton E. Day, who were expected to speak, were detained, the former by illness, and the latter by business. State Vice Councilor J. M. Thompson, of New Egypt, represented the councilor, but did not speak. During the evening an excellent programme of music was given by the Vivo Orchestra, Martin A. Korff, leader.

The committee which arranged the banquet and attended to all details follows: A. D. Honeyman, chairman; Walter C. Walker, secretary; T. E. Currin, Jr., treasurer; H. C. Runyon, Dr. R. D. PERSONAL.

Ralph L. Morrow, city editor of The Daily Press, is detained at his home on East Fifth street by illness.

A slight improvement has been noted in the condition of John Doud, of Duer street, who has been very ill.

Wilbur R. Dyson, of Winsted, Conn., has returned home after spending a few days in Plainfield with friends and relatives.

Mrs. William H. Teeple, of Trenton, and her sister, Mrs. Lewis D. Hall, of this city, are visiting their brother, William Liable, of Dunellen.

Fred Armstrong, of Duer street, who has been detained at home by illness during the past two weeks, has sufficiently recovered to be able to sit up a little.

Governor E. C. Stokes, who spoke at the Junior banquet in the Casino, remained in town over night as the guest of Senator Ernest R. Ackerman. He and Mr. Ackerman went to Trenton this morning on the 9 o'clock train.

CENTRAL OFFICERS HONORED.

Vice President Besler and Gen. Supt. Huntington Presented With Badges.

Badges of honorary membership in the Veteran Employes' Association of the New Jersey Central were recently presented to Vice President and General Manager W. G. Besler and General Superintendent Huntington, as per resolution adopted at the last annual meeting of the association, held at Lake Hopatcong.

The badges are in the form of the official button of the association, suspended from a bar, containing the word "honorary." They are of solid gold and suitably inscribed.

Messrs. Besler and Huntington are the only honorary members of the organization, membership in which is exclusively confined to such employes of the corporation as have been in the continuous employ of the New Jersey Central since 1876, thirty-one years.

The honor conforred upon the officials in question speaks in the most convincing terms of the reciprocal feeling which exists between the rank and file and the management of the Central.

The presentation of the badges was made by Messrs. Haines and Phipps, of the Executive Committee of the association.

Fierce Blaze in Harrisburg.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 1.—More than $1,000,000 worth of damage was done here by a fierce fire that broke out at 2 o'clock this morning, and which burned steadily for eight hours before the firemen could get it under a semblance of control. The block containing the Grand Opera House was completely destroyed, as was also the Park Hotel. The Security Trust Company's building, the Columbus Hotel, the Bijou theatre, the George Harris cigar store, the United Telephone Company's building the building of the Harrisburg Gas Company and Boshan's photograph studio were partially gutted. All these buildings are located near Third and Walnut streets.

Ground Hog Due Tomorrow.

Tomorrow is the day when the ground hog rouses up to prognosticate the weather for the next six weeks. If he sees his shadow he goes back to his lethargy for that length of time and winter weather continues.

CURRENT VERSE.

The Sabbath Bells.

The old man sits in his easy chair
And his ear has caught the ringing
Of many a church bell far and near,
Their own sweet music singing.
And his head sinks low on the aged breast,
While his thoughts far back are reaching
To the Sabbath morns of his boyish days
And a mother's sacred teaching.

A few years later and, lo! the bells
A merrier strain were pealing
And heavenward bore the marriage vows
Which his manhood's joys were sealing.
But the old man's eyes are dimming now
As memory holds before him
The sad, sad picture of later years
When the tide of grief rolled o'er him;

When the bells were telling for loved ones gone,
For the wife, the sons and daughters,
Who one by one, from his home went out
And down into death's dark waters.
But the aged heart has still one joy
Which his old life daily blesses
And his eyes grow bright and his pulses warm
'Neath a grandchild's sweet caresses.

But the old man wakes from his reverie
And his dear old face is smiling,
While the child with her serious eyes keeps on,
The Sabbath hours beguiling.
Ah! bells, once more ye will ring for him
When the heavenly band shall sever
The cord of life and his free soul flies
To dwell with his own forever.
—Gil W. Barnard.

In Peace Secure.

I will build me a cot on the mountain side
Away from the toiling town,
Where the sunbeams lure and the air is pure
And the winds come sweeping down;
Where the much-loved birds in their leaf-roofed halls
Will herald my morning in,
And my days shall be and my nights shall be
As a world that has no sin;
Where this life's fierce cares and its wild unrest
Cannot reach my sun-garbed day,
And the whole of my time shall be the rhyme
And the theme of an artless lay.

I will poise me a cot on the mountain's brow
Where the eagle whirls his flight,
Above the vale with its gentling tale
Of a life that is lived for right;
Where the joys of sublimity linger around,
Giving rest to the overcrushed soul—
As the drooping lark sings on its low-lying wings
Ere it runs to its coveted goal;
Where the heat of ambition, the glitter of shows,
The falsehood of friendship or love;
There forever must cease to ruffle my peace
Or darken my pathway above.

The Tie That Binds.

I am sure that death is a pleasant thing—
I am sure it is sweet to lie
Alone, unmoved from spring to spring
As year by year goes by,
And I would go to that happy bed,
For my tired spirit's weal—
But there is a heart if I were dead
Whose love I could not feel.

And if I were sick in body and soul
And nothing on earth could cure—
If my doom were sealed beyond control
And the wreck of my life were sure;
If close to the edge of the grave I were pressed
By the wrath of the powers above
I would still refuse that longed-for rest
That I still might feel that love.

The years are long and the miles are long
Between me and that love divine,
And the heart that beats for me leal and strong
Will never beat close to mine,
But in spite of the miles and all the years
And all that the world can give
Of blows and sorrows, of sighs and tears,
I can feel its power—and live.
—Cleveland Leader.

Jennifer's Lad.

Sweet Jennifer came calling me
Along the shining beach.
"There's green upon the hawthorn tree,
There's bloom upon the peach.
O, April's found the upland larch,
The hazel in the hollow."
But louder was the snare drum's "We must march, march, march,"
And clearer called the bugle: "Will you follow?"

Young Jennifer came seeking me
With love upon her lips:
"O, all kind angels keep the sea,
And fortune guide the ships.
The autumn winds have rent the ...h,
The south has won the swallow;"
But clearer beat the snare drum, with its "March, march, march."
And sweeter sang the bugle: "Will you follow?"
—Marjorie L. C. Pickthall, in the Metropolitan Magazine.

The Pines.

These are the whispering pines,
And the selfsame song so low,
Where under the lash of God
I walked one year ago!
O aisles of murmuring shade,
When it seemed that hope had died,
And the black night filled the world.
How low to me then you sighed!

To-day, how the earth o'erruns
With rapture and joy and spring!
How golden the sunlight falls
Where the dark pines sigh and swing!
But thanks to the grief that wanes.
And the hope that wakes again,
My soul is as light as a bird's—
But the black pines sigh with pain!
—Arthur Stringer, in Smart Set.

The One Man Out of Ten.

Nine men toil while one man plays,
Nine men serve one all their days;
Nine men beg what one may give,
Nine men die that one may live.

One man laughs while nine men sigh;
One succeeds where nine men try;
One man wins the love he craves,
Nine men to pretense are slaves.

One man hopes while nine despair;
One usurps what nine should share;
"Some time," nine men weakly say,
Boldly one man says, "To-day!"
—S. E. Kaiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

The Prayer.

Earth o'er her plains and mountains hath unrolled
A royal carpet all of red and gold,
Whereon November, on his exiled way,
Like some doomed sultan may bow down and pray.
—Thomas Walsh, in Everybody's.

Heartache.

The heart that goes on laughing
And the lips that sing and sing
That the way before them's rosy
And the world is always spring,
And never half so merry
And never half so wise
As the heart that keeps on laughing
Though an ache within it lies!
—Exchange.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Two swelled heads are worse than none.

The art of living consists in not being a dead one.

A woman is seldom a heroine to her 16-year-old daughter.

It's as easy to annoy grown folks as it is difficult to amuse a baby.

Lots of women claim to be man-haters, but they can't prove it.

Many a man's credit isn't good because he is unable to make good.

The worst thing about a bore is that it's almost impossible to insult him.

Many a man becomes weary from trying to dodge people who make him tired.

An average woman judges the worth of a picture by the beauty of the frame.

No girl is really in the spinster class until she begins to get angry when called one.

Show us a man who thinks he knows it all and we will show you the personification of ignorance.

When a woman neglects to put her hands to her back hair occasionally she hasn't much left to live for.

Oyster soup as served by some restaurants is probably so called because one occasionally finds an oyster in it. —Chicago Daily News.

Every state will be delivered from its calamities when by the favor of fortune, great power unites with wisdom and justice in one person.—Plato.

WISDOM'S WHISPERS.

A man's vanity is shown in the style of neckwear he affects.

Man's accomplishments are best shown after a good dinner.

Most men take kindly to a story which has a flavor of the unsavory.

Women delight in telling how much they influence the actions of others.

To a woman there is a feeling of satisfaction in being considered clever.

A man's knowledge often brings upon him troubles he would like to have avoided.

Men like to be able to convey a piece of information heretofore unknown.

Tell a woman a business secret and the chances are she will tell it in a distorted form.

The woman who professes to have a distaste for society usually is the most eager seeker therefor.

Few women like to be regarded as deserving of censure, no matter what they do.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

MUSINGS OF THE GENTLE CYNIC.

Don't wear out your welcome. It's hard to get another.

No man can make a mistake without learning something.

No man can serve two masters such as dyspepsia and optimism.

Some people believe everything they hear, and take the rest for granted.

The easiest way to flatter a girl is to talk about the hearts she has broken.

Some men never succeed because they are afraid of doing more than their share.

It doesn't do much good to grasp an opportunity unless you know what to do with it.

Some men seem to get a heap of melancholy satisfaction from being misunderstood.

Necessity is the mother of invention, but the children don't always turn out well.

REPTILE TO BE DREADED.

South American Snake Whose Bite Is Quickly Fatal.

It it more than 20 years since the deadly South American snake known as bushmaster, of which a specimen has just reached the Zoological gardens at London, was last exhibited by the society.

For obvious reasons it is difficult to obtain exact measurements of a live serpent, but the newcomer appears to be about nine feet long. It is evidently partial to moisture, for it has taken possession of a stoneware pan filled with damp moss, which had been placed in the cage for its benefit. The ground color of its skin is yellowish, and its markings are in the form of dark triangular patches.

The scheme of coloration is bold and renders the creature very conspicuous. This combination of black and yellow is usually present in poisonous reptiles and may thus be taken as a signal of danger. Not only does its large size render the surucucu—to give it its Brazilian name—a most dangerous reptile; its poison fangs are enormous and its bite is quickly fatal. Fortunately for its neighbors this deadly monster is nowhere common.

Where De Quincey Went to Church.

St. Peter's church, Manchester, England, which is shortly to be pulled down, is the church which De Quincey attended as a lad and to which there are some entertaining references in "The Confessions of an Opium Eater."

The first rector was De Quincey's tutor, and he possessed apparently a stock of 330 sermons which the pupil confessed became to him "a real instrument of improvement." He only heard half of them, because he attended only the morning services; but he says "Those same 330—2 sermons (lasting only through 16 minutes each) for me became a perfect palaestra of intellectual gymnastics, far better suited to my childish weakness than could have been the sermons of Isaac Barrow or Jeremy Taylor." De Quincey gives his impressions of the opening of the church, which took place when he was in his tenth year. That is now 111 years ago.

First Use of Ice Cream.

Though the ancient Greeks and Romans used ice for table purposes to get through the hot months of summer, they knew nothing of "ices." These were introduced into France from Italy about 1660 and were known at first as "fromages glaces," iced cheeses, although they were made of strawberries and apricots, and contained not a drop of cream. From 1762 the use of "glaces" in the plural was sanctioned by the French academy, but not before 1825 did "une glace" force its way into recognized acceptance. "Ices" are referred to from time to time in the eighteenth century in English people's letters from abroad. "Iced creams," however were known as early as 1689, and by the middle of the eighteenth century "ice cream" figured in cookery books.

Divorce-Law Suggestion.

A clergyman was railing against divorce.

"We ought to have the divorce law that was enforced in ancient Greece," he said. "If that old Greek clause was tacked to every separation, I am persuaded that divorces would fall off 60 or 70 per cent.

"This law was that, when a man got a divorce he could not, under any circumstances, marry another woman younger than his ex-wife.

"An innocent law. A brief law. Not much to look at. But how many, many divorce suits would be nipped in the bud if all husbands knew that, after the separation, they could not marry younger women than the wives they had cast off."

High Prices in Japan.

This is a time of high prices in Japan. The cost of everything has advanced enormously. The rates of five or ten years ago are recalled with regret. Rents and wages have advanced proportionately. Dwelling houses that could be obtained for 45 or 50 yen ($22.50 or $25) a few years ago now cost 90 or 100 yen, and the wages of domestic servants are approximately double what they were formerly. Taxes have been enormously increased—the income tax is 250 per cent. higher now than it was before the Russo-Japanese war—and the tobacco monopoly has exactly doubled the cost of even the most ordinary cigarette.

Sailor Knew His Business.

Capt. Moriarity, of the British navy, who has just died in England at the age of 91, had a great deal to do with the early attempts to establish telegraphic communication between England and America. When the first cable parted in midocean he proved his value, instantly taking the ship's bearings. So confident was he of the accuracy of these bearings that when, some time later, the vessel returned to the same point he declared that the ship was "over the spot." This proved to be correct, for almost simultaneously one of the Great Eastern's officers shouted: "We've hooked it!"

Explaining It.

"This talk amout millions o' dollars fur the Panama canal gits me," remarked Si Slocum. "Thet's a power o' money fur jist a canal."

Mebbe," suggested Rube Robbins, "they're going ter have the towpath asphalted. Thet runs into a heap o' money."

SUPERIORITY OF THE MULE.

Lowly Animal Has Much More Instinct Than the Horse.

The mule is less nervous than the horse and therefore loses less energy in useless fretting. In fact, one of the chief characteristics of the mule is his ability to take care of himself under all circumstances, says Farming. Much of the apparent shirking which is charged against the mule is an inborn tendency to husband his strength and make every effort count. The result of this instinctive care on the part of the mule is that he is able to turn out more work than would be possible for a horse of the same weight under the same conditions.

The mule instinctively avoids holes, sharp obstacles, barbed wire fences and varous other forms of danger which are not so successfully avoided by horses. It is a matter of common observation that in instances where mules run away they seldom injure themselves to any serious extent. In mining, mules are quite superior to horses for the reason that they seem to understand the requirements and dangers of the work more clearly than horses.

MEANS MONEY FOR SOMEBODY.

Mrs. Blinxly's One Objection to Link Sleeve Buttons and the Moral.

"Mrs. Blinxly tells me," said Mr. Blinxly, "that she wishes they'd wear the old style of sleeve buttons, not links.

"The old style buttons, going through the button holes in such a manner as to make the ends of the cuff lap, made the cuff round when worn and so made it present a uniform wearing surface; whereas link buttons, tending as they do to flatten the cuff, tend to break the cuff at the bend in the back, made sharper as it is by the flattening of the cuff, while sticking out there as it does and so brought in chafing contrast with the inner side of the coat sleeve the cuff wears out sooner than a uniformly rounded cuff would do.

"That's what troubles Mrs. Blinxly. She doesn't object to the link button as such, but because it makes it cost us more for shirts. I tell her not to worry; we can't expect to have everything come our way. The link button may be bad for us, but anyway it's good for the jeweler and the shirtmaker."

HAD THE YOUNGSTER SCARED.

Boy May Have Doubted, But He Took No Chances.

Shrill whistling by a boy on a lake-bound car was stopped last night by a remark addressed to the conductor after other means to check the "warbler" failed. The boy's whistling greatly annoyed all the passengers.

The conductor said to a passenger in so low a tone that the whistler could not hear him: "Isn't it a pity that there is no rule to stop a nuisance of that kind?"

"Watch me fix him," said the passenger, and then he remarked aloud: "I'd have just as big a mustache as yours if it hadn't been for the fact that I was continually whistling when I was a boy. But I didn't know at the time that whistling prevented hair growing on the upper lip."

That boy was about 17 years old and he had just a suspicion of fuzz on his upper lip. He stopped whistling.—Worcester Post.

Darkest Pittsburg.

In three small adjoining towns not far from Pittsburg visitors have often noticed remarkable irregularity in the numbers of the houses. On one dwelling would be seen No. 12, on the next No. 210, on the next No. 417, on the next No. 110, and so on. The cause of this confusion was brought to light the other day when a woman from one of the little towns made a purchase in a city store and requested that the goods be delivered at her home, naming the street in which she resided.

"What is the number of your home?" asked the clerk who had made the sale.

"We have no number just now," said the purchaser. "We moved on April 1 and forgot to bring our number with us."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

For Bald Pates Only.

A baldheaded physician, as he brushed a few flies from the white and polished dome of his skull, said:

"I used to be dreadfully subject to colds even in the summer. I had to wear a black skull-cap all the time. The minute I took it off I began to sneeze and wheeze.

"But now for a year I have not worn a skull-cap, and I have not once had a cold. Why, I could go and stand bareheaded in a snowstorm without any ill effect.

"My immunity to colds comes from this: Every morning I put my head under the cold water spigot, and let the cold water run for a minute on my bald crown. This is a refreshing thing, and since I began to do it I have never had a cold."

Beasts Live Out Their Days.

One of the Smithsonian scientists calls attention to the fact that the duration of the lives of the lower animals differs from that of men's lives in being far more uniform.

While human beings die at all ages between infancy and senility, among the lower animals, on the contrary, all individuals of the same species live to very nearly the same age, unless killed by violence.

AMBER OF SANTO DOMINGO.

Found In Considerable Quantities—Conditions Under Which It Occurs.

It is an interesting fact that Santo Domingo is one of the few places in the world where amber occurs in any considerable quantities. As is well known, the bulk of the supply used in the arts comes from the neighborhood of Konigsberg, on the Baltic seacoast.

There it occurs in the lower oligocene, and appears to have been deposited originally in glauconitic beds of a clayey nature, which was afterward eroded by wave action and the amber distributed, though much of it is taken from beds in which it was originally entombed.

Amber is simply fossilized rosin, derived apparently from certain coniferous trees. The conditions under which it occurs in Santo Domingo do not appear to differ substantially from those on the Baltic seacoast.

It is found near Santiago City, associated with lignite, sandstone and conglomerates. These beds probably belong to the oligocene formation and are found containing amber at a number of places on the north coast, as well as on both flanks of the Monte Cristi range. It also frequently occurs in the streams flowing through these beds.

The amber is usually in ovate lumps, ranging from the size of a pea to a man's fist, often flattened, dull on the exterior, being covered with a kind of brownish crust. None of these deposits has been studied scientifically, although several abortive attempts have been made to operate them for commercial purposes.—Cassier's Magazine.

HELPED STEAL HIS OWN HOG.

Mean Trick Successfully Played on Maine Farmer.

A well-to-do farmer of Gardiner, Me., was awakened late one night about a year ago by some one loudly pounding on his door. When he asked what was wanted he was informed that a lone man was taking a hog to town in a sheep cart, and in some way piggy had escaped. Would the farmer be so kind as to assist him to reload piggy.

In a few minutes the farmer came down, and made short work of loading piggy into the sheep cart. The other man, with many thanks, resumed his journey, and the farmer went back to bed.

The next morning the farmer rose early and began doing his chores. By and by it came piggy's turn to be fed, but piggy was gone. A large gap in the fence explained his absence.

Then it dawned upon the farmer that he had got up in the night and helped steal his own hog.

Ideas of the Creation of Man.

Indian mythology is quite as beautiful as Biblical lore. Bury your prejudices and read what the aborigines of America say of the creation. The angels Gabriel, Michael and Israfil were sent by God one after the other to bring, for the purpose of creating Adam, seven handfuls of earth from different depths and of different colors (which may account for the various complexions of mankind); but the World, being apprehensive of the consequences and desiring them to represent for her to God that the creature he designed to form would rebel against Him and draw down His curse upon her, they returned without obeying God's command. Whereupon God sent Azarali on the same errand, who executed his commission without remorse; for which reason God appointed that angel to separate the souls from the bodies, being therefore called the Angel of Death.—N. Y. Press.

Night Working Hens.

"I have the smartest flock of hens in Kansas City," said a man who lives on East Fifteenth street the other day.

"Lay boiled eggs, I suppose," ventured his friend.

"No, sir, they don't. But they have learned the best time to work and ought to have credit for it."

"Learn it from you?"

"Well, maybe they did—you see," he continued, "I work nights, and when I come home on the two o'clock owl car this morning I was surprised to see my flock of hens darting about under the arc light in front of the house, catching bugs that were attracted by the light. They may have been waiting for me, for soon after I entered the house they returned orderly to their roosts. Today they were sleepy and didn't leave the henhouse until afternoon."—Kansas City Star.

Light on Ancient Sinai.

Sinai was known as the "turquoise land" in very ancient times, and Dr. Flinders Petrie believes that it was the first mining center in the world. In his recent book on the subject Dr. Petrie tells of the various expeditions sent to Sinai by the Egyptian government. At the head of the party was the "commander," or "bearer of the seal of the god," the Pharaoh. The official staff consisted of "masters of the house of metals," or assayers, scribes and secretaries, to make inventories of the output of the mines.

Goodness Undigested.

The simple savage who had just bolted a missionary, and had a fit of acute indigestion, tried to take the matter philosophically.

"Another good man gone the wrong way," he remarked with a wan smile.—Baltimore American.

URGES LEGAL ACTION AGAINST COUNTY BOARD

F. DeL. Hyde Says Somerset's Freeholders Discriminate Against Borough in Spending Money.

QUOTES THE FIGURES

Asserts That Citizens Should Be Treated Better Even If They Have to Appeal to the Legislature.

Asserting that North Plainfield has been grossly neglected by the Somerset county Board of Freeholders in the expenditure of moneys, Francis De L. Hyde, one of its largest taxpayers, made formal protest to the Borough Council last night. In a lengthy communication based on facts and figures obtained by two men at his personal expense, he declares that legal steps should be taken to bring about a change and that if the citizens cannot secure their rights in any other way, the Legislature should be appealed to in order to have taxes distributed in a fair and proportionate manner.

The communication was in line with what Mayor Smalley said in his annual address to the Council last month and it was the opinion then that something should be done. The executive again commented on the matter last night and Mr. Hyde's statement was placed in the hands of the committee on Laws, Ordinance and Taxation with instructions to act.

The communication from Mr. Hyde was as follows:

To the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield:

Gentlemen:

The gross disproportion between the amount of county taxes paid by property owners in this borough and the amount expended by the Board of Freeholders for public improvements within the limits of the borough has long been the cause of indignant protest by our taxpayers, but if such protests have had any effect upon the Board of Freeholders beyond exciting their amused indifference and their assumption of the attitude of "what are you going to do about it," it has escaped my notice. Perhaps the most striking disparity is to be found with respect to the expenditures by the Board of Freeholders for county road improvements. Taking the years from 1897 down to May 10, 1905, the total expenditures by the Board on county roads, as shown by the official reports of the County Collector, amounted to $337,935.73, of which there was expended during those years upon the county roads located within the Township and Borough of North Plainfield only $10,788.91. On the basis of taxes actually paid by the taxpayers of this Borough and Township our share ought to have been more than four times as much; and on the basis of population, our share ought to have been more than five times as much. Hillsborough Township, with less than half the population of the Township and Borough of North Plainfield, has had expended by the Board of Freeholders upon its roads during these years nearly eight times as much as we have in proportion to tax valuations. Out of the total number of miles of road built at the expense of the county during these years, namely, approximately seventy-three miles, we had built not exceeding two and one-half miles.

Accompanying this communication, are tables showing the several amounts expended during each of the years referred to in the several political divisions of the county and the percentages which such several expenditures bear to their population and net valuation of taxable property respectively, and a map of the county on which are graphically shown by zigzag lines in red the location of all the county roads built during said years. These documents speak for themselves and reveal an abuse of the power lodged in the Board of Freeholders so great as to shock every man's sense of justice and equity. If such abuse of power is subject to correction by the courts, your Honorable Body, I respectfully submit, ought in the interests of the public welfare, to initiate such legal proceedings as will be effectual in righting the wrong. If the statute under which the Board of Freeholders has made such an unjust and inequitable apportionment of public moneys among the several political divisions of the county gives the Board power to make any apportion-

MAY AMEND COUNTRY CLUB CONSTITUTION

TWO PROPOSITIONS TO BE VOTED ON AT ANNUAL MEETING THURSDAY.

Two amendments to the constitution of the Plainfield Country Club will be voted upon at the annual meeting to be held at the Casino Tuesday night. The first relates to nominations. Heretofore the nominations made by the nominating committee have been sent out with the notice of the annual meeting, and every member of the club has thus known in advance the names of the regular nominees. But there has never been any provision for equal publicity with respect to independent nominations. Under the existing rules, other candidates can be nominated and elected at the annual meeting without previous notice.

There are 390 voting members; but twenty members constitute a quorum. Usually, when only routine business is to be transacted, there is barely a quorum at a meeting. The existing rules make it possible for a very small minority of the voting members to control the elections. The only way a large majority of the voting members, if satisfied with the nominations, can be sure that the regular nominees will be elected, is to attend the annual meeting. The proposed amendment simply requires that independent nominations shall be filed with the secretary in advance of the meeting, so that he can send out another notice. In this way, if there are two tickets in the field, all voting members will have notice of the fact.

It is believed to be only fair, in a club where less than a majority constitutes a quorum, to require that all members shall have notice in advance of any minority independent ticket.

The second amendment is for the purpose of enabling any member or regular guests of the club to have meals at the clubhouse on Sunday, provided he occupies a room there as a boarder. It does not permit such boarders at the club to invite others there on Sunday as their guests. Under the existing rule, a person living at the clubhouse must pack up and move out at 12 midnight on Saturday and cannot return until Monday.

COULDN'T FIND SMALL BOY'S SISTER FOR HIM

POLICE WILL SEND TEN-YEAR-OLD BACK TO LITTLE WASHINGTON.

Arthur Lanning, the ten-year-old Washington, N. J., boy, who wandered into the care of the police after an unavailing search for a sister who was supposed to live here, yesterday, was still at the station house this morning. The sister, whose name he said was Mrs. Edward Backer, could not be located by the police. Arthur will be sent back home on the 2:12 train.

Arthur made no attempt to conceal the fact that he had "sneaked away." He was also frank as to the reason.

"My father do be an awful bad man," he said. "He do be drunk most all the time, and beats me a lot. No, he don't beat my ma. She do beat him. And she do be a good ma, too. But pa do be a bad pa. Pa do work in a factory, but he do get drunk lots of times and don't go and the factory people do say they will put him out."

Arthur financed his trip himself. He went to Phillipsburg by trolley, from there to Somerville by train, and completed the trip by trolley. "I did open my bank to get the money," he said. He giggled as at a joke. "Ma didn't see me. I did take a dollar'n a half. There do be fifty cents left. Wish I had it, 'cause the cars did use up all I took."

Arthur said the sister he was looking for is named Myrtle Annie. Her husband works at "a place where they do raise lots of turnips and such things in a glass house, to sell." He said there were four other children, and that the family lived with one of the sisters, Mrs. Grace Nixon, at 88 Taylor street, Washington.

Chief Kiely telegraphed to the Boy's father, Stewart Lanning, yesterday afternoon. He had received no answer up to noon today.

J. McCauley, Bum.

James McCauley, 29 years old, was sentenced to sixty days in jail by Judge Runyon this morning. He was arrested last night for drunkenness. His occupation on the police records is down as "bum."

CITIZENSHIP BY FRAUD

U. S. District Court Alleges Plainfielder Secured Papers By False Testimony.

PLACED UNDER ARREST

New Law Covering Applications Much Harder Than the Old Way—Requirements Hard to Fill.

County Clerk James G. Calvert received notice yesterday morning from Henry L. Stinson, United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, that citizenship papers had been withdrawn from Gaetano Picozri, of this city, because of fraudulent testimony in the procurement of the papers. Picozri obtained his papers on June 29, 1904. They were granted by Judge Vail. The witness for Picozri was Giovanni Ignagio, also of this city. It appears that false testimony was given as to the length of residence of Picozri in the country, and on becoming aware of this United States District Attorney Stinson took action.

Picozri was placed under arrest and his papers were taken from him. County Clerk Calvert received them yesterday morning with instructions to expunge them from the records of the county, so that no duplicate could be made. Picozri made an affidavit before District Attorney Stinson, admitting that there was fraudulent testimony given at the time he obtained his papers.

It is believed that Picozri was caught in an effort to obtain a passport to Italy. In applying for the passport, and answering questions then, he made statements that conflicted with the records on his citizenship papers. There have been about half a dozen caught in Union county in the same way. After swearing falsely in order to get citizenship papers some years later the men applied for passports. In answering questions they forgot what they had sworn to when they took out papers, and so were tripped up. The offense is punishable by a severe sentence.

Under the new law, which has been in effect since September, it will be much harder to become a citizen by any other than legitimate means. Though the law has been in force since September, it first went into practical effect yesterday, when the regular blanks reached the office of the county clerk from Washington. From September till yesterday no applications for citizenship were received because the old law was no longer in force, and the blanks for the new law had not yet come. There were about half a dozen applicants for papers yesterday morning, but none of them could fill the requirements of the new laws. There must be two witnesses for each applicant, and there are any number of questions in detail for which the applicants must be ready. The applicants yesterday morning were not prepared to answer all the questions.

MISS BUCKLEY SURPRISED.

Young Friends Tender Her an Enjoyable Party.

In honor of Miss Florence Buckley a surprise party was given to her at her home on Orchard place, last night. The affair was arranged by Miss Mamie Day and Miss Margaret Townley. A feature of the evening was a flashlight picture taken by Thomas Fay. There was an informal programme of vocal selections by Miss Ida Quinn and Harold Gloak. The home was attractively decorated in pink and green. Following the evening's festivities refreshments were served.

Those present were the Misses Mamie Day, Margaret Townley, Florence Buckley, Sadie Leahy, Marion Haffner, Margaret Buckley, Helen Higgins, Ida Quinn, Stella Maag, Mary Burns, Madeline Seaman, Nora Callahan, Virginia Buckley, Jennie Higgins, May Hughes, May Buckley and Joe Carty, Edward O'Loughlin, Bert Miller, Clifford Cole, George Flatly, William Townley, Jr., Harold Gloak, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Buckley, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fay, Mr. and Mrs. Finnesy, Mr. and Mrs. McClellan and William Jukes, of Frederick City, Md.

Another Grove for Democrats' Fete.

The outing committee of the Elizabeth City Democrat executive committee completed yesterday all arrangements for the annual outing of the Union county Democrats. It had been planned to have the affair take place at Donnelly's Grove, College Point, but owing to the recent death of Mr. Donnelly the programme was changed and the Democratic warriors will now go to Witzel's Grove, Pointview Island. Thursday, August 22, has been selected for the date of the outing and the iron steamboat Sirius has been chartered for the event.

DISAGREES WITH P. P. A.

Policy of the Association Not to the Liking of Former Mayor W. L. Saunders.

RESIGNS AS MEMBER

Explains His Action to President Depew and States Reasons for Taking Exception.

Taking exceptions and disagreeing with the Plainfield Protective Association in its adopted policy concerning certain matters, William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, tendered his resignation as a member at the meeting in the Casino, last night. The resignation was not acted upon in open meeting, but as Mr. Saunders insisted upon resigning there will be nothing left to do but accept it.

Mr. Saunders in resigning as a member of the association, explained his reasons to R. Henry Depew, the president, as follows:

"Since our conversation yesterday and in view of your statement of the policy of the Protective Association, it is plain that our ideas on this subject differ, and I regret very much that under the circumstances I feel that I must withdraw from membership in the Association.

"I fully realize the difficult position you have been in and I know how hard it must be for an association of this kind to please everybody. To uproot error in any community is a task which always involves difficulties and which creates antagonism, and although during several months past I have not in everything agreed with the position taken by the association, yet, as I have been during much of the time incapacitated from active servie and co-operation with you, I have not felt that it was proper for me to make criticisms or to interpose any obstacles in the good work which you started out to perform. I am now, however, brought face to face with a question of principle which seems fundamental. I refer to the action of the executive committee in connection with the report of Mr. Alfred Spice on 'Gas and Electric Lighting Conditions in Plainfield and North Plainfield.' You have confirmed the statement that when this report was laid before the executive committee, the chairman of the committee on lights and trees of the City Council, Mr. Montgomery, was present at the request of the Mayor, and after being asked to turn over to the committee the contract between the city and the electric light company, he was told that his presence was no longer required and no intimation was given him of the substance of Mr. Spice's report until the matter was brought out in the public press, sometime thereafter.

"I cannot assume that the City Council or that any of its committees are either incompetent or corrupt until they have been tried, or until they have failed to act properly upon complaints when laid before them and I hold it to be the duty of the Protective Association and the duty of all citizens who may have discovered errors to lay the facts before the governing body in this community, before taking any other action, either in the public press or otherwise. As the present Council only came into existence on January the 1st last and as Mr. Montgomery, as chairman of the committee on lights was appointed since the present Council was organized, it seems just that we should give him a fair trial and should work with him, not against him, by frankly taking him into our confidence and if we have any reports of experts or any other information against the business under his charge, we should lay the whole matter before him and ask his committee to take action, offering our services and our full co-operation and interest. I cannot agree with you that the Protective Association is in any sense superior to the governing body, as the association is self-constituted and the governing body represents the people elected at the polls. Your statement that 'the Protective Association is the people' cannot be sustained, in view of the fact that the association represents only those who are able to pay the price of admission. As such it can be made a valuable auxiliary but when it attempts to exert supremacy in public affairs it is treading upon dangerous ground.

"Permit me to assure you of my sincere personal regard and my admiration of the zeal and earnest work which you have shown in this organization."

Church Meeting.

The New Market Baptist church held its annual meeting last night. The reports showed excellent conditions in all departments. Every one of the current debts are paid and there is a balance in the bank. The church membership increased during the year. John Nelson and B. De Witt Giles were elected trustees. A social hour followed the meeting.

NOT IMPRESSION MERELY

More Than a Notion in the Opposition to Dryden.

SAYS SEN. ACKERMAN

Must Be Something Stronger Than An "Impression" to Cause the Deep-Seated Objection to Newarker.

Further comment by Senator Ackerman on Senator Dryden's idea as to the extent and the basis of the opposition to his re-election was made public this morning. Referring to the letter sent him by the Prudential head, Senator Ackerman says:

"Senator Dryden states in his letter that it is his belief that it is merely an impression on the part of Mr. Ackerman's constituents that they are opposed to him.

"The opposition to the election of Mr. Dryden is not based on an "impression" or notion or belief held by the popular mind without adequate grounds.

"The members of the Republican party have more than an "impression," a slight or indistinct remembrance of the conditions which made it possible for the serious division of opinion which existed in our ranks last fall.

"It is time the differences mentioned should be closed and called a past incident so that we may all get together and score a triumph in the coming election against our friends the Democrats who are unusually active and aggressive. These things are more than "impressions." They are potent facts. I have never wavered in my support of the Republican party and I believe now as always that it is the staunch and true friend of the people as it was in the days of the immortal Lincoln. This opinion is not an "impression," for it is written deep and legibly across the page of history.

"I think it is fair and reasonable to credit the members of the Republican party who represent the constructive forces of our advance statesmanship, with an ability to think, deeply, safely and wisely. I feel sure that no one man, even with the addition of an attractive personality, could cause a wide split in the ranks by creating merely an "impression." There must be something stronger than that to account for the deep-seated objection on the part of the people. An impression indeed! Are the members of the Republican party like sheep to be led astray by an "impression?"

"No one can successfully dispute that there is a strong desire among the people and the regular voters of the party to have a Senator elected in a way which will meet with popular approval so that the party can be brought together to carry on unitedly the progressive work in this State, which was the marked feature of the last Republican Legislature. Would not a happy result like that create more than an "impression?" Would it not strengthen the party among the people?"

TAKEN TO JAIL.

Bike Thief Transferred to Elizabeth; Acknowledges Uusing Alias.

James Wilson, or William Walters, the young man held for stealing four bicycles, was sent to the County Jail this morning. He was guarded by Patrolman Higgins.

Before he went Chief Kiely asked him about the use of an alias at the Somerville hospital. He acknowledged giving his name as Walters there, but said he did it because he didn't want to figure in newspaper reports and acted on the impulse of the moment. The chief believes the impulses he acts on principally are those to gather up other people's property.

The wheel at Clarence Thorn's shop, supposed at first to be that of M. C. Van Arsdale, was identified yesterday as his by Health Inspector Addis. Wilson-Walters insists that he only took four wheels, and did not get Mr. Van Arsdale's.

A Farewell Surprise.

Several young friends tendered a surprise party to Lawrence and Elmer French, of Washington avenue, last night from 7:30 until 10 o'clock, prior to their departure soon for the South. The young people met at the home of Miss Helen Roberts on Prospect place, and from there proceeded to the home of the surprised boys. The evening was spent in playing games, vocal and instrumental music and later refreshments were served. The affair was planned by Miss Adelia French. Those present were the Misses Helen Ryder, Helen Roberts, Ethel Runyon, Elsie Tier, Adelia French, Ethel Searing and Edson Woodhull, Ralph Martin, William Taylor, Carl Taylor, Elmer and Lawrence French.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk is detained at his home today with a heavy cold and was unable to visit his office as usual.

URGES COUNCILS TO MAKE NEW LIGHT CONTRACTS

BOROUGH FINANCES DETAILED IN REPORT

EXPERTS PRESENT RESULT OF RECENT AUDITING OF BOOKS.

At last night's meeting of the Borough Council, Suffern & Sons, who recently audited the books of the clerk, tax collector and other officials, submitted a complete and concise report of the fiscal year ending December 31, 1906. It went further than is usual under the circumstances and detailed the presumably realizable assets of the municipality and the liabilities. Mayor Smalley had the entire report read for the benefit of the councilmen and it showed them as nothing else has in a long time just where the borough stands in the matter of finances. Part of it will be embodied in the regular report of the clerk prepared for publication.

According to the statement from the experts, the cash balance on hand December 31 was $3,370.76. The total receipts for the year were $81,756.31 and the expenditures $78,385.55. The current assets and liabilities are given as follows: Current assets, cash, $3,370.76; unpaid taxes, $13,527.10; total, $16,897.95; current liabilities, Board of Health, $10; special school tax, $13,329.25; notes payable, $3,500; total, $16,839.25.

Referring to the assets and liabilities, the report says: "Through these it will be seen that if the borough were able to collect all the unpaid taxes standing on its books, they would only suffice to meet the amount still due to the Board of Education for the special school tax and the notes payable at the bank. This illustrates the rigid operation of the new school law which requires of the borough to pay a specific proportion for school purposes of all taxes levied, whether the same be collected or not. The deferred obligations will in the future as in the past be easily met, as their maturity dates makes the burden light."

In the regular business routine, a petition was received from residents of Somerset street asking for the widening of that thoroughfare from Jackson avenue to Johnson's drive. It was signed by Charles Jenser, John Wolf and others owning over two-thirds of the property frontage.

Recorder Dolliver reported that fifteen prisoners had been arraigned before him during January and that $11 in fines had been collected. He also informed the board that he had adopted a docket and index card system in the conduct of the court. On resolutions offered by Mr. McGee $2,000 was ordered borrowed for general purposes and $2,500 if found necessary for Somerset street certificates and Watchung avenue bonds. Patrick McDonough was appointed a call man in the fire department.

PHILIP WEINBERGER RETURNS TO UNCLE'S HOME

FOUND THROUGH NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENT AT BUFFALO.

Philip Weinberger, the seventeen-year-old son of the late Max Weinberger, of this city, who left Plainfield last October to visit his uncle in Chicago, and who was advertised for in last Sunday's New York Herald, has been heard from and this week he returned to the home of his uncle, Moscowvitz Weinberger, at Summit, where he is at present and where he will remain indefinitely.

Young Weinberger was found employed on one of the steamers sailing on Lake Michigan and he had no thoughts of returning home for some time. The lad heard that he was wanted through the advertisement which was copied in Buffalo papers and decided to get into communication with William Newcorn, who represents the estate of the late Mr. Weinberger, whose son is one of the principal heirs.

Now that the son has been found further steps can be taken toward settling up the estate. The lad has always been of a roving disposition and on several occasions has left home for indefinite periods. At one time he worked in his father's clothing store on West Front street, but it is said that he did not like the business, preferring to travel.

Miss Miller's Tea.

Invitations have been sent out by Miss Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, for a tea in honor of Miss Bowen to be given on Tuesday, February 5th, at her home on Watchung avenue.

Mrs. F. W. Iredell, of Madison avenue, is convalescing from an illness that has detained her at home.

P. P. A. Considering Expert Spice's Report, Charges P. S. C. With Giving Only Half the Light Paid For.

ICE QUESTION DISCUSSED

Dealers Said to Be in the Big Trust, But Safe Because Statutes Are Too Weak—Other Worriments Touched.

Pretty nearly all the ills The Suffering Public is heir to were considered at the special meeting of the Plainfield Protective Association at the Casino, last night. The meeting was called for a consideration of the report on lighting conditions, but the members held that off until they had brought the dissatisfaction with the ice dealers, the telephone company, short weights, and soft coal smoke up to date. The session was attended by only 25 members, but it had all the liveliness of the first meeting.

The discussion of the lighting report brought out nothing newer than the statement of Alfred Spice, the expert, contained. The consideration of public lighting conditions was passed on to the city and borough councils, by resolution. The private lighting conditions were left for further action.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, came into the meeting in time to hear the discussion on street lighting, and he gave the Association assurances of his co-operation in the effort to better the service.

Expert Spice was present, and cleared up the technicalities in the report that were not understood by members. Practically the whole of the report was published early in the week. Mr. Spice explained the effect of voltage not adapted to lamps fed by it, making it quite plain that where the candle power of lamps dropped by reason of lower voltage the consumer lost much more than he appeared to gain by reason of decreased current consumption. Mr. Spice suggested that the variation in voltage might be met by dividing the city into voltage districts, and having lamps fitted for the voltage supplied to the people in the various districts. The voltage variation, Mr. Spice thought, might be beter controlled than at present by attention to the switchboard at the proper time.

The P. S. C. was severely scored in the discussion on public lighting. The report showed that the average of candle power furnished the city was 13, just about half of what the municipality was paying for. It was estimated, on a basis of the amount spent for lighting by the city, that Plainfield had been paying the P. S. C. $7,500 a year for light it had not received.

"It is about time public sentiment was aroused to this condition of affairs," said President R. Henry Depew. "It should be met as we would meet similar conditions in our private affairs. If a tradesman were to deliver half the goods he charged us for and we found it out, can you not imagine the heated time that would ensue for that man?"

Mayor Smalley was called upon for a statement by President Depew. The borough executive said he welcomed the investigation, and promised hearty co-operation in remedying the conditions. He had thought the borough was getting pretty good lighting service, and just about what it was paying for, but that would not interfere with his readiness to help in any attempt to better the service. He explained that his satisfaction with the lighting came from recollections of the time when North Plainfield had depended on moonlight or unstable gasolene lamps. He was quite ready to believe that the lights could be improved, and every effort to make them better should be encouraged.

President Depew announced that Mayor Fisk had asked him to bring the result of the investigation before the Council, and he had Secretary H. C. White read the resolution, afterwards adopted, putting the matter up to the municipalities. The resolution authorizes the executive committee to take steps to correct the conditions, and asks the councils of the city and borough to investigate for themselves; offers the co-operation of the association in clearing up the matter; suggests that new contracts with

GOVERNOR TO REVIEW THE SECOND REGIMENT

COMPANY K AND ITS MEMBERS TO RECEIVE MEDALS.

Orders will be issued in a few days for a review of the Second Regiment of the National Guard of New Jersey, to be given for Governor E. C. Stokes, as commander-in-chief of the military forces of the State, in the Second Regiment Armory, Trenton, on the night of Thursday, February 21. Company K, of this city, will take an important part.

This will be the first review of the year, and elaborate plans are being made for it by Colonel Dennis F. Collins and Adjutant John M. Rogers, of the regimental headquarters. At the review the Governor will be attended by all of the members of his staff in full dress uniform and men who are high in the military service outside the Second Regiment will be invited as guests.

The military order of the evening will be a regimental drill in close order, to be followed by regimental parade, salute to the colors and an informal dance. Admission will be by ticket only.

One of the features of this review will be the presentation by Governor Stokes of the various service medals and military trophies which have been won by individuals and organizations of the Second Regiment during the past year.

The presentations to be made by the Governor are twenty-year service medals to Captain John M. Rogers, Captain John W. Stevens, Captain Joseph A. Yard, First Sergeant William R. Grant, Quartermaster-Sergeant Edwin H. Lawyer, Private John D. Brooks and Musicians Albert Winkler, Emil Winkler, Alfred Huddy, Frank H. Sherbaum, William Kirk, Jr., and David B. Naar.

The Collins Medal to Corporal William E. Bond, of Company K, for marksmanship.

Fifteen-year service medals to Lieutenant John A. De Roche, Lieutenant Edward M. Oliver and Commissary-Sergeant Charles F. Sylvester, of Princeton, for marksmanship.

WHO THREW THAT "PUNKIN?"

Helmetta Sleuths Nab Athletic Instructor and Real Count.

Helmetta, Feb. 2.—Policemen Frederick Reid and John Dill, two of the "slickest" of Helmetta's sleuths, were called into Justice of the Peace Brown's office yesterday.

"I want you to run down the man who threw that lemon," ordered the justice. "Remember, you have the whole State of New Jersey at your back in this work. The lemon-thrower must be apprehended at all cost."

And the sleuths went forth into the cold, determined to catch those responsible for breaking up the amateur minstrel show at Spotswood on Saturday night, by throwing a lemon, eggs and hunks of pumpkin on the stage. Helmetta has been smarting under that attack upon some of the leading young men, who were in the minstrel semi-circle, and have severely criticised the local authorities for not arresting the whole of Physical Culture Hall, awhole inhabitants are charged with starting the riot at the show.

"I believe Bernard McFadden's dumbbell lifters have got the cops scared," remarked one youth within hearing of a town official. "They say over there that there will be a splash in Magnolia Lake if any cops come nosing around."

Reid and Dill decided that they would stand a better chance of catching the physical culture devotees by staying right in Helmetta and watching.

Professor Samuel Kleger, the gymnatic instructor, who is charged with throwing the first lemon, came driving into town late last night in a sleigh behind a pretty fast trotter. The sleuths were next in a minute. Reid grabbed the horse and Dill grabbed the professor. Then Dill pulled out a legal paper, and began reading it to convince the professor that he was under arrest. The dealer in muscle lashed his horse, Reid was thrown to the snow-carpeted road, and Dill was left standing with the paper in his hand. He had only read "The State of New Jersey."

The two men gave chase and, with the assistance of others, finally rounded up the professor, and led him before 'Squire Brown, who held a midnight session of his court. Kleger entered a plea of not guilty, and Elijah Soden furnished $200 bail for his appearance before the Grand Jury.

Theodore VonHeimel, who claims to be a real count, and who is taking a course in muscle expansion at the institute, was arrested this morning. He did not resist, and gave bail.

Professor Klegel is crestfallen today. He had never thought of country policemen would ever conquer an instructor in physical culture.

INVENTS MACHINE TO REVOLUTIONIZE POWER.

New Brunswick Man Makes Extraordinary Claims for Device Worked Out by Son.

New Brunswick, Feb. 2.—Philip Weigel, Jr., a local hardware merchant, confirmed today a report that his son, Philip A. Weigel, who is an engineer in the Filtration Department at Philadelphia, had invented an engine that promises to revolutionize the motive power of the world.

Mr. Weigel says that the engine has not been patented yet, and that he cannot reveal the plans until patents are obtained. eH says than an entirely new property has been brought into play, with the result no coal, electricity, gas, gasoline or fuel of any kind is required in operating the new engine. Power, but no light, can be secured from the new device. He says that an engine a foot square would operate a trolley car forever, without the use of a third rail or overhead wires. An engine as large as a barrel would operate a whole factory.

Mr. Weigel thinks that the new machine will be adopted by the government for its warships, and that the railroads and trolley companies will be willing to pay large sums for its use.

He says the engine is not to be confounded with a perpetual motion machine. Such machines, he points out, even if one were patented, could not be stopped when once started, and would be, therefor, impracticable for commercial purposes, while his son's machine can be absolutely controlled by the operator. Owing to its lightness it is especially adapted for propelling airships.

$200,000 RAIDROAD TAX.

Central Pays Big Sum Into the State Treasury.

Trenton, Feb. 2.—The Central Railroad Company has paid into the State treasury upwards of $200,000, being its share of the railroad tax assessed for State purposes at the rate one-half of one per cent.

The Central is the first of the larger railroad companies to make payment, although settlement has already been made by some of the smaller roads.

By virtue of the opinion given by the Attorney-General, made to the State Comptroller Morgan, the railroads are to pay their taxes at the rate paid last year, pending the litigation to test the Perkins' law passed by the last Legislature.

If you suffer from backache,
There is only one way to cure it.
The perfect way is to cure the kidneys.

A bad back means sick kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills are made for kidneys only.

Are endorsed by Plainfield people.

Mrs. Martha Snedeker, of 244 East Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Some six weeks ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills for an attack of kidney trouble that had been annoying me for a long time, procuring the remedy at Randolph's drug store. My main symptoms were severe backaches and pains in the top and back of my head, a stiffness in the limbs —especially my arms, and a sediment in the urine that looked like brick-dust. I had a languid feeling of weakness and depression and physicians did not help me. Doan's Kidney Pills reached the cause of my trouble, however, and that very quickly, and now all those aches and pains I have described have disappeared and the kidney secretions are perfectly normal, all of which is due to the healing virtues of Doan's Kidney Pills and their direct action on the kidneys."

The Judge Uses Forceful Language.

Judge W. B. Simmons, of Fincastle, Va., told the reporter that L. & M. Paint was used on his residence in 1882, and held its color well for 21 years; he furthermore said that 3 years ago he was induced to use another paint and is sorry he did, because the other paint didn't make good. NO COLBY TICKET IN UNION COUNTY NEXT FALL

THAT IS, IF SENATOR COLBY CAN HAVE HIS WAY.

Elizabeth, Feb. 2.—There will be no Colby ticket this year in the Union county Republican promaries of the Senator from Essex has his way. The fight which Senator Ernest R. Ackerman annd Asseblyman Randolph Perkins, have made against the re-election of John F. Dryden to the Senatorship has brought about this result. Mr. Colby has made it known to come of his friends that he will discountenance the placing of a "New Idea" ticket in the field at the Union primaries next fall.

It has just become known to others than those present that at the Republican conference at Trenton Monday of last week Mr. Perkins, explaining the difficult position of Union county's representatives, denounced Senator Everett Colby for his attacks during the campaign, especially in the Hillery debate, for his attacks on men of high character like Senator Ackerman. "We have to fight the Democrats and also the Colbyites. That," said Perkins, "is no way to support the Republican party."

Senator Colby was surprised by the unexpected attack, and, interrupting Mr. Perkins, apologized to Senator Ackerman and others for what had been said in the heat of a bitter campaign.

This did not end the matter, and an agreement has been reached whereby Colby will not only leave Union county alone, but will come over from Essex and help in the campaign to elect a Republican Governor.

Senator Colby, when asked if there would be no Colby party this coming fall, replied that he could not prevent people from putting up tickets at the primaries.

"But," said he, "never forget that we are Republicans and are going to do all we can to build up the party and will work for its success."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Our Friend Fritz," a play of beautiful sentiment and admirably blended purposes, is the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and evening. The scenic effects are unusually handsome and elaborate and the cast composed of capable actors and actresses, several of whom are graduates of the best stock companies in this country.

Some of the scenes of "When Women Love," the newest heart interest play, are claimed to have never been surpassed on the stage. One of these is the brilliant lawn fete, in which, in front of the great house, brilliantly illuminated, a brook and a fountain of running water are shown, the water being brilliantly lighted with various colored electric lights. In the course of the fete, a vaudeville entertainment is given on the lawn. The scene is one of the brightest and most attractive to be seen this season at the New Plainfield theatre, where "When Women Love" will be given next Tuesday night.

One of the highest salaried companies appearing in melodrama will be seen in "As Told in the Hills," which will appear at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night. The play is one that depends on the individual merits of the members of the cast rather than on scenic effects and situations that in real life are improbable or impossible and the excellent acting of the several members of the company meets with deserved appreciation.

"A Wife's Secret," which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, is said to present a charming life picture of human sentiment that appeals strongly to every lover of the emotional drama. It tells a story of absorbing interest, of a young wife's ejection from the home of her husband, because of ungrounded suspicions, and her subsequent trials and hardships, struggling against the insinuations of the world. It is said to be a play that appeals to the heart most strongly, and its characters are all natural and familiar figures from everyday life. The newspapers of other cities where "A Wife's Secret" has appeared again this season, join in pronouncing it one of the most powerful dramas written in recent years, and their decision has been seconded by the public in general, for since its opening over two years ago, it has been attended with most gratifying financial results.

Club Meeting Tonight.

There will be a meeting at the Casino tonight of the men interested in the formation of a club and the purchase of the Casino property. It is expected that the committee of three appointed at the college smoker will also meet the other committees at that time and decide about the plans for a "Universal Club," as proposed at the smoker.

Percy Sandford, of Englewood, who has been spending several days in town with relatives and friends, has returned home.

Miss Edith W. Emmons, of Washington, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Groszmann, of Watchung Crest, has returned home.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT MONROE AVE. CHURCH

WILL COMMENCE TOMORROW AND CONTINUE ONE WEEK.

Beginning tomorrow morning the congregation of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will celebrate its tenth anniversary with a full week of interesting services. In the morning there will be a roll call of the members and special music, and in the evening the pastor, Rev. E. E. Roberson, will preach the opening sermon of the anniversary services, the subject being "What Is the Church?"

Monday night there will be a reunion and fellowship service. All the former pastors are expected to be present and speak, and other local pastors will also attend and take part in the service, to be followed by a social hour. Tuesday night will be devoted to missions. Clarence Titus, secretary of "World Evangelism," of the Elizabeth District Epworth League, will speak on "Mission Study," and John Callahan, superintendent of the Hadley Rescue Mission, of New York, will speak on "Home Mission Work."

There will be a Sunday-school rally Wednesday night. James R. Joy, of the First M. E. church, will speak and there will be special music by a mandolin club. The Men's Club will be in charge Thursday night. This will be "ladies' night." Prof. Isaacs, of the Plainfield Business College, will speak and there wil be a musical programme. Friday night the Epworth League will have charge and Charles Sumner Kembel, of Elizabeth, will give readings from James Whitcomb Riley's works. A soloist will render several selections.

Sunday, February 10, will be the important day of the week's celebration. The anniversary sermon will be preached in the morning by Rev. Dr. John Hamilton Howard, author of the recent popular book, "In the Shadow of the Pines." The anniversary will close with the evening service. The church historian, N. Mansfield Smith, will read a historic sketch of the church covering the past ten years and there will be an address by one of the veterans. The public generally is invited to attend any and all of these services. No effort will be made to raise money at any of the services. The anniversary committee consists of Walter M. McGee, Edwin H. Beckman and N. Mansfield Smith.

URGES LEGAL ACTION

ment it sees fit to make without regard to, and in contemptuous defiance of any principle of fair play and the equal rights of our citizens and taxpayers, then the statute which permits such gross injustice ought to be changed by the law-making power.

Speaking for myself and on behalf of many other taxpayers who have urged me to communicate with your Honorable Body, I respectfully urge that the whole matter be referred to the counsel for the Borough with instructions to institute legal proceedings to secure our rights, if any such proceedings are available, and if not, then to prepare a bill for presentation to the Legislature now in session by, the terms of which Boards of Freeholders shall be commanded to pay some regard to the equal rights of taxpayers and to the principles of fair play in the expenditure of public moneys raised by tax which the constitution and laws of the State require to be assessed upon all property "by uniform rules and according to its true value."

Respectfully submitted,

TRINITY MISSION BAND OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY

INTERESTING MEETING MARKS COMPLETION OF TENTH YEAR.

The election of officers, the presentation of interesting reports and an address delivered by Mrs. J. S. Allen, secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed church in America, combined to make the tenth anniversary meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church, an interesting and profitable one, yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance and after the meeting all remained to enjoy a tea served by members of the band.

The meeting marked the retirement of Miss Lillian A. Force as president. She has held the office two years, and an expression of appreciation for her faithful services was given at the close of the meeting. The band met at 2:30 o'clock and elected these officers: President, Miss Mabel Wilson; vice president, Mrs. F. S. Cutter; recording secretary, Miss Edna Cole; corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff; treasurer, Miss Cora Miller.

The various committees submitted reports for the year, showing the progress made in home and foreign mission work. The mite boxes were also returned and the amount received will be announced later. At the general meeting held later in the afternoon, Miss Force conducted the opening exercises and presided. In view of it being the tenth anniversary of the band, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, corresponding secretary, submitted a report for the past nine years, while Miss Edna Cole, the recording secretary, gave the report for the tenth year.

Mrs. Woodruff's report showed that the band was organized ten years ago with forty-nine charter members. The late Mrs. E. B. Horton, whose place has been taken by Mrs. J. S. Allen, was present at the first meeting. Mrs. C. P. Leggett, who originated the idea of forming the band, was elected the first president. During the nine years thirteen barrels and boxes of clothing and other useful things were sent to foreign and home mission fields. The band has supported a native girl in India and the total value of the boxes, barrels and contents sent out amounted to $445.

Miss Cole's report for the past year showed that four new members were elected, making the total membership forty-nine, thirty-eight active and eleven honorary.

At this time Mrs. Theodore Mantz and Miss Etta Yeager favored the audience with a duet, accompanied on the piano by Miss Force. Later Miss Mantz sang a soprano solo and Miss Leitheusser gave a piano selection, which were greatly enjoyed.

The report of Miss Cora Miller, treasurer, showed the receipts for the year to be $269,64, including a balance of $210.33 at last report. The present balance in the treasury is $123.20.

This concluded the business of the afternoon and Mrs. Allen was then introduced. She is a delightful speaker and held the close attention of all while she told of the home mission work being carried on. She declared that there is no greater field than America for mission work and she congratulated the band upon its accomplishments. She gave an interesting description of the work in Kansas, Iowa and especially among the Mountain Whites of Kentucky where she recently made a visit. Her picture of the scenes and incidents in the lives of the Mountain Whites elicited the warmest enthusiasm for this work. Her words were encouraging to the members of the band and at the close Mrs. Allen was thanked heartily for her talk.

A social hour was then enjoyed and tea was served. Mrs. F. S. Cutter and Mrs. Corra Ryno poured tea and four young women attired in foreign costume, acted as waitresses. Miss Cora Gano represented Africa, Miss Margaret Leggett, India; Miss Helen Smith, China, and Miss Alice Vroom, Japan.

At the next meeting of the band the new president will announce the committees for the coming year.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Martha G. Voorhees.

Mrs. Martha G. Voorhees, widow of Uriah D. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, died yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dutcher, on Grove street, where she had resided during the past three years, and where her daughter, Miss Rose Voorhees, lived. Death was due to a complication of diseases. Mrs. Voorhees had been ill for ten years, during which time she suffered six paralytic strokes.

Mrs. Voorhees was the daughter of Henry Veghte, and was born at Griggstown, Somerset county, sixty-nine years ago. At the age of twenty years she was married to Uriah D. Voorhees, and afterward moved to New Brunswick, where she resided for nearly forty-five years. She was a faithful member of the Second Reformed church, New Brunswick, and although after coming to Plainfield she was unable to attend services, she was commended to the fellowship of Trinity Reformed church, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. Schenck and other members frequently visited her. Since last October, Mrs. Voorhees was confined to her bed.

Mrs. Voorhees is survived by one daughter, Miss Rose Voorhees, a brother, Luther Voorhees, of New Brunswick, and a sister, Mrs. Ann Eliza Bound, of Franklin Park. The funeral services will be held from the Second Reformed church, New Brunswick, Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, and Rev. Dr. Hutton, the pastor, assisted by Rev. Joseph Horner, a retired Methodist preacher, will officiate. Interment will be at Griggstown.

Mrs. George Leland.

Mrs. Mary Leland, aged 70 years, wife of George Leland, died last night at her home on West Second street, following a long illness from a complication of diseases. During the past two weeks she failed rapidly and knowing that the end was near word was telegraphed to her son, Fred Leland, whose home is in Boulder, Colorado, and he arrived here Wednesday. Mrs. Leland had been a resident of Plainfield all her life and had a large acquaintance. She is survived by a husband, two sons, Fred and George Leland, and two daughters, Mrs. Emma Leland-Bird and Mrs. Hall. Mr. and Mrs. Leland would have been married fifty years next August. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock from the late home.

Caruso's Voice to be Heard.

In order to accommodate the public, and in anticipation of a big rush to hear Caruso at the diner given by the men of Church of the Holy Cross in the parish house, Monday night, February 11, tickets have been put on sale at Armstrong's pharmacy. Lovers of grand opera in Plainfield will have an opportunity to hear the celebrated tenor in a way that will be pleasing. It is said that the celebrated "Warner Safe Biscuit" which will be a part of the menu, won the first prize at thirteen different State fairs last fall.

Organ Recital Numbers.

These numbers will be rendered at the organ recital at Grace church, tomorrow afternoon at 4:15 o'clock, by William E. MacClymont: "Concert Overture," Hollins; "Rhapsodie No. 3," St. Saens; "Sonata," Van Eyken.

Funeral Hour Changed.

The funeral services of Miss Elizabeth Crary Morris will be held Monday morning at 10:30 instead of 11 o'clock, at the home of her nephew, Edward Morris VanBuren.

Rev. and Mrs. Joseph O. McKelvey, of Grandview avenue, have returned from their trip to Florida. Mr. McKelvey will be in charge of the services at Warren chapel, tomorrow.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The Good Government Club held a meeting last evening. Several important matters were discussed. The ball committee made a report of the ball held in Washington hall recently. The net receipts amounted to a little over $30. The committee appointed to look after the fire protection of the town reported that a meeting was held at Norman's Hotel. A chairman and secretary were appointed to call meetings of said committee. A time was set to call a meeting of the committee and citizens of South Plainfield for the purpose of organizing a volunteer fire department, but the meeting was not called on account of the absence of the chairman. The borough matter was brought up and the citizens at the meeting instructed the law committee to amend the bill and add a referendum to it inside the proposed borough limits. This was all the business to be transacted and the meeting was adjourned by President Hamilton.

The regular services will be held at the Baptist church tomorrow as follows: 10:30 a. m., "Scattered Disciples Preaching the Word;" 7:45 p. m., "Progress by Resistance." Pastor preaches at both services. Christian Endeavor meeting at 7:00 p. m., topic, "What Endeavor Means," leader, Charles Jackson. This is the consecration meeting of the C. E. society.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. VanCourt, of Oak Tree, was taken critically ill yesterday with kidney trouble and Dr. P. B. Cregar was summoned about midnight, last night, and relieved the little one. Today she is slightly improved.

Morris Higgins has the contract to cart coal for the Middlesex Water Company.

Frank Van Nest is visiting relatives in town over Sunday.

RUSSELL BROTHERS PELTED WITH EGGS.

Irishmen Try to Prevent Their Appearance in the Orpheum, in Brooklyn.

As John and James Russell appeared on the stage in the Orpheum theatre, Brooklyn, Thursday night to present their sketch "The Irish Servant Girl," they ran into a shower of eggs. Not all the eggs were fresh. The marksmanship was poor and the actors dodged all the eggs, but the back curtain and stage were well spattered and women in the audience complained afterward that their dresses were ruined.

Percy G. Williams, manager of the theatre, had an intimation that trouble was coming, and detectives were scattered through the audience. They at once arrested twenty-two men out of a crowd of 150 which had purchased a block of seats in the left side of the house and who they identified as having thrown the eggs. These men were taken to the Bergen street station, where a hearing of inciting a riot was made against them.

Hisses and catcalls, accompanied the eggs, and women in the audience became frightened at once and started to leave the theatre. The curtain was rung down and Mr. Williams went forward and assured the audience there would be no more trouble. He said his mother was born in Ireland, that he had the highest regard for Irishmen and would not permit an act in his theatre that would offend them.

The Russells continued their act. Both said they had no intention to reflect in any way on the Irish race, that they both belonged to Irish societies, and that Mrs. James Russell was working in an Irish fair in Elmhurst, L. I.

Patrol wagons were called from the Bergan street, the Classon avenue and the Adams street stations, and the men arrested were taken to the Bergen street station. They said they represented Irish-American societies which objected to the caricature of their race. The men in the party who were not arrested cheered those who were placed in the patrol wagons, and followed them all the way to the station.

Mr. Williams said a committee of twelve men had called on him Monday, and protested against the Russell Brothers' act. He had promised to cut out any objectionable part, and invited the committee to the matinee. The committee made no objection to any part of the act, except to say it thought the Russells raised their skirts too high in a dance.

Of the twenty-two men arrested, ten gave their residence as Manhattan, and one Long Island City. They will be arraigned in the Myrtle avenue court today. The Russell Brothers have appeared at the New Plainfield theatre several times.

WOULD GROW CAPE COD CRANBERRIES IN JERSEY.

Oystermen Rejoice in Probable Work During Dull Season for Bivalves.

Millville, N. J., Feb. 2.—An industry that promises to afford employment to many in this section is being opened in the lower portion of Cumberland county, one mile northwest of Port Norris. This is the cultivation of Cape Cod cranberries. Joseph Tice, of Port Norris, has purchased 100 acres of ground, and for many weeks has had fifty men clearing the place.

The land is swampy and an ideal spot for the raising of cranberries. The genuine Cape Cod plants are being imported to this section, and the cultivation of the berries will be patterned from the original home of the berries.

Several Philadelphia and New York capitalists have been watching the experiment, and are prepared to enter into the propagation of the Cape Cod berries in Jersey as soon as the venture proves a success.

To the oystermen this means much, for in a season like the present one, when many scores of boats have been laid up, owing to the poor condition of the oysters, it means employment and greater income in many families.

SCHOOL FATHERS CRITICISED.

Elizabeth Residents Demand Music Books for Pupils.

Elizabeth, Feb. 2.—The Board of Education is being criticised in many quarters for procrastination in the matter of purchasing new music books needed in the schools, in spite of the fact that the purchase was recommended by the special committee of the board after the recent investigation of certain alleged indiscretions on the part of Thomas Wilson, music instructor.

The special committee, after practically exonerating Wilson of the charges made against him, recommended the very system which it had been charged, was unduly favored by the music instructor. In spite of this recommendation, and the fact that the change can be made for a little over $200, the books have not been bought. The mater is being greatly agitated by friends of Wilson, who wish to see him finally vindicated by the adoption of the system he recommended, and will be brought before the board at its meeting this week.

—Only a few more seats left for the Y. M. C. A. Star Course Tuesday, February 5. The famous Lotus Glee Club and Minnie Marshall Smith will appear.

PENSIONS FOR ALL VETERANS OVER 62.

Law Passed By Congress Last Week Will Add $4,000,000 to Appropriation.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The House of Representatives passed last week the new pension bill and it will now become a law, as the Senate passed it January 11. It provides pensions for all veterans of the Civil War, who served ninety days, and of the war with Mexico, who served sixty years, provided they have reached the age of 62 years or more.

In presenting their applications they are required to make proof of the facts, according to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may provide. In case an applicant has reached the age of 62 years, the pension shall be at $12 per month; 70 years, $15 per month, 75 years or over, $20 per month; and such pension shall commence from the date of the filing of the application in the Bureau of Pensions. As a veteran advances in age he will receive a higher pension.

This new law will not prevent veterans from receiving a larger pension under some other act but no man can receive a pension under this act and under another act also. On these points the law reads:

"And nothing herein contained shall prevent any pensioner or person entitled to a pension from prosecuting his claim and receiving a pension under any other general or special act; provided, that no person shall receive a pension under any other law at the same time or for the same period that he is receiving a pension under the provisions of this act; provided further, that no person who is now or shall hereafter receive a greater pension under any other general or special law than he would be entitled to receive under the provisions herein shall be pensionable under this act."

It is estimated that the law will add about $4,000,000 to the pension appropriation this year and from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 a year when all veterans entitled so to do have availed themselves of the benefits of the act. It is believed that only 3,000 of the Mexican War veterans are now living. Some of them are now on the pension rolls at rates ranging from $20 to $30 a month. They are all beyond the age of 75, and therefore under the new act will receive $20 a month.

The War Department computed that there were 782,722 survivors of the Civil War on June 30, 1906, and that 675,000 were then on the pension rolls, leaving about 100,000 to come under the new act.

About a year ago President Roosevelt made an order granting to Civil War veterans about 62 years of age a pension of $6 a month. The new act, of course, supersedes that order.

PIG INTERRUPTS EUCHRE.

Prize Gets Loose and Bowls Over Would-Be Captors.

Edgewater, Feb. 2.—A big fat pig interrupted the players at a charitable euchre party Wednesday night and made the women folks scramble on the tables and other places of safety, while the porker rushed about the auditorium of the Town Hall, upsetting the men trying to capture it. The presence of the pig was due to the fact that some gentleman, imbued with the spirit of charity and levity, donated the "razor-back" for one of the prizes to be contested for, and it was set to one side of the hall, near the other prizes. When all were intent on the "what's trumps?" query, the hog got loose.

Then it was that men dropped their cards and their dignity, and women dropped their prudishness and tried to climb to "isles of safety," and not a few of the young men followed suit, for be it understood that this town is made up of wealthy residents, whose business is located in New York. Mony of the gentlemen have a goodly knowledge of "bulls" and "bears," but only a few have ever met a real hog face to face.

Finally, after much screaming and squealing, and after Postmaster M. C. Garry, Freeholder Clahan and Sergeant O'Brien had been bowled over by the pig, it was captrued by Neil McMullin, who afterward won it, placed in its pen, and put on the outside of the fall. When te animal had been safely ejected from the hall, the ladies were assisted to alight from their perches, and play was resumed.

WILL JOIN BAY CITIES.

Elizabeth, Feb. 2.—Supporters of the proposition to build a bridge between Bayonne City and Elizabeth are greatly encouraged by the attitude the Hudson Assemblymen displayed in interviews with the legislative committee of Union County's Board of Freeholders on their visit to Trenton Wednesday night. The Union men who took in the Assembly meeting at Trenton were Nathan R. Leavitt, county collector; Noah Woodruff, J. Logan Fay, Henry Krouse, Thomas J. Pierson and Benjamin King.

The Hudson County Assemblymen declared to them that they were a unit in favor of the proposed bridge, and that one of them, probably Valentine Holsapfel, of Bayonne, will introduce a bill at this session allowing the two counties of Hudson and Union to build the bridge if they choose. A conference will be held in Elizabeth at an early date, between interested parties of this city and Bayonne, to consider the probable cost and other phases of the question.

THE DANGER OF INCOGNITO.

One May Hear Opinions the Reverse of Flattering.

Ever since the "30s" the pretty little Orleanaises have danced into the small hours of the morning without a clue to their partner's identity, for with wig and mask completely covering the head, the masker's incognito may well defy detection. Indeed, even if the lady were able to recognize a masker through some peculiarity of his speech, she would be careful to keep her discovery to herself. Frequently, I am told, extremely droll incidents have resulted from a crafty expedient resorted to by married men to keep their wives in doubt regarding their whereabouts on the night of the ball. This usually consists of an agreement between two maskers to call out their respective wives.

Not long ago two gentlemen who had formed a similar pact danced through the night without either of the ladies suspecting their identity, when one masker—a doctor—pleased with the way the scheme was progressing, and seeing his wife glide past on the arm of his partner's husband, chose to add an additional convincing note to the deception by exclaiming, "Why, there goes the doctor's wife!"

"Yes," replied his pretty partner, examining his wife with a hypercritical eye, "isn't she an awful mess?"—Harper's Magazine.

HIS ACTION WAS OPPORTUNE.

Brutal Husband Starts in the Millinery Business With Great Success.

"What are you doing?" harshly demanded the brutal husband, abruptly entering the room.

"I'm just going to trim this 49-cent hat I bought yesterday," replied the trembling wife.

"Extravagant woman, you will ruin me with your everlasting bargain hunting!" he exclaimed, enraged, and, seizing the hat, he crumpled it in his hands, trampled it under foot, and, finally flinging it into the corner of the room, strode away.

Weeping, the wife stooped to pick up her insulted property, but her tear-stained face was irradiated by an ecstatic rapture as her eyes fell upon it.

"O!" she exclaimed in delight, "now it is the exact shape of that $40 French hat I saw yesterday, and I never could have gotten it that way myself. All it needs is a couple of blue roses and a bunch of lavender buttercups."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Russian Night Train.

A third-class carriage in Russia is not at all uncomfortable, if you have a thick blanket, because every passenger has a right to the whole length of a seat.

Three people can sit on the seat, but only one can lie on it. The other two lie in berths above you or below you, as the case may be. The seats are made of wood and if you have a thick blanket and a pillow they are quite as comfortable as any other bed.

When you first step into the carriage it is like entering pandemonium. It is almost dark, save for a feeble candle that sputters peevishly over the door and all the inmates are yelling and throwing their boxes and baskets and bundles about. This is only the process of installation; it all quiets down presently, and everybody is seated with his bed unfolded, if he has one, his baggage stowed away, his provisions spread out, as if he had been living there for years and meant to remain there for many years to come.

Poultry in Germany.

During the last eight years the interest in raising pure breeds of poultry in Germany has increased and poultry shows are frequent. At an exhibit in Achen during February all kinds of poultry and game birds were shown, but not an incubator brooder, and even catalogues were absent. If American agents with exhibits of incubators, brooders, etc., were to visit these poultry shows they should be able to make many foreign sales. An international poultry show will be held the third week in April in Loerrach, Baden; in May there will be an exhibit in Baden-Baden and plans are being made for a large exhibit in Karlsruhe Baden, next September.

German statistics issued a few months ago show that in 1902 the total value of fowl and egg imports into Germany was $98,556,000. There is a great field here for the introduction of American poultry breeding supplies.

Electrical Divining Rod.

An electrical divining rod, claimed to operate more certainly and scientifically than the ancient and dishonored twig, has been devised by Adolph Schmid, a Swiss engineer. It seems to consist essentially of a glass covered box inclosing a coil of insulated wire, in which a slightly magnetized needle is free to rotate over a graduated dial. When the apparatus is placed over subterranean water, with the axis of the coil in the magnetized meridian, the needle, it is asserted, oscillates more or less rapidly from two to ten, and even up to 50 degrees.

All Hers.

"I certainly was shocked," said the stern visaged woman, "to hear that you were married. I wouldn't marry the best man on earth."

"He never gave you a chance!" retorted Mrs. Bridey, "because he assures me I was the only girl he ever proposed to."—Catholic Standard and Times.

GOLD NUGGET A BEAUTY.

Alaskan Mine Has Probably the Largest Ever Found.

It is not an uncommon thing to see men who have enough greenbacks to choke an elephant, but it's not often that one meets a man with a gold nugget large enough to make even a horse sick if he had to try to eat it without having it run through a quartz mill. There is a man in Los Angeles, Cal., however, who has the nugget, and he is the Klondike king, Clarence Berry, who has come from Alaska on a visit to his brother. The nugget might be likened to a man's hand with the palm turned upward, for it is over six inches long, almost four inches wide, is an inch thick at the thickest part, and "weighs" $1,510.

There are few men who can dig such chunks of gold out of their own mines, but Clarence Berry is one of these lucky miners. He is one of the pioneers of the gold mines of Alaska, and having been one of the first men to get to the various rich diggings, his energy and perseverance have been rewarded with a large amount of gold. How much no one knows but he, and he won't tell.

WHAT SHE WOULD SAY.

Young Teacher Evidently Had Her Opinion of the Principal.

A certain young teacher in one of the schools in Springfield, Mass., was recently more or less annoyed by the attentions of one of the masculine sex who holds a position of principal in the same school. There was in this young woman's room a pupil who was very dull and stupid.

One day the gallant principal was asked by the admired one to give his permission to have the child removed to some other room, thinking possibly he might be benefited by the change. The suggestion did not meet with the principal's immediate favor, and he remonstrated.

"Suppose," said he, "you and I were married and we had a child that nature was not overkind to, and we sent him to school. Suppose the teacher refused to have him in her room, saying he was too stupid and dull to learn, what would you say?"

"I should say he took after his father," was the quick retort.

Overtaken by Retribution.

William H. Berry, state treasurer of Pennsylvania, was talking in Harrisburg about graft.

"Grafters seem to thrive at first," he said, "but retribution overtakes them in the end. It is like the two newsboys and the bad half-dollar.

"Two newsboys had a bad half-dollar and after discussing for some time the best way to get rid of it they decided to try to pass it off on a theater.

"So they took their places on a cold night in the long line before the gallery door of a popular theater and the first one held the bad coin in his hand. It was their idea that in the hurry and confusion the ticket seller wouldn't take time to examine the money handed to him.

"And they were right. When the first boy reached the box office the man accepted the half-dollar without question and in return handed out a ticket and a quarter change.

"The second boy, grinning with joy, then handed forth a dollar for his own ticket. He got the bad half-dollar and a good quarter in change."

Art of Nature.

She had just turned from the blackboard where for five minutes she had been demonstrating a "sum" which to her very youthful pupils seemed difficult.

"Now, children, are you perfectly sure that you understand?"

There was a murmur of assent.

"Do any of you wish to ask a question?"

In the back of the room a small hand was raised aloft. The teacher, looking into the earnestly eager face, felt that glow of satisfaction which we all experience in assisting a budding intellect.

"What is it, Annie? What do you wish to know?"

"Miss M——, are your teeth false?" demanded the earnest little seeker in a shrill treble.

Twain and the Office Boy.

In his early days Mark Twain used to take his "copy" round personally to various editors, which gave rise to a rather good story of him told recently. His dislike of office-boys is very great; indeed, if there is a being on earth he cannot tolerate it is the average office-boy. A short time ago he strolled into a big publishing house in New York, and asked to see the editor.

"What name shall I give?" asked the office-boy.

"Mark Twain."

"What's your business?"

The pertinent question irritated Mark, but he only smiled sweetly, and said:

"Tell the editor I wish to ask his hand in holy matrimony."—Black and White.

The Teacher Declined.

A first-year pupil was absent from school one day last week. The next day she appeared at school and handed the teacher a note explaining her absence, written by her mother. The following is the explanation:

"My Dear Miss C—Please excuse Helen for absence, as she fell on the sidewalk and hurt the side of her nip, and by doing the same you will greatly oblige.

Mrs. S——."

MAROONED ON DESERT WITH NAVAJO INDIAN

Colorado Girl Keeps Lonely Vigil Beside Sagebrush Fire, Even Welcoming Howls of Coyotes.

Denver, Colo.—Camped all night on the desert with a Navajo Indian. That is what Miss Grace Gertrude Dalton, a young nurse, of Durango, Col., did, and she smiles as she tells the story.

"Oh, it was nothing," said Miss Dalton. "You see, I was just going from my uncle's trading store for a visit with relatives, and our team gave out, and we had to camp out over night on the way—the Navajo was taking me on the trip. The Indian took me in a buckboard. It was 60 miles across the desert of sagebrush and sand. At noon the team gave out, and sundown caught us a long way from Ojo Alma.

"We had reached a small stream when the Indian made signs that we would have to spend the night there. We got out of the buckboard, and the Indian hobbled the ponies. He gathered a lot of sagebrush and started a fire. After awhile we went to bed, the Indian on one side of the fire and I on the other, rolled up in blankets. I never slept a wink. It was the longest night I ever spent. When the coyotes began to howl close to us I was glad to hear them, for it somewhat broke the monotony of waiting out there on a lonely desert, miles and miles from any person, with only an Indian for company.

"I wasn't afraid, and if I had been it would not have helped matters. There was no danger. I would sooner trust the average Navajo Indian than lots of the white men. They are fine fellows, and can be trusted in any case."

Miss Dalton is a buxom blonde, pretty, and about 22 years of age. With an aunt she visited the St. Louis World's Fair, accompanied by a tall, handsome young Navajo, whom they took along as a servant. Miss Dalton and the young man attracted much attention on the streets of St. Louis.

CRACKED HER MAMMA'S RIB.

Buxom Girl Hugs Parent, Who Sustains Injury as a Result.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Overjoyed at seeing her mother, whom she visited in anticipation of Christmas, Miss Daisy English, buxom and pretty, crushed the mother to her breast in a fervid embrace and broke one of the mater's ribs.

The mother, Mrs. Emma English, who is a rather frail little woman, swung free of her daughter's embrace and complained of a pain in her side, which a physician diagnosed quickly as a fracture of the lower rib.

Miss Daisy lives in this city with a sister and had not seen her mother, who lives at Northfield, for several weeks prior to the visit. Mrs. English saw her daughter coming up the front footway of the little cottage yard and ran to the door to meet her.

The hug was given with fond force on each side, but Miss Daisy failed to take account of her fresh young strength until she heard the verdict of the surgeon.

Hacked Off His Own Arm.

Lynchburg, Va.—With his left hand and forearm crushed and held firmly in the mouth of a shredder, Dr. Charles McCullough, a farmer and physician who lives in Buckingham county, forty miles from Lynchburg, cut his arm off below the elbow with his pocketknife.

After freeing himself he directed the farm hands with him in taking up the broken arteries in the arm, thus saving his life. Afterward he walked some distance to the house. Later he was brought here and the arm amputated again above the elbow.

The fact that Dr. McCullough was left handed makes the performance all the more wonderful. The farm superintendent caught his arm in the same machine, tearing it off, two weeks ago. This caused blood poisoning, from which he died.

Girls Make Pins.

The making of common, everyday pins is an interesting process. The wire is fed into a machine that cuts the pin the right length and puts a head on it. Then they are thrown into a fluid that brightens them, and fed into a hopper by girls, who regulate a machine that puts the pins into the paper, ten rows at a time quicker than you can say "Jack Robinson."

PARKS TAKE TWO FROM THE ELIZABETH BOWLERS.

Local Five Now Has Lead of Four Games in Central Journal League.

Last night's bowling match between the Park Club and the Elizabeth Club was an important one in the Central Journal Bowling League tournament, as the Parks had a harder schedule for the last two matches than Elizabeth. If the latter had taken two games, the Park's lead would have been cut down to two games, and the difference in the strength of opposing teams in final matches would have made it probable that Elizabeth would have tied the Parks or won out.

By taking two games from Elizabeth, last night, the Parks increased their lead to four games, having won 18 and lost 6, while Elizabeth and Westfield are tied for second place with 14 games won and 10 lost. There was a big crowd out and lots of enthusiasm. The Parks bowled in splendid form, almost pulling out the first game after it had gone against them over eighty pins on account of a lot of splits and cut outs. The second and third games were never in doubt, the Parks picking up everything in sight and winning easily. Daniel did the best work, making high score, 207 in the third game. The next match will be rolled at Westfield Thursday night, February 7. Last night's scores:

BAPTISTS THE CHAMPIONS

First Church Boys Win the Sunday-School Meet.

LONG LIST OF EVENTS

Medals For the Individual Winners —Main Trophy Must Be Won Thrice to Become School Property.

The first Sunday-school athletic meet held in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, last night, under the auspices of the Sunday-school Athletic League, of Plainfield, was a success although the entries were not as large as expected. The Sunday-schools in the league include Park Avenue Baptist, Warren chapel, Trinity Reformed, First Presbyterian, Hope chapel, First Baptist, Congregational, First M. E. and Grace Episcopal.

The First Baptist church had the largest representation, with Warren chapel second, and the former carried off a majority of the honors, the representatives from Warren chapel being handicapped by their size and age. There were fourteen different events and the work of the young athletes was very creditable throughout. In each case the winners were presented with bronze medals and the First Baptist Sunday-school received the silver cup offered by Chas. W. McCutchen, president of the league, its representatives winning the greatest number of points. This cup must be competed for at three different meets.

Great enthusiasm was displayed throughout the evening and the friends of the contestants enlivened the occasion by constant cheering. Mr. McCutchen led the First Baptist church representatives in singing and cheering. The summary follows:

15 Yard Dash—Russell Swift, First Baptist; Russell Sharp, Clarence, Baker, Elmer Johnson, Arthur Horne, Warren chapel; James Lindzey, First M. E. Won by James Lindzey, time, 2 5-10 seconds. Russell Swift second, Russell Sharp third.

WANT NEW CONTRACT

the P. S. C. be drawn, rigidly defining what was to be given in return for the city's money, and incorporating therein a clause providing penalty for non-fulfillment of contract; and suggests further that the Councils confer with the P. P. A. before signing the new contracts.

President Depew explained that the desire to have the contracts shown to the association before signing was not born of officiousness. It was felt that the Association had data and information relative to the lighting conditions that might enable it to be of service in tightening the safeguards against loss to the municipalities.

The president urged the members to help in gathering data on the private lighting. He asked them to read their meters regularly and report, so that the association might tabulate figures and better understand how the P. S. C. worked.

Mr. Depew said the Public Service management had promised to have a representative at the meeting, to speak on the points raised. The only P. S. C. man in the hall was a clerk from the local office, who took notes on the proceedings.

Interesting incidents in the investigation of the so-called ice trust were recounted by Secretary White. He went to the head of the big ice company early in the summer, he said, and started a series of conferences. He was assured that the dealers were getting only a living out of the business, and couldn't afford to sell for a cent under the prices they charged. To prove it, the ice man offered to turn over all the wagons and horses owned by the dealers to the association and let the organization conduct the business, buying ice wherever they could get it.

The ice captain—Mr. White mentioned no names—declared that there was in no sense a trust. Mr. White inquired if there would be any objection to showing him the contracts with the independent dealers. The ice man said there would be none at all, and promised to bring them to Mr. White's office in the city. Mr. White said he didn't; the captain explained that he felt it wouldn't be fair to the dealers to give out the details of their business that way. Mr. White said an independent dealer had assured him there would be no objection to that. The captain changed his ground and explained that his attorney would not approve of the action.

It developed from the conversation that the ice company was carefully incorporated, a New York attorney helping a prominent Plainfield lawyer in the work. The ice man would not say who the New York attorney was. Mr. White explained that the P. P. A. was not seeking to lay a trap for the ice men, but merely wanted to get at the truth and arrive at a basis fair to the dealers and the consumers alike. Would not the ice men tell the name of the New York attorney, that Mr. White might talk with him? The ice man wouldn't, and didn't.

Mr. White declared that he had learned on what he considered good authority that the ice men here were part of the big trust. He had taken legal steps against the alleged combination, he said, because he was informed by an authority that the statutes of New Jersey were not strong enough to work under. Moreover, the committee had felt that in holding the rate to sixty cents a hundred good work had been accomplished. He was sure that but for the activity of the association, the price would have been raised much higher.

In the discussion that followed Mr. White's report charges were made that the ice men had been offered an ample supply of ice, at rates cheap enough to guarantee a supply to Plainfield at a fair price, before last winter ended, but that the offer had been refused. The ice men denied that when Mr. White taxed them with it, but he told the association he had reason to believe the offer was actually made and turned down. It was charged that the ice dealers compelled the consumers to pay for all the ice that melted on the rounds of their wagons. A. H. Atterbury testified to the detection of short weights at his house, and asserted that the men on the wagon had a trick of selling small pieces for cash on their rounds, and put the weight of such pieces on the accounts of charge customers.

The association instructed the standing committee to watch the ice situation, paying particular attention to the visible supply and the steps taken by the company to garner it. The possibility of erecting a co-operative artificial ice plant was touched on, but no action was taken. Mr. Depew reported that a plant would cost $35,000 to erect. He said a real estate man had tendered him an option on a pond suitable for ice cutting near here, and the erection of an ice house by the association was added to the possibilities.

The telephone service was condemned in strong terms by Former Councilman J. M. Whiton. He said the operators were underpaid, and that the staff was changed so often the telephone users never had the benefit of expert service. He said the company did not regard the rights of the people to any degree, and instanced the condition in which it had left the walk before its new building on Fourth street. The walk was blocked for months, he said, and was only made fairly passable after he had complained to the street commissioner and the police.

Mr. Depew said the charges in Plainfield were out of all proportion to what they were in other places. He suggested, on another line, that the association might work for a reduction in the cost of independent wires to something like what was charged for party wires, and have latter, which he said was a source of annoyance, eliminated. Mr. Depew and several others said the service had improved. Mr. Atterbury voiced a strong last word on the telephone company. "It is an unconscionable, extortionate monopoly, and it has us in its power," he said.

Soft coal smoke from the Central engines was briefly touched upon. Mr. Depew said a communication to Mayor Buckle, shortly before he retired, was referred to Chairman Wm. S. Tyler, of the Public Affairs Committee, and the latter had assured him that the question would be taken up as soon as possible. Mr. Tyler said he had been interested in it for several years, and had been intending to bring it to a head as soon as other important matters were disposed of.

Mr. Depew said there was no report to make on the water question. A municipal committee was investigating it, and he had thought it best to leave it with that body.

Police Board Has Difficulties.

Through an unfortunate chain of circumstances the councilmanic police board was unable to meet last night, as planned. Councilman Frank Randolph, chairman of the board, is detained at home by illness, as is also Mayor Fisk, and Councilman William L. Gloak, another member, has been laid up with a severe and painful injury to his eye, caused by a fall on the ice a few days ago. President Leslie M. Daniel, who is a member of the board, was prevented from attending the session because of a slight illness, and Councilman George P. Mellick, the remaining member, has just returned from a southern trip for the benefit of his health, scarcely felt able to go to the meeting. It may be possible for the board to get together before the Common Council meeting Monday night and decide upon a report to be made concerning the appointments of Mayor Fisk.

Mrs. Charles Zimmer, of East Orange, was the guest yesterday of Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, of Duer street. Mrs. Zimmer is a member of the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church, and attended the tenth anniversary of the band, yesterday afternoon.

Howard T. Scheckler, superintendent of the Elizabeth Mission, will speak at the Grove Street Rescue Mission tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock. Everybody welcome.

G.S. MOULTON A SUICIDE

Former Local Man Who Conducted Mountain Park Inn Kills Himself.

ILLNESS THE CAUSE

Was the First Manager of the Hostelry Which Has Since Become the Groszmann School.

Driven to desperation by pain and sleeplessness, G. Sinclair Moulton, part owner of the Manhattan Square Hotel, in West Seventy-seventh street, and who conducted the Mountain Park Inn when it was first opened, committed suicide Saturday night by shooting himself three times. His remarkable vitality, as revealed by an autopsy, amazed the surgeons. He shot himself first in the right temple, then in the right breast, and finally through the heart. A revolver was clutched in his hand when the body was found yesterday noon in a room in the Grand Union Hotel, and on a table beside the bed was a box containing nearly one hundred loaded cartridges.

In the five or six hours preceding death that Mr. Moulton spent in his room he wrote several letters, but their contents were not revealed. One was addressed to his wife, in care of Simeon Ford, owner of the Grand Union Hotel.

Mrs. Moulton was prostrated long before the letter reached her, knowing, she told friends, her husband had done away with himself. He left her before noon on Saturday, asserting that his head "snapped." Earlier in the day, after saying he had spent a sleepless night and was in constant pain as a result of a stomach ailment, he had, in a half joking way, asked her to end life with him. She had calmed him and thought she had driven all idea of suicide from his mind.

Suggestions that business troubles might have been the cause of Mr. Moulton's suicide were promptly refuted by his friends and associates. To a few of them the cause appeared to be a deep mystery, but Mrs. Moulton and a few intimate associates said it was temporary insanity, brought on by continual suffering and resultant sleeplessness. His business was extremely prosperous and his bank account was of good size.

Although only forty-one years old, Mr. Moulton had risen to prominence in the hotel world and in his thirty years experience had been connected with some of the most widely known hotels in the country. Few men were better known to the patrons of summer hotels. Beginning as a check boy, in the Parker House, in Boston, when eleven years old, he made rapid progress. He served as head waiter, steward, head clerk, assistant manager, manager and part owner. For several years he was connected with the Ocean View Hotel, Block Island, and for four years, ending six years ago, with the management of the Laurel in the Pines, in Lakewood.

Last October, after conducting it for six seasons, he gave up the management of the Hotel Ampersand, in the Adirondacks, and came to New York.

The Manhattan Square, a twelve story apartment hotel, was taken over about the first of the year by the Walter Russell Hotel and Realty Company and the plan was to make it part of a big studio building. Mr. Moulton organized the Park Gate Hotel Company, of which he was made president, and got a lease on the hotel property. Several persons were associated with him, but it was said yesterday that he was the controlling factor and was reaping a good reward. He made his home in the hotel with his wife, whom he married two years ago and with whom it is said he lived happily. She was his second wife.

Mr. Moulton was the first manager of the Mountain Park Inn and remained there for three years. He met with good success and while in Plainfield he made a large acquaintance. He was well-liked for his genial disposition and many excellent qualities. He identified himself with the management and part ownership of the Manhattan Square Hotel, New York, about two months ago.

SIX PLAINFIELDERS ARRAIGNED IN COURT

PLEADED TO INDICTMENTS FOUND AGAINST THEM BY GRAND JURY.

Six Plainfielders were arraigned in the Union County Court, this morning, to plead to indictments found against them by the Grand Jury during the last session. Patrick Fox and Michael Reddington, charged with larceny of a watch, were among the first arraigned. Fox plead not guilty and Reddington plead guilty. The latter will be sentenced February 27, and the trial of the former is set down for February 11.

Edward Cuff, colored, plead guilty to a charge of the larceny of lead pipe and will be sentenced on February 27. Leslie M. Cobb, colored, was charged with assault and battery. He plead not guilty and trial was set down for February 15.

Jesse Tyrell charged with highway robbery in holding up two men on Park avenue, plead not guilty and trial was set down for February 11. John McGilvray, who was left in charge of Bobby Leach's lunch wagon, and was charged with the theft of the receipts, pleaded not guilty and his trial was fixed for February 14.

It was announced that the trial of the criminal cases will commence on Thursday morning.

PASSED ANOTHER MILESTONE.

"Uncle Dan" Roberts Rounds Out His Eighty-second Year.

Former Councilman Dan S. Roberts, of Prospect place, observed the eighty-second anniversary of his birthday, last night, by entertaining a few friends at dinner. The centre of the table was occupied by a large cake bearing the dates "1825-1907."

"Uncle Dan," as he is known to everyone, was born at Easton, Pa., but spent the greater part of his life at Scranton. In his younger days he was interested in the building of the Lackawanna railroad and formed a close friendship with President Sam Sloan. He has lived in Plainfield since 1880, retiring from business only a few years ago. He still enjoys good health and takes as active an interest in local affairs as when he was a member of the "Big Six" Common Council.

LIQUOR MEN MAY PROTEST.

Grand Jury's Action Likely to Affect Their Business.

The liquor dealers throughout the county have learned that the results of the investigation into excise matters by the Grand Jury is likely to have a serious effect on their business in the matter of the enforcement of the screen clause, and there are rumors of a protest from them because of stories they have heard of the lax manner in which the provisions of the law have been carried out in Elizabeth.

It is said the Grand Jury passed a resolution calling for the notification of all liquor dealers and keepers of some so-called inns and taverns that the law must be obeyed, with the intimation that any violations discovered would result in the speedy prosecution of the delinquents. The screen law has always been rigorously observed in this city and the dealers would be in no way affected by the Grand Jury's actions.

No Club Meeting Held.

Although Saturday night was the time fixed for the meeting of the various committees appointed to consider the question of forming a club and purchasing the Casino property, Lewis E. Waring was the only person who put in an appearance. It was understood at the last meeting of the men interested in the scheme that an adjournment was taken to February 2, but inquiry failed to shed any light on the subject. At the college smoker a motion offered by C. A. Marsh and adopted, provided that a committee of three from that body be appointed to meet with the other committees, but this committee has not been announced as yet. Perhaps the illness of Mayor Fisk caused a postponement of the meeting and another date will have to be fixed.

Joe the Turk Coming.

Staff Captain J. Garabed, from Constantinople, better known as "Joe the Turk," will conduct special meetings in Salvation Army Hall, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights. He is a full blood Turk and was a notorious drunkard when he met the Salvation Army over twenty years ago in San Francisco. His subject for Wednesday night will be "How I Stopped the Hole in the Wall." All are invited to hear Joe.

Will Elect a Captain.

Company K will hold a caucus tonight after the drill in the armory for the purpose of electing a captain to succeed Captain Martin. Other vacancies in the staff will be filled at the same time.

REPLIES TO THE P. P. A.

Manager Wilson, of Natural Ice Co., Takes Exception to Way He Was Assailed.

TREATMENT NOT FAIR

Declares Members Went Beyond Their Jurisdiction in Prying Into the Affairs of a Private Concern.

Andrew Wilson, who is manager for the Natural Ice Company, which was attacked by the Plainfield Protective Association at its meeting in the Casino Friday night, was seen today by a representative of The Daily Press and questioned about the matter.

Mr. Wilson took exception to the way in which his company had been assailed by the association. He said that the company had no objections to giving out all the information necessary to aid the members in their laudable efforts to correct what it believed to be an evil, but when the association sought to pry into the private affairs of the company, he thought it was time to call a halt.

He said that the association wanted to ascertain the receipts and expenditures of the company, what it was paying its employes, how much it was paying for ice purchased out of town and many other facts which were considered extremely pertinent and he could see no reason why the company should give the information. He thought it was right for the association to get after the Public Service Corporation or any other corporation that happened to be operating under a franchise or right granted by the city, but to attack a private business concern was out of its jurisdiction.

Mr. Wilson said further that the Natural Ice Company does not hold an exclusive franchise or right to sell ice in Plainfield and North Plainfield. Any individual or company has the perfect right to engage in the ice business wherever and whenever it pleases. They can buy ice where they please, sell it for whatever price they please, or they can erect a plant and manufacture ice if they so desire and no one will stop them.

The manager of the company added that an examination of its books would prove beyond doubt that it was not making a fortune, in fact was only receiving a reasonable and legitimate profit on the money invested in the ice business here. He said that he had a conference with a representative of the Plainfield Protective Association and he did not consider the treatment accorded to be fair. The company was accused of being unfair, and withholding facts and figures which would tend to clear up certain matters.

FAIR CLOSES.

Company K Will Clear Over $200 From the Bazaar.

Company K's fair closed Saturday night, after a week's successful run. The crowd was the largest of the week, and the floor was filled with dancers at every number.

It is too early to say what the exact figure on the net profits will be, but it is certain that the gain will be over $200. The committee is pleased with the result, and the other members of the company are pleased with the committee. The committee was made up as follows: Capt. W. B. Martin, chairman; Sergeants O. R. Pearson, Alfred Tranchand; Corporals J. Niles, R. DeCamp, Walter Sampson; Privates Ford, Hartpence, Weigman, Morton, Benbrook, Dayton, Rothberg, Seaman, Dow.

King's Daughters Will Give a Play.

The City Union, King's Daughters, which is planning for a large fair to be held April 11, 12 and 13, has decided to hold it at the Casino. Already the various committees are hard at work on what promises to be one of the most attractive events given by the King's Daughters. The form of entertainment will include a short play, moving pictures, etc., while every circle in the union will be represented by a booth of some kind at which various articles will be sold.

Mrs. Leland's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. George Leland was held at her late home on West Second street, yesterday afternoon, with a large gathering of relatives and friends in attendance. Rev. Dr. J. A. Euchre Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster Johnson entertained a party of friends at a euchre party at their home, West Fourth street and Grant avenue, Saturday night. Refreshments were served after the playing.

GESANG AND TURN VEREIN HOLDS "KNACKER" NIGHT

MEMBERS OF THE SOCIETY HARD HIT BY "HAMMERFEST."

The man who can't stand to have his particular failings exposed to caustic comment and criticism had no reason to be at Saengerbund Hall, last night, when the Gesang and Turn Verein held its annual "knacker" night. It is the one occasion when the members of the society "knock" each other good and proper and there is no possible chance of escape for the unlucky individual who happens to have been foolish or made mistakes during the year.

The society and its friends gathered at 8 o'clock and from then on until midnight the game was on, interspersed only at times by songs and other features, provided of course, the contributors could stand for the untempered criticisms of their acts. Otto Keller was chairman and the climax in the fun was reached when William Claassen handed a "knock" out to him that "brought down the house." With much detail and a fiendish desire to pile it on, Claassen related what a terrific time Keller had in getting citizenship papers and how the attempts upset all his family and friends. John Wirth and John Retzer came in for several "hammerfests," one of them dealing with an occasion when they turned dog catchers at Dunellen and landed a mongrel, only to be put off three successive trolley cars in the attempt to get home. "Bill" Claassen got a dozen good-sized stingers and Anton Stenzenberger, Rudolph Spiegel, Charles Kreutzfeldt and Mat Menzenbach were others who squirmed under the verbal lash. A German paper distributed about contained knocks for nearly every member of the society.

In the set programme, the feature was a one act comedy, "The School," in which the parts were taken by Otto Keller, as teacher, and Bernard Baumann, Charles Sturzinger and Herman Caspar, scholars. Songs were given by Paul Nachtway, Charles Dresselt and Professor Hermann Eichhorn and the Singing Section contributed several appropriate numbers.

Those in charge of the affair were the following: General committee, Otto Keller, chairman; John Retzer, secretary; Fritz Schmidt, Hermann Caspar and Bernard Baumann; refreshments, Anton Stenzenberger, Jacob Schlick and Charles Kreutzfeldt; reception, John Wirth and Henry Bergen.

ENDEAVOR ANNIVERSARY.

Sermon to the Endeavorers of Trinity Reformed Church.

The service at Trinity Reformed church last night marked the twenty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the Christian Endeavor movement. It was largely attended.

Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, who has been filling the pulpit since Dr. Schenck's illness, preached a sermon to the Endeavorers, on self-help. He took his text from Timothy 1:4-14, "Neglect not the gift that is in thee." His theme was the sins of neglect.

The music was a special feature of the service. E. D. Young played a cornet solo. Horace J. Martin led the singing.

Wilson's Pal Disappears.

The pal of James Wilson or William Walters, the bicycle thief, who was taken to Somerville hospital after falling from a train at Bound Brook two weeks ago, has disappeared from the ken of the police. He was discharged last Wednesday, before Chief Kiely could make inquiries about him. If he is the crook the police think him he will cover his trail carefully.

College Women to Meet.

Those interested in the formation of a Woman's College Club in this city will meet at the home of the Misses Goddard on East Ninth street, tomorrow afternoon at 3:15. A general invitation is extended to all college women who have been in college at least one year. At the meeting tomorrow the organization will be completed and officers elected.

CHOKED BY BIG THIEF

Royle Phillips Has an Encounter With a Muscular Crook.

TOSSED UNDER THE BED

Interrupted Nervy Criminal at Work in His Room—Intruder Escaped After Sqeezing Young Man's Wind Out.

Leaving a family circle that was seated before the fire in the dining room listening to a phonograph, Royle T. Phillips, son of Percy F. Phillips, of Madison avenue, went upstairs at 10 o'clock last night to change his coat. When he stepped into his bedroom a big man sprang on him from the darkness, and clutched him by the throat. The man threw him down, shook him to emphasize his helplessness, and flung him under the bed. Then the big man ran out through double doors that lead to a balcony above the Phillips' porch.

Phillips got his wind and yelled as the man disappeared. His father and a younger brother, Kenneth, came up on the run. They found Royle, with his collar torn off, slowly readjusting himself to normal conditions. His appearance indicated that the intruder had choked half the wind out of him.

No sign of the big man was to be seen outside, but two small dogs in the kitchen, which lies near one of the posts of the porch, started barking wildly just as Mr. Phillips and Kenneth reached the bedroom, and it is deduced that Royle's assailant escaped down that post.

Two gold stickpins and a gold collar button went with the big man. There was no sign of forcible entrance anywhere, and it is supposed the crook slipped in through the front door. Royle's room lies directly at the head of the stairs. The shades of the dining room were up, and it is supposed the man saw the family listening to the phonograph, decided that everybody was downstairs listening to it, and seized the chance for sneak-work that presented itself.

Royle Phillips could not describe the thief, except as a big man. The room was pitch dark, although the thief had opportunity to prepare for Phillips' coming by the aid of a light in the hall, and things happened too quickly to enable the young man to get any kind of a look at his assailant. Royle said he started to call as soon as the man grasped him, but the family heard nothing until the cry that brought Mr. Phillips and Kenneth. It is believed the crook had so tight a grip on the young man's throat the latter couldn't cry out until the grasp was released. There is no doubt that the chief was pretty big. Royle is an athlete and an ex-quarterback of note, and the way in which the crook shook him and threw him around indicates that the thief is a well set-up citizen.

The police were notified by telephone right after the accurrence, and an investigation was begun. The officers found the usual dearth of clues. What they did find was ground for wonderment over the house the crook picked out. The family is a large one, and an ordinary crook would never expect to find clear sailing for sneak-work between suppertime and bedtime. There are no less than eight dogs on the place.

Martin Ptaschinski's Funeral.

The funeral services of Martin Ptaschinski, who died on Thursday, were held yesterday afternoon from the late home on Duer street. Rev. Mr. Schneegas, pastor of the German Reformed church, officiated. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The interment was in the Plainfield avenue cemetery and the pall bearers were Frank Schaffer, a son-in-law; Bodi and Otto Ptaschinski, grandchildren; Oscar and George Smith and Otto Hanel. Mr. Ptaschinski was born in Germany in 1824, and in 1848 fought in the Revolution War in Germany. He came to America in 1882 and was a resident of the borough the rest of his life. He leaves a wife, four daughters, one son, seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

DRYDEN WITHDRAWS FROM SENATORIAL FIGHT

Formal Announcement Came Yesterday With Illness Ascribed as Cause of His Action.

BRIGGS OR STOKES?

If Republican Legislators Agree on His Name, State Treasurer Will Accept the Place.

John F. Dryden has announced his withdrawal from the contest to succeed himself in the United States Senate, and at a caucus of the Republican members of the Legislature to be conducted tonight, State Treasurer Frank O. Briggs, of Trenton, will, in all probability, be decided upon as his successor.

The legislators will resume balloting for United States Senator tomorrow, and it is expected that Mr. Briggs will be elected before the joint session adjourns for the day.

Ill health is given as the reason for Mr. Dryden's withdrawal. He is suffering from a nervous collapse at his Washington home, which was brought on by the strenuous campaign he has waged for re-election. His condition, while not regarded as critical, is such as to preclude the possibility of his appearing before the members of the Legislature today as was planned, but the statement which he was to have made to the legislators, giving the reasons why he believed he should be re-elected, will be issued at a later date.

The formal announcement of Mr. Dryden's retirement came in the form of telegrams to several of the Republican legislators yesterday afternoon. They were signed by Colonel Anthony R. Kuser, son-in-law of the Senator, who made the announcement on the authority of Mr. Dryden.

Assemblyman Alfred N. Barber, who, with Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, has been leading the fight for Mr. Dryden, received a telegram from Dr. Edward J. Ill and Dr. Chas. L. Ill, both of Newark, who were summoned to the Senator's bedside when he was stricken Saturday morning, telling of Mr. Dryden's illness, and of the fact that he would be unable to be in Trenton today. The telegram read: "The condition of Senator John F. Dryden's health is such, on account of the long and severe strain under which he has been, that we, as his physicians, advised him that it is of imperative importance that he should not attend the proposed conference Monday."

The earlier telegram announcing Mr. Dryden's withdrawal, follows:

"Senator Dryden's physicians have imperatively enjoined him attending proposed conference Monday. He has, therefore, decided to withdraw as a candidate for United States Senator, and will later give out the statement he desired to make Monday."

The proposed meeting of today was arranged at the earnest solicitation of Senator Dryden, who had hoped at this meeting to be able to convince the eight Republican legislators who have refused to vote for him, on the ground that their constituents opposed his candidacy, that their opposition to him is based on mistaken ideas.

This determined opposition had prevented Mr. Dryden's re-election, and had resulted in a deadlock covering a period of two weeks during which time five ballots had been taken.

The anti-Drydenites had declared their intention of holding out against the candidacy of the Newarker until "the crack of the doom," as one of them put it, and it is exceedingly doubtful whether Mr. Dryden's arguments would have had the effect he desired.

Having no reason to anticipate that these legislators would change their attitude in the near future and feeling constrained to heed the imperative injunction of his physicians, Mr. Dryden, therefore, decided to withdraw and thus end a fight which has shaken the party organization to its very foundations.

While it is likely that at tonight's caucus of the Republican members to nominate Senator Dryden's successor there will develop a sharp contest, Mr. Briggs is regarded as the strongest candidate in the field. It is understood on the very best authority that Mr. Dryden will throw all of his strength to the State Treasurer on account of the unequivocal stand Mr. Briggs has assumed throughout the Senatorial contest. Mr. Briggs has been repeatedly advanced as a compromise candidate, but he frowned

MONROE AVE. CHURCH BEGINS ANNIVERSARY

SERVICES TO CELEBRATE COMPLETION OF TENTH YEAR STARTED YESTERDAY.

Services in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church were begun yesterday, under the direction of the pastor, Rev. E. E. Roberson, and will be continued every night this week, except Saturday night, concluding next Sunday with special services. The morning and evening services yesterday were very largely attended and full of interest.

The feature of the morning services was the roll-call of members by the secretary of the Board of Stewards, N. Mansfield Smith, and a short historical sketch of the membership by the pastor. There were 126 responses to the roll-call, including ten probationers. About 250 persons attended this service.

Mr. Roberson stated that there were 102 charter members and during the past ten years 336 persons joined the church and ninety-eight members died or were dismissed. The present membership is 248, besides probationers.

In the evening Mr. Roberson preached the opening sermon of the anniversary, on the topic "What Is the Church?" His first thought was that the church is composed of persons called out of fellowship of the world; secondly that the church is the bride of Christ; thirdly that Christ is the head of the church; fourthly, that the church is God's hand reached out to touch the world savingly and lastly that the true church includes the whole body of believers of every denomination. Under these various sub-divisions Mr. Roberson gave a strong and impressive exposition of the meaning of each and he held the close attention of all throughout his discourse.

The discourse was a fitting one in opening the anniversary services and gives promise of much during the coming week.

The pastor did not touch on the historical side of the church, its organization and growth in detail for the reason that next Sunday, N. Mansfield Smith will read such a sketch, prepared by him, which will cover every phase of the church history. A feature of last night's service was the special music by the choir.

Tonight there will be a reunion and fellowship service. All the former pastors are expected to be present and take part. Other ministers of the city have also been invited to attend. A social hour will follow the service.

YE OLDE CHOIR.

It Will Sing at Hope Chapel Under Judge Runyon.

The revival of social activity among the young men of the Hope chapel Y. M. A. will be marked on the evening of February 22 by an entertainment on the old scale. As has even been characteristic of Y. M. A. affairs, novelty will be in the ascendant.

The entertainment is to include the appearance of "ye olde village choir." Judge Runyon will be the choirmaster, and the members expect him to get more out of the choir than any other choirmaster ever dreamed of finding in his choristers. Choirmaster and singers will be in costume.

Fine Production is Promised.

There will be two rehearsals for "The Chimes of Normandy," at the Casino, this week, by the Plainfield Operatic Association in preparation for its first performance this season on Thursday night. One rehearsal will be held tonight and one tomorrow night, when the entire opera will be rehearsed throughout. The sale of seats for the production is most gratifying and judging by the work of the members of the association the opera will be the best and most satisfactory ever given by amateurs under local patronage. The soloists have been carefully selected, as has also the chorus of sixty voices and everything points to a successful event. William Holmes, director, will be in charge, assisted by an orchestra of thirteen pieces.

"Where Art Thou?"

Rev. E. E. Roberson began his month's series of talks at the Y. M. C. A. meetings yesterday afternoon. He spoke on "The First Question God Ever Asked a Man," which was "Where Art Thou?"—asked by God of Adam after the apple episode. Mr. Roberson asked his hearers to apply it to themselves; to discover whether they were with the saved or the unsaved. The musical feature of the meeting was a clarinet solo by Walter Sampson.

CENTRAL'S LONG BRANCH LINE.

Two Additional Track Plans Through Elizabeth and the Port.

Elizabeth, Feb. 4.—It was learned today that the Jersey Central has during the past year been quietly purchasing land adjoining its Long Branch division, on the south side at Elizabeth, and has acquired possession of all but three tracts of land bordering on the railroad. These are the properties of Captain Thomas H. Benton, William Seland and the coal yard of Neureiter & Horre. The latter extends one block from East Jersey to Fulton street. Negotiations are in progress for the purchase of these tracts, and the Central will have a clear right of way on which to construct two additional tracks for its Long Branch division. Whether this line will then be elevated through Elizabethport is a matter for the railroad company and the Elizabeth authorities to settle upon; if the city has its way the railroad tracks will be elevated when the four-track road of the Long Branch division is completed through Elizabethport.

The Central, it is said, will build two handsome brick and stone stations, one on its main line, where the present Elizabethport station now stands, and the other at the intersection of Elizabeth avenue and the Long Branch line. The price which the Central paid for the New Point Hotel, at Elizabethport, which has recently been acquired by it, is alleged to be $25,000.

ELIZABETH OIL FIRE CAUSES LOSS OF $30,000.

Blaze in Storage Sheds of Bayway Refining Company Gives Firemen All Night Fight.

Elizabeth, Feb. 4.—Fire started Friday night in a big wooden storage shed on the plant of the Bayway Oil Refining Company, at South Front street, Elizabethport. The shed was filled with cases of oil, which burned fiercely. The flames spread to adjoining sheds, which also contained oil, and at one time the fire threatened the destruction of the entire plant.

A second alarm was sounded, bringing to the scene most of the Elizabeth Fire Department. The blaze raged all night, and Saturday morning was still burning. The loss will be about $30,000, so Superintendent Wall, of the concern, says. At a fire there last year a loss of $58,000 was caused. The wharf of the company ignited several times Friday night, but was saved by the fireboats Erie and Hudson. Chief Gerstiener, of the Elizabeth department, says if it had not been for the efficient work of these vessels the pier could not have been saved, as the Elizabeth firemen did not have hose enough to reach it.

The origin of the fire is unknown, but the blaze is supposed to be caused by spontaneous combustion. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Three new members were received by letter at the communion service in the First Baptist church, yesterday morning.

The Boys' Athletic League will hold a meeting in the Sunday-school room of the First Baptist church Friday night at 7:30 o'clock.

An entertainment will be held at Bethel chapel Friday night, February 22, when the programme will consist of a Victor talking-machine concert.

Joseph Lorrain, entertainer and mimic, will appear at the meeting of the Men's Club of the Congregational church, tomorrow night. Refreshments will be served.

A Mother Goose Bazaar will be held at Grace M. E. church on Thursday and Friday nights, February 21 and 22, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

In the absence of Howard Case, the regular organist at the First Baptist church, who is at Atlantic City, W. A. Conger, of Faith chapel, took his place at the services yesterday.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, editor of the Sabbath Recorder, will occupy the pulpit at the Seventh-Day Baptist church Saturday morning, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. G. B. Shaw.

Dr. Charles E. Moldenke will give an illustrated lecture at St. Peter's German Lutheran church, Grove street, Wednesday night, February 27, on the subject "Up the River Nile."

In connection with the illustrated lecture to be given at the First Baptist church, Monday night, February 11, by Dr. Corbusier, there will be a number of selections on the Victor talking-machine.

The fifteenth anniversary of the founding of Grace M. E. church will be observed on Sunday, when the pastor, Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons, will preach a special sermon and there will be a fine programme of music.

In making your dates just remember the annual turkey supper to be given at Trinity Reformed church Thursday and Friday nights, under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society. Arrangements have been completed to serve a fine supper and besides Kenneth Stuart's orchestra will furnish music both evenings.

Mrs. John Manley, of Park avenue, will sing at the thirty-first anniversary services of the West Side Noonday Prayer Meeting, 281 Greenwich street, New York, to be celebrated Wednesday afternoon from 12 to 1:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. James M. Farrar, of Brooklyn, will make the address. Mrs. Manley was organist at this mission for ten years prior to moving to this city.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will meet in the lecture room of the church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The devotional exercises, "Jezebel, or Power of Wife's Influence," will be conducted by Miss M. B. Pearce. Miss G. S. Whitney will read a paper on "Samoa, Tonga and Micronesia," and Miss Ella Serrell will present the paper on current events.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

One of the characters in "When Women Love," the new successful heart interest melodrama, to be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tonight and tomorrow night, is a young factory boy who is, as he expresses it, "stuck" on a girl whose sole desire is to go on the stage. The controversies between them and their plans for the factory girl who is the heroine, are refreshingly bright bits of comedy.

A clever bit of comedy character acting is done by J. McIntosh Todd, a "Gent of the Road," who has a part in "As Told in the Hills," which will come to the New Plainfield theatre Friday night. In addition to being entirely new in plot and development as well as characters, the play is one of the strongest from a dramatic standpoint that has been produced this season. The original company will be seen in the production. The play is artistically staged, special attention having been given to the details of the scenery showing the Indian fight on the prairie and scenes on the Arkansas farm with its picturesque rural surroundings that are in keeping with the general tone of the play.

A story of man's cirrelty and woman's suffering is graphically told in Spencer and Aborn's splendid emotional drama, "A Wife's Secret," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night. It concerns a young wife, whose husband, believing the tongue of malicious scandal against her, turns her from his door without a chance to explain, and dispel his suspicions. Her subsequent trials and persecutions, and her ultimate victory against fearful odds, with many exciting events of thrilling interest, form a most absorbing and soul-stirring story. Contemporary press comments pronounce the production a most elaborate and complete one, and the company of the highest standing. The cast is headed by Miss Grace Hopkins, the well known emotional actress, as the young wife, and it is said to be one of the best roles she has ever played.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

When in doubt as to where to eat don't hesitate, but go to Timbo's restaurant on North avenue. No better place in town.

When you want to purchase drugs or medicines stop at Clayton M. Neagle's pharmacy on West Front street. You will get the best at reasonable prices.

Putnam & DeGraw, the West Front street dry goods merchants, are always at your service for the best goods. You will find this store an ideal one in which to shop.

O. M. Dunham, of Park avenue, can fit you with men's furnishings from head to foot. His line of hats is large and the stock of general furnishings desirable and reasonable in price.

Robert L. Cline, formerly of the firm of Rugg & Cline, coal dealers, of 430 West Third street, is delivering first-class Lehigh coal, all sizes. The coal Mr. Cline sells is well screened and protected from snow and rain by good sheds.

As this is the season for all kinds of ills and pains the need of the best drugs and medicines is apparent. L. W. Randolph, the West Front street druggist, can supply you with the best in this line as well as in toilet articles, Huyler's confections and prescription work.

Frank Siddall, Soap Man, Dead.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—Frank Siddall, whose progressive advertising methods gave him wide prominence as a soap manufacturer a quarter of a century ago, died Friday at his residence, Williams Park, near Wycombe, Bucks county. Up until three days ago he was attending to business in his office here. He was 70 years old. His widow and son, Frank Siddall, Jr., survive him. Mr. Siddall, as a chemist, discovered a system of treating laundry soap, which required no boiling in its use. He electrified the advertising world by using full newspaper pages in extolling its merits, considered a daring expenditure of money in the days of the early eighties. He coined the phrase: "Don't be a clam," and was the pioneer in illustrated advertising. Siddall started in business at 119 Market street. Later he had an office adjoining the Chestnut Street Opera House, elaborately furnished with plush upholstering. There he would demonstrate in person, by chewing his soap, to prove that it contained no injurious chemicals. He would go through the same performance in Turkish bath houses, which he daily frequented.

Justices of the Peace Subpoenaed.

New Brunswick, Feb. 4.—Subpoenas are being served upon every justice of the peace in Middlesex county commanding them to appear before the Grand Jury with their civil and criminal dockets from January 1, 1904, to date. The Grand Jury is conducting a wholesale investigation of alleged abuses of power by justices of the peace and alleged combinations between squires and constables for multiplying fees which are divided between the constables and squire interested.

—The February meeting of the Common Council will be held tonight, when a number of important matters will be considered.

By JULIA MARLOWE:

"The nuances of each episode in 'The House of a Thousand Candles,' Meredith Nicholson's dramatic sense grasps instantly and portrays with perfect artistic simplicity.

"More than any other attribute this is what will make a strong play of the book."

By DAVID WARFIELD:

"The vivid dramatic quality of 'The House of a Thousand Candles,' combined with its romantic adventure, makes the story one of the most interesting I have read."

THE OPENING CHAPTERS APPEAR IN THIS ISSUE

By MRS. LESLIE CARTER:

"Rarely have I found a story more absorbing than Meredith Nicholson's 'The House of a Thousand Candles.' The book should make an excellent play."

By E. H. SOTHERN:

"The plot of Mr. Nicholson's new book is original and strong in dramatic conception, developed with ever growing interest to a striking climax, and the book is, I think, rich material for a stirring play."

CAPTAIN JOHN BELLIS DEAD.

Aged Hunterdon County Postmaster Passes Away at Flemington.

Flemington, Feb. 24.—Captain John Bellis, one of the oldest residents of this section of Hunterdon county, passed away at the home of his son, Wilmer Bellis, in Park avenue, Thursday. He had been ill one week from ailments due to advanced age. Captain Bellis retired a few years ago from an eventful career. He conducted a mercantile business for fifty-one years and officiated as postmaster for forty-seven years. He was born in Alexandria Township January 8, 1828, and spent his entire lifetime in Hunterdon county.

Captain Bellis left the farm when twenty-four years old and received his first appointment as postmaster in 1856, during the Presidency of Franklin Pierce. He was postmaster at Locktown for eight years and then removed to Barbartown, where he established a postoffice in 1864. During 1865 President Lincoln appointed him postmaster in Kingwood. From that time until about four years ago he acted as the village store-keeper of Kingwood and was postmaster under all the administrations, resigning the office when he removed to Flemington to end his days. His successor was William S. Carver.

When Captain Bellis first received his appointment as postmaster the mail route originated at Trenton and terminated at Bloomsbury. One trip was made each week. In 1858 a uniformed military company was organized at Locktown, with Mr. Bellis as captain. The company disbanded at the beginning of the Civil War and nearly all the members joined the Union army. Captain Bellis was then commissioned as enrolling officer for Delaware Township and during the war enrolled 600 men. He was a member of the Milford Christian church for more than half a century. The funeral services were held at the home of his son yesterday morning.

Complimented J. P. Morgan.

Alexander Gilbert, of this city, who is president of a clearing house in New York, paid a compliment to J. P. Morgan at a dinner in the city, last week, that was appreciated by the great financier. Mr. Gilbert alluded to the fact that he and Mr. Morgan had entered into business the same year, 1864, but that Mr. Morgan had distanced him in the race, and Mr. Morgan smiled at the compliment.

—The newly-elected directors of the Watchung Silk Company will meet at the mill on Chatham street, this afternoon to effect on organization. The old officers will probably be re-elected.

SMOKED CIGARETTE WHEN ARRAIGNED IN COURT

MONCHALANT CONDUCT OF "RED TOBIN," THE YOUNG DESPERADO.

Eugene T. Tobin, better known as "Red" Tobin, the Westfield boy desperado, who attacked Charles L. Dean, of this city, the night ticket agent of the Central Railroad, at the Westfield station, Thursday morning, with a view of robbing the ticket office of between $2,000 and $3,000, and who was overpowered by Dean and handed over to the police, was arraigned Saturday before Judge W. B. Toucey and was committed to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Tobin remained in a cell at police headquarters until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. In the meantime, Detective Gaffney, of the Central Railroad, got complete details of the assault from Dean. Officer Martin Canfield, who arrested Tobin, led the youthful desperado from his cell. Tobin approached the rail with a cigarette in his mouth.

"Throw that cigarette away," shouted Police Justice W. B. Toucey.

"All right," replied Tobin, as he walked to the other side of the room and deposited the cigarette in the stove. Officer Canfield followed the prisoner closely, fearing he was looking for a chance to escape.

The court then read the charge, saying: "Eugene T. Tobin, you are charged by Charles L. Dean with assault and attempt at robbery." Tobin immediately pleaded not guilty and asked for bail.

Judge Toucey stated that the offense was too serious for bail.

"All right," said Tobin. "I will get it when I reach Elizabeth."

Detective Gaffney stated that he was not ready to proceed with the case at present. The court set Wednesday, February 13, at 2 p. m. as the time for the hearing. Tobin reached the county jail shortly before 6 p. m.

Tobin's past record is a bad one. Several years ago he figured in a highway robbery at Garwood, and he and his partner, named Hann, were sent to the State Reformatory. Tobin's parole expired last May. Tobin and Hann laid in wait for Alfred Woidt, a grocer, of Garwood, and, after striking him over the head, rifled his pockets of a large sum of money. Woidt was unconscious for nearly a half an hour, and still carries a big blue mark on his forehead from the effects of the blow. The borough of Garwood offered a reward of $100 for the arrest of Mr. Woidt's assailants.

Tobin and Hann were found in New York by a Garwood boy. The two had with them a Newark girl, say the police. The Garwood youth went to New York and lived with the trio and enticed Tobin and Hann back to Westfield by planning a highway robbery. Isaac Lambert, a distiller, was to have been their victim. Hann was left at Garwood to await the return of his companions with the spoils. He was arrested while waiting and Tobin was found hiding in the barns at the rear of the Westfield Hotel, which he expected Lambert to pass. When taken into custody at that time Tobin had a long piece of iron pipe, upon the end of which was a bilt. This was the weapon to be used on Lambert.

A MAN DOES NOT ADMIRE

A self-opinionated girl. Not that he objects to the opinion exactly, but the ideal woman must at least be willing to be converted when her error is shown her.

A cold girl, or one whose manners give the impression of coldness—for in nine cases out of ten it is merely a manner. Sometimes it arises simply from shyness, sometimes from a too whole-hearted desire to be coy. The most beautiful face ceases to be attractive to the would-be lover when he begins to suspect its owner has little else to bestow.

A girl who is the least bit rapid in her manner of speech. He may talk to her, flirt with her perhaps, but in his heart he dislikes her.

An untidy girl. The girl whose buttons are forever coming off, whose hair is always ill-dressed and who habitually wears a half-finished air never finds favor in his sight. A dainty freshness possesses a potent charm for the masculine beholder. He cares little that the gown may be of the year-before-last's fashion, so that it fits perfectly, and all the little details of the toilet, especially boots and gloves, be above reproach.

An affecting girl—the girl who is forever pretending to be something she is not. Such a transparent pretense as it invariably is, too, deceives no one.

Scented Stamps.

It is a pretty conceit to scent one's postage stamps. This may be done in an easy way by keeping them in a teakwood box. There are many pretty little boxes of this kind made to hold postage stamps, and it is astonishing how they absorb the dainty odors. Sweet-grass is more odorous than teakwood, yet if one is unable to procure either, the paper packages of wood sachets sold for ten cents will provide not only the stamps but the writing paper with a delightful odor.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Case, of Craig place, have gone to Atlantic City, where Mr. Case will recuperate from an attack of the grip.

DRYDEN'S WITHDRAWAL.

To Dryden, the politically dead, let us wish peace. His passing was nobler than his struggle, tenacious as that seemed to be.

His withdrawal looks like the biggest thing he has ever done since his mistaken entrance into a field of activity wherein there was no aching void yearning for him alone. It was the act of a man unselfishly devoted to his party. From what an outsider has to judge by, one can only conclude that Senator Dryden made up his mind to efface himself when he realized fully that the objection to his re-election, whatever its merits, was strong within the ranks of the party, and of a character to threaten the party structure in the event of his success.

Say what they may of Senator Dryden, he has undoubtedly given much in time, money and care to the Republican party. Such things are accountable in political rewards, and it is no small thing to Senator Dryden's credit that he has waived all claims in the face of the party crisis.

Senator Dryden's withdrawal may strengthen the party as much as his success would have weakened it. If the Senator chosen is a man free from the taint of corporation and ring, the popular reaction in favor of the Republican party—the party strong enough to purge itself—will kill every chance of Democratic success at the next election.

Having spoken well of the dead, let us hail the living. Senator Ackerman's unshaken, single-minded stand for what his consituents desired deserves commendation as strongly phrased as language permits. He acted as the voters of this county wished him to act, and if any politician, big or little, has any thoughts of "killing" him for the stand he took, that politician had best move cautiously. It is apt to be death to touch a true servant of the people.

BRIDGE OVER NEWARK BAY.

Bayonne Board of Trade Again Revives the Project.

The Bayonne Board of Trade will revive tonight the project to have a bridge built across Newark Bay, between Bayonne and Elizabeth. The Hudson and Union county Assemblymen have come out in favor of the project and Assemblyman Valentine Holzapfel, of Bayonne, is having a bill drafted authorizing the two counties to construct the span.

The project has been started several times and three years ago Congressman Allen Benny got a bill through the House, but it was killed in the Senate. One of the most ardent supporters of the project is Recorder Hyman Lazarus, president of the Bayonne Board of Trade. He said yesterday:

"The benefits that would follow the linking of Bayonne and Elizabeth would be vast to not only these two cities, but other sections in the two counties."

Scurry for a Minister.

A misunderstanding between the deacons resulted in a half-hour's delay in the service at the Baptist church of New Market yesterday morning. Each of the deacons thought the other had arranged for a pulpit supply, and when the congregation gathered there was no minister to conduct the service. The deacons discovered their mutual mistake a few minutes afterwards and repaired it by calling in Rev. H. N. Jordan, minister of the New Market Seventh-Day Baptist church. The congregation sang hymns while the deacons were getting the minister.

Rowland Edwards, son of Maze Edwards, is winning new laurels in the dramatic field as a leading member of Mary Mannering's company in "Glorious Betsy." The production is soon to be seen at a Broadway playhouse and will afford Mr. Edwards' local friends an opportunity of witnessing his work.

For the Washington's Birthday attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Manager Counihan has secured the original company playing "The Daughters of Men," Charles Klein's new drama which recently closed a long engagement at the Astor theatre. The cast includes Miss Dorothy Donnolly, who was seen in Plainfield last season with John Drew.

The annual benefit for Treasurer Sam Cunningham, of the New Plainfield theatre, will take place on February 28, matinee and night. The old reliable laugh-provoker, "Happy Hooligan," will hold the boards.

The largest painted drop curtain in the world is now being painted at the New York Hippodrome by Arthur Voegtlin, the scenic artist of the big playhouse. This curtain is a circular one, designed to take the place of the red ovel curtain which hangs in front of the arena. It measures 166 feet long and is 40 feet high, and Mr. Voegtlin and his assistants have been obliged to paint over 7,000 square feet of surface. The design of the curtain is an imitation of old tapestry and is entitled "A Roman Garden." It is painted on heavy Russian linen and is lined throughout with felt. It weighs approximately one ton. Owing to the extreme length of the curtain, extending entirely around the Hippodrome stage, it has been divided in sections, showing various scenes from a Roman garden.

Manager William A. Brady, who is directing the professional fortunes of Wilton Lackaye, is arranging for revivals of "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," "Jack Cade" and Salvini's version of "The Outlaw," in which Mr. Lackaye will enact the leading roles.

Eugene Cowles, the well known basso, who was seen in this city last season in "The Rose of the Alhambra," has been engaged by Manager Daniel V. Arthur to support Marie Cahill in musical comedy.

New York is to have a new theatre, which will be called the Booth, and will be the metropolitan theatrical home of E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe. It will be built by Meyer R. Bimberg on the north side of Forty-sixth street, near Broadway. Bimberg built the recently constructed Astor theatre at Broadway and Forty-fifth street.

PASTOR SCORES CIGARETTE SMOKING BY BOYS.

The Rev. Father Hall Explains to Parents Failure of Children to Make Honor Roll.

The Rev. Father James J. Hall, rector of the Church of Our Lady of Sorrows, South Orange, speaking from his pulpit yesterday, severely condemned cigarette smoking by boys and young men. Father Hall's strictures on the evil came at the close of his sermon, when he was announcing the honor roll of pupils in his parochial school.

This list, which is announced from the pulpit by Father Hall every Sunday, includes the names of the pupils in the school who have achieved good marks in studies and deportment during the week, and after he had read it the priest remarked that it was likely some parents of children who stood well in their studies would be surprised that their children were not named on the honor roll. He said he would be glad to give reasons for this to any parents who inquired of him, and then added that cigarettes were at the bottom of many of the cases.

"No boys have any business to smoke," declared Father Hall, who then said he did not promise to go into the general question of the propriety of smoking except as applied to the young. "This smoking of cigarettes stunts the mind and prevents the natural development of the body, and parents should make every effort to stop the practice among their children."

Marlborough Case Settled.

Paris, Feb. 4.—There will be no more heard about the Marlborough case and the matter will not come into the law courts. By an amicable arrangement it has been settled that the Duchess shall have the care of both boys, Lord Blandford and Lord Ivor Spencer Churchill for six months in the year, the Duke having them the other six. Under the new arrangement the Duke will receive £20,000 a year and the Duchess a similar sum from the latter's father. It is also stated that the Duke is not to call at Sunderland House or "molest" the Duchess in any way.

Dies of Exposure In Street.

New York, Feb. 4.—Poorly dressed, an unidentified man about fifty years old died on the stoop of No. 187 Greenwich street yesterday morning, apparently of cold and exposure. In his pockets were an old nickel watch, eight cents and a collar button.

FUNERAL PROCESSION REVEALS SAD STORY.

Two Little Hoboken Girls Die Within One Hour—Six Others of Family Critically Ill.

Hoboken, Feb. 4.—A pitiful story was revealed here Saturday when a single hearse, in which were two little white coffins, with but one coach following it, was seen going through the street. The coffins contained the bodies of Anna and Julia Heimann, two and five years old respectively, the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Heimann, of 407 Grand street.

The two little girls died within one hour of each other last night. The cause of death was diphtheria, and in the home where live the Heimann family, which consists of the father, mother and nine children, the father and five of the children are critically ill of the same disease.

The mother and the two boys, Herman and William, who are the only ones well in the family, left the bedside only long enough to see the caskets placed in the one grave and then returned to keep their vigil over the ill ones at home.

JAIL FOR KICKING POLICEMAN.

Hoboken Recorder Censures "Rich Man's Son," for Asking Mercy.

Emanuel Rodriguez, of Boonton, was arraigned before Recorder Stanton in Hoboken Saturday for assaulting a special policeman, Romeo Scott, of the Lackawanna railroad, on Wednesday night. Rodriguez was drunk. Scott tried to help him to board a train, but he kicked the officer.

Rodriguez walked jauntily into court and smilingly shook hands with his counsel, but the smile left his face when he was compelled to stand in line with the other prisoners, most of whom had been arrested for drunkenness. Rodriguez said that Scott several times had been kind to him, assisting him to his train.

Rodriguez's lawyer wanted him let off with a fine. He said he was a member of a wealthy family and would apologize.

"I wish it plainly understood that the plea for sympathy which I have just heard has no influence with me," said Recorder Stanton. "It is high time that rich men's sons were given a lesson to prove to them that they have no more right than a poor man's son to disobey the laws. What right have you to assault an officer, even though you may be drunk at the time? The testimony has proved that you have no principle. I now sentence you to thirty days in the penitentiary, and will also hold you in bonds of $1,000 to await the action of the Grand Jury on a charge of atrocious assault and battery."

Men Fall Into Boiling Water.

New York, Feb. 4.—Passing each other on a plank over a tank of boiling water in the Pennsylvania Railroad power house in Long Island City last night, two men fell into the tank and were scalded so severely that both will die. They are John Waddington, thirty-nine years old, engineer, living in No. 393 Lenox avenue, New York, and Patrick Manning, twenty-eight, laborer, of No. 192 Greenpoint avenue, Brooklyn. Other men in the power house, hearing their screams, fished them out and they were taken to St. John's Hospital by Dr. Gallivan. No one saw them fall and how they came to do so is merely a matter of conjecture, as the victims have been unconscious since the occurrence.

Frozen to Death at Home.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 4.—Miss Emma K. Livingston, fifty years old, and two children were found frozen to death yesterday afternoon in a tenement here. A third child was found in an adjoining room, badly frozen, but alive. Miss Jennie Livingston called to pay a visit and found her sister and one child dead in bed, one child dead on the floor, and the third child nearly dead in the adjoining room. None of the family had been seen since Thursday, when two of the children attended school. The children lived with Miss Livingston, who was their aunt. It is supposed that after they retired on Thursday night they became partially asphyxiated by coal gas, and, the fire dying out, they were frozen.

WHALEBONE AT $8,750 A TON.

It Might Pay Now to Look Up Those Old Whalebone Ribbed Umbrellas.

"I see by the papers," said Mr. Grillfinby, "that the last quotation for whalebone in England was £1,750, or, say, about $8,750 a ton, making whalebone worth now somewhere in the neighborhood of $4.50 a pound—a pretty costly commodity.

"I can remember the time when whalebone was cheap, very cheap; when we used to burn whale oil in lamps and use whalebone for umbrella ribs. Those old-time whalebone ribbed umbrellas were not much like the present steel ribbed close rollers.

"No. They were of the bulgy out sort of gingham umbrellas that you see now sometimes reproduced after a fashion on the comic stage, but which are now never actually used by anybody, though once they were used by everybody, umbrellas with whalebone ribs. And what I was going to say was this:

"People are out all the time looking through the country for old furniture, quaint old colonial, and that sort of stuff. Why couldn't we hunt up those umbrellas—there must be millions of them lying around in country garrets—why couldn't we look up those old whalebone ribbed gingham umbrellas, for the whalebone there is in them? Don't you think there may be an idea here for making money.

Circassian Slaves Now Wear Copies of Paris Fashions.

Less picturesque than the description in Pierre Loti's "Disenchanted" was my reception in the harem of Bosma Hanum, the wife of a close relative of the throne, says a writer in the Boston Globe.

I was assisted out of my carriage by a gaunt eunuch in a black frock coat and red fez, who gave me the shivers as he clutched my arm with his sable paw.

Inside the hall I was met by a crowd of female slaves, who helped me to remove my wraps. They varied in age from 15 to 40; some of them were negresses, but the majority were Circassians.

The latter are supposed to be the most beautiful of all Turkish women, on which account the slaves of the sultan are always selected from among them; but in this instance I looked in vain for any trace of good looks, and, indeed, could hardly help smiling at the comic effect they produced, dressed up to the nines in the latest Paris fashions, executed by local dressmakers.

Misleads Horse Buyer.

"Deacon" Snow, who recently died in Provincetown at a good old age, was one of the shrewdest horse traders on the cape. He once had a horse which showed a rooted aversion to covering more than three miles an hour.

A customer who liked the appearance of the animal had about concluded to purchase, and asked if he was a good traveler. The "deacon," assuming a confidential tone, said: "Mr. Jones, you'll certainly be pleased to see that horse go."

The bargain was made and the new owner drove away. The next morning bright and early he appeared on the scene in a great rage. "See her," he cried, addressing the "deacon." "I thought you told me this horse was a great traveler?"

"Never said nuthin' of the kind," was the quiet reply.

"What in thunderation did you say, then?"

"I said you'd certainly be pleased to see that horse go, and so would any one else, I guess, that owned him."

Sent Out by Express.

A few years ago a banquet was given the delegates to the convention which had that day nominated Hon. Otis M. Gove, of Waltham, Mass., for the state senate.

Several of the delegation had spoken in very flattering terms of the nominee, of his native city and its famous watch industries, whose products were so well known everywhere.

The last speaker, ex-Mayor Baxter, of Medford, began by saying: "Gentlemen, we have listened to the glowing accounts of the industries of Waltham, whose products are so well known everywhere. But don't forget that Medford also has industries of her own, the products of which I venture to say are as well known to the good people of Waltham as those of her own beloved city."

The Number of Our Hairs.

According to a well known medical authority fair-haired people possess commonly between 140,000 and 150,000 hairs on the scalp, the number being about the same for man and woman. Dark haired people have, on an average, about 105,000, while red haired people are said to have only 30,000. But the last apparently possesses one great advantage in the fact that they retain their hair better, seldom becoming bald. Their hair is much coarser than that of dark or fair haired persons.

Easy Matter.

Why do women always manage to have the last word?" asked the man of petty considerations.

"Possibly," answered his satirical spouse, "because men insist on yelling at baseball games and elections, until their voices are useless."

PLENTY OF ICE, BUT NO CARS TO CARRY IT.

That Is the Cry From One Section But Railroad Hasn't the Cars Needed.

The situation with the ice harvesters in that section of Pennsylvania through which the Lehigh Valley operates is somewhat paradoxical. It is learned from a representative of the railroad company that the producers now have the finest harvest of their experience, but cannot get it to the great storehouses in the metropolitan centres.

The Bear Creek Ice Company has announced that it has placed an order with the Lehigh Valley Railroad for 150 cars and the use of three engines daily and were advised that the best that could be done was to send twenty-five box cars per day, with the use of one engine. The railroad company also announces that two points where ice was transported from the ice fields for 55 cents per ton the cost now would be 80 cents. There are other companies too in the Bear Creek region who have fine ice for sale and can get no cars to carry it to market. Such is the present day car shortage situation.

$125,000 BLAZE IN TRENTON.

Imperial Porcelain Works Destroyed Firemen in Peril.

Trenton, Feb. 4.—The large Imperial Porcelain Works were destroyed by a fire which started at 3 o'clock Sunday morning, and continued until late in the afternoon, causing $125,000 loss and throwing 160 operatives out of work. Heroic efforts were made by the entire fire department of the city to save the plant, but without avail. A number of firemen narrowly escaped death from falling walls. The work of the fire fighters was greatly retarded by frozen fire hydrants and a high wind.

It is supposed that the fire started from an overheated klin. The watchman did not discover the blaze until it had gained considerable headway.

The company consists of Frederick A. Duggan and V. B. Dinsmore. It is one of the biggest electrical porcelain specialty concerns in the country. The plant will be rebuilt at once.

Auto Line to Boynton Beach.

H. E. Pendleton, R. L. Bracher and W. A. Reason have incorporated as the Roosevelt Auto Company, of Roosevelt, Union county, this State, for the purpose of dealing in automobiles and auto accessories, in connection with their garage and repair shop, which is located on Rahway avenue, that place, the company will operate the new motor transportation line between Rahway and Boynton Beach. The company has purchased the three buses formerly owned and operated by the East Jersey Motor and Transportation Company, and is fitting them up for service, commencing about the middle of February. The line will be operated on a regular schedule, and will give quick transportation to the Boynton Beach pleasure grounds.

German Socialists Lose.

Berlin, Feb. 4.—There were twelve second ballots Saturday. The socialists lost three seats and even one of their best leaders, Herr von Elm. Their prospects, however, have slightly improved, the centre having in Southern Germany openly proclaimed its support. The centre in Silesia will support the conservatives against the liberals. These latter will vote against the socialists, even for conservatives, despite the warning of the Frankfurter Zeitung and other liberal papers, who repeat the German saying that only the most stupid calves select their own butchers.

Stood Hours In Cistern.

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 4.—Mrs. Henry Walters, of No. 404 East Stewart street, yesterday plunged into the cistern into which her baby had fallen and rescued the child. She then stood in water up to her chin for several hours holding the little one above the water. Mother and child were finally rescued by neighbors who happened to go to the Walters home. Mrs. Walters, while in the cistern, kept calling for help, but until the neighbors came along by accident there was no one near except another child of hers, which was too small to render aid.

Two Hats a Year Enough.

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 4.—Representative Norfleet, of Morgan county, says he will introduce in the Legislature a bill "to prohibit any woman from purchasing more than two hats during any one calendar year, to regulate the price to be paid for such hats, and to prevent the wearing of any plumage thereon." The first provision of the bill reads: "Hereafter it shall be unlawful for any woman, either married or single, to purchase for herself, or to receive or in any way procure for her use and benefit, more than two hats, each to cost not more than $1.98, oftener than every twelve months."

Suicide at Bridal Door.

New York, Feb. 4.—Directly in front of the door of an apartment at No. 183 Amsterdam avenue, where a hundred or more persons had gathered to attend a wedding, Ulderic Hugron, thirty-five years old, of No. 221 South Main street, Waterbury, Conn., committed suicide last night by shooting himself in the mouth. Although the bride and many of the guests became hysterical immediately following the tragedy the ceremony took place about an hour afterward and the bride and bridegroom left on a wedding tour.

OVER THE TEA CUPS.

The question is often asked, "Can a girl be an artist's model or a chorus girl, and still hold the respect of those about her?" and as often is the answer given, "Why not?" It's all rubbish to assert that because a girl, through force of circumstances, has to earn her living behind the footlights, or in the studio, she is less likely to walk the straight and narrow path than her sister who measures off ribbon in some department store, or takes dictation in an office, eight hours a day.

It isn't what a girl does for a living that makes the difference; it's what she is and how she conducts herself. If a girl is the right sort, she can walk through the world without meeting temptation, and she can be as good as gold, every minute of the time.

On the other hand, the girl who is always looking for adventure could be shut up in a cloister from her infancy, yet she would find temptation in some way, even if she had to break down the heavy doors of the building to find it.

It is a mistaken idea that high-strung, emotional women are the ones who succumb to the temper, but that is hardly so; it is rather the silly, empty-headed girl, whose bump of vanity is more largely developed than her good sense. This type of girl is not one whit more immune from temptation in the office or salesroom, or even in her own home, than she would be in a position that would keep her in the limelight of the public stage.

If there is any one thing more than another that girls should avoid, it is the use of slang. It is a common thing to hear really cultured girls, of wide intelect and good education, inject into their conversation, slang phrases that girls with less advantages would scorn to use. Somewhere, someone has said that the girls in the humbler walks of life, girls who are employed in stores and factories, cannot engage in ordinary conversation without using slang to a marked degree. While this may be said of some, it must be admitted with credit to the majority of working girls that the rule does not apply to them any more than to the class of young women known as ladies of leisure.

Because a girl has education and social position she has no more right to use slang than her less fortunate sister, who is more apt to be criticized. It should be avoided in all cases.

WHY SUPPER WAS NOT READY.

Some men think housework is done by magic. It was not at this house. The man went to work and the wife dressed three children for school, gave them breakfast, washed the wishes, made the beds, cleaned the windows, fed the canary bird and cat, finished the ironing, prepared luncheon for the family, scrubbed the front porch, sewed on an apron. The children came home, ate luncheon, and had to be washed a second time.

After this noonday repast the woman cleaned chickens for dinner, made a sponge cake, put a new binding on the dress she had been wearing for fifteen years, and set sponge to make bread the next day, cleaned the silver spoons, made a guimpe for the oldest girl's dress, and was making the gravy for supper when the man came in and said:

"Good gracious, isn't supper ready yet? What have you been doing all day?" She was too tired to tell him, so she just scraped the gravy into the bowl and called the unruly brood to dinner.

A VALENTINE SUGGESTION.

It is not too early to begin making some of the little hearts which you will use in February when you have your yearly feast for the little god of Love and your numerous friends. The paper hearts are sold, and candy ones are not all you desire, and you haven't the least talent in the world for painting them for place cards. Well, here is a new idea. Get your cards. You want right good sized ones, then cut out little white pasteboard hearts, dip them in melted paraffine which is made blood red with cochineal in the mixture. Lift out the little wax hearts and arrange in artistic style on the place cards. You can embellish the plates and many of the dishes in this manner. It is a very easy manner to scrape them off the dishes after the frolic is over.

To Make the Home Attractive.

The second floor hall is usually a large, unattractive room with no ornamental features to please the eye. If there is sufficient room to have a window seat at the front, make it cozy and inviting with a bright-colored couch and many fancy pillows in oriental style. Have the woodwork painted white, the walls papered in Japanese paper, and hang Japanese pictures on the wall. A small teakwood stand holding a palm or fern, and a small chair will produce a very pleasing effect in what has heretofore been a plain room.

Dr. W. Kempton Browning, of Park avenue, was a guest at the brilliant military wedding Friday at the Sacred Heart church, New Brunswick, when Miss Josephine Fox, daughter of the late Captain Fox, was married to Dr. William J. Condon, assistant surgeon of the Second Regiment of the New Jersey National Guard.

CARE OF THE HANDS.

Few hands are perfectly formed, yet the greatest change can be made if the nails are given proper attention. Soft nails are not so easily cared for as the thick white ones, and it is going to take time and patience to make beautiful the thin, ugly-shaped nails which break so easily. The hands should be washed in hot soap suds, holding the hands in the water until the skin is soft around the nails and can be pushed back with the paddle-end of the orange stick. When cleaning the underside of the nails, cover the tip of the orange stick with a soft handkerchief, and dip the point in lemon juice or some good nail bleach. Do not use paste on the nails, but scrub them thoroughly with hand sapollo and rub with the nail polisher until they are sufficiently glossy. This is the simple method of caring for the hands. If the nails are very brittle, do not try to give them the oval curve on the top; it is only an aggravation, for they are certain to creak, and the short round effect is more pleasing than long broken nails.

THE USE OF LACES.

The craze for laces invades every field. It is an adorable dress accessory, and women cling lovingly to the pretty trimmings. For a time lace was colored to match certain gowns. This was not popular, since anything but the standard colors, white, black and cream, was considered just a trifle superfluous in the eyes of the modistes after a short reign of colored or dipped laces.

A very handsome piece of lace shows a touch of hand-painting, so daintily and faintly blended over the flower designs in the lace as to give it the appearance of net over satin blossoms. When the work is carefully done the effect is very artistic, yet should not be carried to the extreme in decorative effect, or it will meet a similar fate as did the dipped laces.

Lace and chiffon will ever be popular, for nothing so far has been able to supplant the two articles which, when combined as a dress trimming, give lovely results.

Bigamist Gets Three Years.

Jersey City, Feb. 4.—Edward Snyder, the young man who elected to go to trial on a charge of bigamy but later refused, when he saw both wives in court, to call witnesses or testify himself, was sentenced by Judge John A. CHAPTER I.

The Will of John Marshall Glenarm.

Pickering's letter bringing news of my grandfather's death found me at Naples early in October. John Marshall Glenarm had died in June, leaving a will which gave me his property conditionally. Pickering wrote, and it was necessary for me to return immediately to qualify as legatee. It was by the merest luck that the letter came to my hands at all, for it had been sent to Constantinople, in care of the consul-general instead of my banker there, and it was not Pickering's fault that the consul was a friend of mine who kept track of my wanderings and was able to hurry the executor's letter after me to Italy, where I had gone to meet an English financier who had, I was advised, unlimited money to spend on African railways. I am an engineer, a graduate of an American institution familiarly known as "The Tech," and as my funds were running low I naturally turned to my profession for employment.

But this letter changed my plans, and the following day I cabled Pickering of my departure and was outward bound on a steamer for New York. Fourteen days later I sat in Pickering's office in the Alexis Building and listened intently while he read, with much ponderous emphasis, the provisions of my grandfather's will. When he concluded I laughed. Pickering was a serious man, and I was glad to see that my levity pained him. I had, for that matter, always been a source of annoyance to him, and his look of distrust and rebuke did not trouble me in the least.

I reached across the table for the paper, and he gave the sealed and beribboned copy of John Marshall Glenarm's will into my hands. I read it through for myself, feeling conscious meanwhile that Pickering's cool gaze was bent inquiringly upon me. These are the paragraphs that interested me most:

"I give and devise unto my said grandson, John Glenarm, sometime a resident of the city and state of New York, and later a vagabond of parts unknown, a certain property known as Glenarm House, with the lands and hereditaments thereunto pertaining and hereinafter more particularly described, and all personal effects, goods and other property that may be located in the premises and on the land herein described,—the said realty lying in the county of Wabana in the state of Indiana,—upon this condition, faithfully and honestly performed:

"That said John Glenarm shall remain an occupant of said Glenarm House and of my lands appurtenant thereto, demeaning himself meanwhile in an orderly and temperate manner. Should he fail at any time during said year to comply with this provision, said property shall at once revert to my general estate, shall become, without reservation and without necessity for any process of law, the property, absolutely, of Marian Devereux, of the county and state of New York."

"Well," he demanded, striking his hands upon the arms of his chair, "what do you think of it?"

For the life of me I could not help laughing again. There was, in the first place, a delicious irony in the fact that I should learn through him of my grandfather's wishes with respect to myself. Pickering and I had grown up in the same town in Vermont; we had attended the same preparatory school, but there had been from boyhood a certain antagonism between us. He had always succeeded where I failed, which is to say, I must admit, that he had succeeded pretty frequently. When I refused to settle down to my profession, but chose to see something of the world first, Pickering gave himself seriously to the law, and there was, I knew from the beginning, no manner of chance that he would fail.

I am not more or less than human, and I remembered with joy that once I had thrashed him soundly at the prep school for bullying a smaller boy, but our score from school days was not without tallies on his side. He was easily the better scholar—I grant him that; and he was shrewd and plausible. You never quite knew the extent of his powers and resources, and he had, I always mantained, the most amazing good luck,—as witness the fact that John Marshall Glenarm had taken a friendly interest in him. It was wholly like my grandfather, who was a man of many whims, to give his affairs into Pickering's keeping; and I could not complain, for I had missed my own chance with him. It was, I knew readily enough, part of my punishment for having succeeded so signally in incurring my grandfather's displeasure that he had made it necessary for me to treat with Arthur Pickering in this matter of the will; and Pickering was enjoying the situation to the full.

But there was something not wholly honest in my mirth, for my conduct during the three preceding years had been reprehensible. I had used my grandfather shabbily. My parents died when I was a child, and he had cared for me as far back as my memory ran. He had suffered me to spend the fortune left by my father without restraint; he had expected much of me, and I had grievously disappointed him. It was his hope that I should devote myself to architecture, a profession for which he had the greatest admiration, whereas I had insisted on engineering.

I am not writing an apology for my life, and I shall not attempt to extenuate my conduct in going abroad at the end of my course at Tech and, making Laurance Donovan's acquaintance, setting off with him on a career of adventure. I do not regret, though possibly it would be more to my credit if I did, the months spent in leisurely following the Danube east of the Iron Gate—Laurance Donovan always with me, while we urged the villagers and inn-loafers to all manner of sedition, acquitting ourselves so well that, when we came out into the Black sea for further pleasure, Russia did us the honor to keep a spy at our heels. I should like, for my own satisfaction, at least, to set down an account of certain affairs in which we were concerned at Belgrad, but without Larry's consent I am not at liberty to do so. Nor shall I take time here to describe our travels in Africa, though our study of the Atlas mountain dwarfs won us honorable mention by the British Ethnological Society.

These were my yesterdays; but today I sat in Arthur Pickering's office in the towering Alexis Building, conscious of the muffled roar of Broadway, discussing the terms of my grandfather Glenarm's will with a man whom I disliked as heartily as it is safe for one man to dislike another. Pickering had asked me a question, and I was suddenly aware that his eyes were fixed upon me and that he awaited my answer.

"What do I think of it?" I repeated. "I don't know that it makes any difference what I think, but I'll tell you, if you want to know, that I call it infamous, outrageous, that a man should leave a ridiculous will of that sort behind him. All the old money-bags who pile up fortunes magnify the importance of their money. They imagine that every kindness, every ordinary courtesy shown them, is merely a bid for a slice of the cake. I'm disappointed in my grandfather. He was a splendid old man, though God knows he had his queer ways. I'll bet a thousand dollars, if I have so much money in the world, that this scheme is yours, Pickering, and not his. It smacks of your ancient vindictiveness, and John Marshall Glenarm had none of that in his blood. That stipulation about my residence out there is fantastic. I don't have to be a lawyer to know that; and no doubt I could break the will; I've a good notion to try it, anyhow."

"To be sure. You can tie up the estate for a half dozen years if you like," he replied coolly. He did not look upon me as likely to become a formidable litigant. My staying qualities had been proved weak long ago, as Pickering knew well enough.

"No doubt you would like that," I answered. "But I'm not going to give you the pleasure. I abide by the terms of the will. My grandfather was a fine old gentleman. I shan't drag his name through the courts,—not even to please you, Arthur Pickering." I declared hotly.

"The sentiment is worthy of a good man, Glenarm," he rejoined.

"But this woman who is to succeed to my rights,—I don't seem to remember her."

"It is not surprising that you never heard of her."

"Then she's not a connection of the family,—no long-lost cousin whom I ought to remember?"

"No; she was a late acquaintance of your grandfather. He met her through an old friend of his,—Miss Evans, known as Sister Theresa. Miss Devereux is Sister Theresa's niece."

I whistled. I had a dim recollection that during my grandfather's long widowerhood there were occasional reports that he was about to marry. The name of Miss Evans had been mentioned in this connection. I had heard it spoken of in my family, and not, I remembered, with much kindness. Later I heard of her joining a Sisterhood, and opening a school somewhere in the West.

"And Miss Devereux,—is she an elderly nun, too?"

"I don't know how elderly she is, but she isn't a nun at present. Still, she's very much alone in the world, and she and Sister Theresa are very intimate."

"Pass the will again, Pickering, while I make sure I grasp these diverting ideas. Sister Theresa isn't the one I mustn't marry is she? It's the other ecclesiastical embroidery artist,—the one with the "x" in her name, suggesting the algebra of my vanishing youth."

I read aloud this paragraph:

"Provided, further, that in event said John Glenarm aforesaid shall marry the said Marian Devereux, or in the event of any promise or contract of marriage between said persons within five years from the date of said John Glenarm's acceptance of the provisions of this will, the whole estate shall become the property absolutely of St. Agatha's School, at Annandale, Wabana county, Indiana, a corporation under the laws of said state."

"For a touch of comedy commend me to my grandfather! Pickering, you always were a well-meaning fellow,—I'll turn over to you all my right, interest and title in and to these angelic Sisters. Marry! I like the idea! I suppose some one will try to marry me for my money. Marriage, Pickering, is not embraced in my scheme of life!"

"I should hardly call you a marrying man," he observed.

"Perfectly right, my friend! Sister Theresa was considered a possible match for my grandfather in my youth. I'm quite out of it with her. And the other lady with the fascinating algebraic climax to her name,—she, too, is impossible; it seems that I can't get the money by marrying her. I'd better let her take it. She's as poor as the devil, I dare say."

"I imagine not. The Evanses are a wealthy family, in spots, and she ought to have some money of her own, if her aunt doesn't coax it out of her for educational schemes."

"And where on the map are these lovely creatures to be found?"

"Sister Theresa's school adjoins your preserve; Miss Devereux has, I think, some of your own weakness for travel. Sister Theresa is her nearest relative, and she occasionally visits St. Agatha's—that's the school."

"I suppose they embroider altar-cloths together and otherwise labor valiantly to bring confusion upon satan and his cohorts. Just the people to pull the wool over the eyes of my grandfather!"

Pickering smiled at my resentment.

TALK OF SECOND LEAGUE

Part of the General "Fanning" as to West End Nines.

A. T. A. B. NINE LIKELY

Would Draw Support of St. Mary's Followers and Lead to Rivalry of the Glad Days of Yore.

Plans have practically been completed for the consolidation of the Suburban baseball nine with the Hope chapel Y. M. A. team, under the latter's name. Most of the Suburbans are chapelites and the transition will seem quite natural to them.

In connection with the strengthening of the Suburbans report of the prospective rising of other new stars among the amateur nines are heard. It is said that the T. A. B. Society, which has revived its youth and has started forth on lines of renewed activity, is planning to put a team in the field. A T. A. B. team will offer a great vista of hot games to the Y. M. A. The following of a T. A. B. team would be largely that of the old St. Mary's team, and the return of the sizzling rivalry of the halcyon days of West End baseball would attend the coming of the new team.

It is a settled thing that the Y. M. A. team will apply for a franchise to the Intercity League. It is pretty nearly as settled a thing that the application will be refused, but the Y. M. A. will go through the motions of knocking at the door and put the whole matter right up to the league. The Y. M. A. supporters appreciate the difficulty under which the league will be regarding the enlargement of membership, but it is felt that the league should have the chance of refusing the team after careful consideration and not on a snap decision. As like as not, the T. A. B. team, if shaped up in time, would also ask for a franchise. If the league had a chance to take in a A. T. B. team and a Y. M. A. team and did it, the "magnates" could be very certain that record-breaking attendance at West End games was assured.

One of the side lines of talk run out from the central batch of gossip deals with the possibility of a second league. Westfield has the making of a team and an ambition to shine in the baseball world, and Somerville yearns a bit that way also. The second league might make as swift a run as could be desired by the teams and their followers, but it is to be confessed by all concerned at this stage that the project is not what might be called exactly well defined.

BOWLING

The Park Club bowling team, which has practically won the championship in the Central Journal Bowling League tournament, will roll the Westfield Club at Westfield on Thursday night.

Montclair Will Meet Plainfield.

The management of the Montclair High School is out early with its schedule of baseball games for the coming season. Captain Wilson has issued a call for the candidates to report a week from today for practice. The school promises to have the strongest team in its history. Games have been scheduled with Plainfield High School, Peddie Institute, DeWitt Clinton, East Orange, Newark Academy, Newark High School, Stevens Prep. The game with Plainfield High School is scheduled to be played in this city May 11.

Victory and Lunch.

The junior basketball five of the Y. M. C. A. defeated the Summit juniors Saturday, 36 to 16, in a hot game. The Summit boys, with Physical Director Frank Marclay, who is an old Plainfielder, were entertained at lunch after the game.

Ten-Year-Old Sent Home.

Arthur Lanning, the wandering ten-year-old from Washington, this State, was sent home Saturday afternoon by the police. He went alone. Right after he started Chief Kiely got a telegram from the boy's father, Stewart Lanning, saying he would come for him. The Chief telegraphed back and caught him before he started for here. No other word has been received from Washington, and the police suppose Arthur got home all right.

Some Tragedy Ahead.

The Lotus Glee Club will appear in the Y. M. C. A. Star Course tomorrow night. "The Tragedy of a Grasshopper" will be sung.

SOLE INHABITANT OF PLUM ISLAND DROWNED.

Younkins, Frugal Fisherman, Fell Through Ice and Was Swept Under—Lived in a Hut.

The body of Gustave Younkins, the sole resident of Plum Island, in the Shrewsbury River near Highlands, was recovered yesterday. Younkins, who had been engaged in the fishing industry on the Shrewsbury for many years, was drowned on Tuesday night while crossing the ice below the Highlands drawbridge. He was alone when he went through the ice on a thin spot in the channel. He vainly tried to save his life. As fast as he grasped the edge of the ice it gave away, and, with the strong current against him, he had no chance of escape.

The fisherman's cries for help were heard, and Joseph Layton, with others, started with a boat toward the spot; but before they arrived the fisherman had been sucked under the ice and was not afterward seen.

Younkins was forty-five years old and unmarried. He was sober and industrious and from his frugal earnings had saved more than $800, which he had deposited in the Atlantic Highlands National Bank. He lived alone in a hut on Plum Island, which is now without an inhabitant.

HEIGHTS TO BE DEVELOPED.

William Jeffrey to Devote All His Time to Enterprise.

William Jeffery, the well-known real estate broker, has decided to give his entire time to the development of the Berkeley Heights property, and the property of the Berkeley Heights Association in Plainfield. He will retain an office in the Jeffery building on Park avenue, but will probably lease the store on the first floor for a commercial line.

Mr. Jeffery, who altered the building on Park avenue, occupied by him, for his own business, has been engaged in developing land on the Lackawanna Railroad in addition to his Plainfield real estate business. The new ferry service of the Lackawanna Railroad, and the additional improvements which are proposed, together with the McAdoo Tunnel, are creating such a demand for property at Berkeley Heights and the immediate neighborhood, that Mr. Jeffrey has arranged to give all of his time to this enterprise. He is now building a picturesque office building opposite the station at Berkeley Heights and near the bungalow residence that he recently built and the coming season promises to be a busy and successful one.

CHANGE IN BILL.

New Artists Secured For Elks' Vaudeville Benefit.

Because of the artists going on long tours unexpectedly, several changes have been made in the bill for the Elks' vaudeville benefit Wednesday night, but the standard has not been changed any.

Almont and Dumont, high class musical artists, will take the place of the Musical Nosses and Lawrence and Harrington have been substituted for the Fitzgibbon-McCoy Trio. As an added attraction Hansen and Nelson, the clever soubrette team, has been secured.

The programme as now arranged will be one of the best ever seen in the city and the fact that tickets are selling fast for both matinee and night performances shows that local people are aware of its merits.

Accused Man Gets Bail.

Cranford, Feb. 4.—John Staffen, who was charged by Alfred Heitman, a trolley car conductor, with holding him up at the point of a pistol on Tuesday night, and was committed to the county jail in default of $200 bail by Justice of the Peace W. W. Mendell on Thursday, was bailed out by Carl Teichman, a builder. Teichman declares that it is a case of mistaken identity and that he and six others saw the accused man on the night of the holdup at a saengerfest in a Garwood hotel.

Funeral of Miss Morris.

The funeral services of Miss Elizabeth Crary Morris were held this morning at 10:30 o'clock from the residence of her nephew, Edward Morris VanBuren, on Central avenue. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, of which Miss Morris was a communicant, officiated. The interment was in the family plot in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

DRYDEN WITHDRAWERS

upon the use of his name in this connection and declared that he was out for the re-election of Mr. Dryden on the ground that he was the logical candidate, having waged the fight at the primaries and at the general election. It is known, however, that Mr. Dryden's friends have been urging the treasurer to enter the contest since it became apparent that the Prudential's president could not win.

Senator Ackerman's Statement.

In the withdrawal of Senator John F. Dryden as a candidate for re-election, State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, and Assemblyman Randolph Perkins, of Westfield, have played a most important part. It was Senator Ackerman, who, closely following the last election, declared his opposition to the re-election of Mr. Dryden and he maintained that position from the first. It was Mr. Ackerman that took the initiative in the matter and the fact that eight other members of the Legislature stood by him, made Mr. Dryden's re-election impossible.

It is also conceded by prominent politicians throughout Union and Essex counties, as well as the State, that the statements made by Senator Ackerman setting forth his reasons for opposing Mr. Dryden, have been largely instrumental in bringing about the withdrawal of Mr. Dryden as a candidate for re-election.

When questioned by a Daily Press reporter concerning Mr. Dryden's withdrawal, Senator Ackerman made the following statement:

"I regret exceedingly to learn of Senator Dryden's illness and trust it is nothing serious. His withdrawal from the Senatorial contest can only be regarded as an act of generosity which will tend to cement and strengthen the Republican party whereby we can present a solid front to our friends the Democrats next fall. I respect his age and accomplishments and I am sure all will unite in giving him credit for trying to serve the State while serving as Senator in Washington.

"John W. Griggs has been my candidate and all should recognize his capacity and commanding intellect. If South Jersey feels that the Senatorship should go there Governor Stokes would be an ideal selection if the legal aspect of his availability were as clearly intrenched in the minds of all the other Republican representatives as it is in my own mind. In any event it seems fitting at this time that a gentleman should be selected who will measure up to the expectations of the people for disinterested Statesmanship."

Union County for Briggs.

Nearly all of the representatives of both branches of the Legislature are now in Trenton and preparing for tonight's session when the question of electing a successor to United States Senator John F. Dryden will be settled.

The concensus of opinion now is that State Treasurer Frank O. Briggs will be the candidate and will be elected unanimously by the Republican members. Union county appears to be solid for him and in fact all seems harmony within the ranks of the G. O. P.

It is expected that when the first ballot is taken tonight the various members will cast a vote for the "favorite sons," and when the second ballot is taken the unanimous vote of the Republican members of the Legislature will be for Briggs. He seems to be acceptable to all and the one most talked about for the place.

If Mr. Briggs is elected United States Senator, that will leave the office of State treasurer vacant. In this event it is expected that Daniel G. Voorhees, of Morristown, will be chosen for the place, in fact he is the only one prominently mentioned for the vacancy should one exist.

THINK HIM A HIGHWAYMAN.

Revolver and Mask on Prisoner—Some Recent Hold-Ups.

Morris Epstein, of No. 86 Columbia street, New York, is a prisoner in the Hackensack jail, on suspicion of being a highwayman. He was first arrested for brutally beating a horse. When searched a revolver and a mask were found on him. The authorities placed his bail at $1,000, so that an investigation could be made.

Epstein says he was sent from New York by Sol Fire, proprietor of a saloon at No. 252 Rivington street, to help in moving Fire's furniture from Ridgefield to Manhattan. This the local authorities think is only a pretext.

George McClennan, a broker, was brutally beaten and robbed by two highwaymen at Ridgefield recently. He failed to identify Epstein in the Hackensack jail yesterday.

May Organize Missionary Society.

An invitation is extended to all young women in the West End, and members of the Hape Chapel Sunday-school, to meet in the chapel tonight for the purpose of discussing the advisability of organizing a Young Ladies' Missionary Society. Mrs. L. R. Howard will be in charge of the meeting.

Eugene O'Reilly, formerly of this city, but now proprietor of the Meeker Inn, at Union, is in town today visiting friends. "Gene" has practically recovered from the knee affection that bothered him for so long and is enjoying good health otherwise.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Superintendent E. E. Parvin, of Warren chapel Sunday-school, will entertain the teachers and officers of the school at his home Thursday night, February 14.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold a business meeting and social tonight at the home of the pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn, on East Ninth street.

A valentine social will be held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Marcus L. Clawson, corner of Fifth street and Park avenue, tomorrow night, under the auspices of the Seventh-Day Baptist Christian Endeavor Society.

"Ye Village Wablers" or "Ye Maidens" and "Ye Skulemaster" will be given Thursday night at St. Stephen's church parish house at 8 o'clock. This will be the last entertainment in the present series by St. Faith's Guild.

The Ladies' Aid Society of St. Peter's German Lutheran church will meet at the home of Mrs. Charles Smith, 51 Craig place, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Young People's Society will meet Thursday night at the parsonage, No. 2 Stone street.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Circle of the Park Avenue Baptist church will meet at the home of Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson, on East Seventh street, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The programme will be in charge of Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. George E. Hall.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel will meet tomorrow night and pack a box of useful articles to be sent to R. D. Schoonmaker, a missionary from the Crescent Avenue church, who is engaged in work among the Mountain Whites of North Carolina.

Under the auspices of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church an indoor picnic will be held in Vincent chapel, Friday night, February 15. The programme will include all the festivities of an outdoor affair. A silver offering will be received for the flower fund of the church.

GAY OFFICER A WINNER.

Father Says Twins Were Captivated By Married Lieutenant.

Somerville, Feb. 4.—Lieutenant Emmet Workman, of Company M, Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., has been arrested by County Detective Totten on a charge of desertion and non-support, preferred by his wife before Justice of the Peace Sutphen. He was held under $700 bail, and, as he was unable to obtain a bondsman, he was locked up. Workman was held in high esteem by the members of his company, and his arrest surprised them.

Nicholas Teeter, a builder, of South Bound Brook, applied for a warrant for the arrest of Workman, who he charged with abducting his twin daughters, Bessie and Alice, aged 17 years. Teeter stated that Workman, who had been parading as a single man in South Bound Brook for the past year, had been paying marked attention to his daughter, Bessie, and had given her many costly presents of jewelry. His daughter, Teeter says, had became infatuated with Workman, and, despite the objection of her parents, had vowed that she would marry the handsome lieutenant when she reached her eighteenth birthday. Teeter says he recently discovered that Workman was a married man and so informed his daughter. His daughter refused to believe this statement. Bessie left her home, and was followed by her twin sister, Alice. The lieutenant's arrest on the desertion charge followed.

POLICE IN A NIGHT RAID.

Reserves Swoop Upon Alleged Disorderly House.

Two excise arrests were made in Jersey City yesterday for violation of the Bishops' law against the selling of liquor on Sunday. The victims were Owen Foley, who has a saloon at No. 371 Johnston avenue, and Henry Behrens, who keeps a place at No. 471 Jackson avenue. Both men were arrested by Patrolman Tulock and both were bailed to appear in the First Criminal Court this morning.

Martin Ormsby, of No. 76 Gregory street, was arrested on a charge of keeping a disorderly house in allowing music without a license. His place was raided late Saturday night by Inspector Monahan and reserves, who also arrested three women found there. The women were also held.

"The Village Choirmaster."

Social activities at Hope chapel will be revived on Washington's Birthday by the presentation of the "The Village Choirmaster," under the auspices of the members of Judge Runyon's Bible class. The entertainment will be featured with several unique ideas and will consist chiefly of the rendition of oldtime songs. A chorus of fifty voices, young men and young women, will be trained for the event by Judge Runyon, rehearsals to begin Friday night of this week. Judge Runyon will appear in the role of the choirmaster while the choristers will be attired in "rube" costumes.

Taking Inventory!

We are taking inventory this week and will announce later the result. We do not intend to carry over one Suit or Overcoat of this winter's stock. Notwithstanding our immense reorganization sale, which, by the way, carried off thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise and pleased hundreds of our customers, we have considerable winter stock left, and also find that it consists mostly of the higher priced goods, and in order to clean up entirely after inventory we will still further reduce the price so

PERSONAL.

Miss Margaret Fitch, of this city, has been visiting friends at Sag Harbor, L. I.

Miss Nellie Vermeule, of Jackson avenue, has been visiting friends at Tuckahoe.

Mrs. James R. Blair, of Duer street, is convalescing from an attack of the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miles, of Somerset street, have been visiting friends at Keyport.

Norris Kent, of Milton, Pa., visited Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Templin, of North avenue, yesterday.

Miss Ethel Clarkson, of Orchard place, is detained at home with a severe attack of bronchitis.

Edward Mundy, of Harmony street, is detained at home with a severe attack of pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Wilson, of Sycamore avenue, are among the visitors registered at Atlantic City.

George Beggs, of Manning avenue, has recovered from an injury to his ear, received in a slight accident while at work.

Mrs. William A. Woodruff, of East Second street, who has been detained by an attack of the grip, is able to be about the house.

Howard Willett, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Willett, of Craig place, who underwent an operation at the hospital for mastoditis, has been removed to his home and is rapidly recovering.

Philip Weinberger's Travels.

Philip Weinberger, son of the late Max Weinberger, who went away from home last September, and who has been travelling through the west ever since, returned home last night from Summit, where he had been spending a few days with his uncle. During his absence, the young man has visited California, Denver, Cleveland, Chicago, Buffalo, Baltimore and many other large cities. He secured a position in Baltimore as an assistant to a wealthy man, who spent his time travelling for pleasure and he accompanied the Baltimore man to California.

THINGS TO REMEMBER.

Glycerine and lemon juice will clear the voice when one has suffered from sore throat.

Chloroform and oil of cloves will instantly cure toothache. Placed on cotton and inserted in the ear is a speedy relief for earache.

Soda and borax is an excellent dentifrice.

Lemon juice will polish shoes that do not need to be blackened.

Tan goods can be cleaned with a mixture of corn starch and corn meal.

A mixture of beeswax, tallow, lard and camphor made into a plaster is one of the best known remedies for children who have the croup. It is an old recipe, tried and true, one well worth remembering. Make a bib of woolen, put the plaster on warm and relief will be given almost immediately.

ANSWERS MR. BUTTFIELD

Council Committee Tells what It Will Cost Borough to Use City Sewage System.

GIVES FLAT RATE

Quotes $25 Per Million Gallons for a Term of Ten Years, Provided It is Legal.

The street committee of the Common Council to which was referred the communication of W. J. Buttfield, secretary, of the North Plainfield Sewage Commission, in which he sought information as to conditions, terms, etc., whereby the borough might secure sanitary sewers by connecting with Plainfield's system, reported at the February meeting of the Common Council, last night, through the chairman, Mr. Ginna. The report was adopted and the city clerk was authorized to communicate the same to Mr. Buttfield. The report follows:

"The committee on streets and sewers would report as follows upon the petition of W. J. Buttfield, secretary of the North Plainfield Sewage Commission.

"Your committee would recommend as a preliminary understanding that in order to accommodate our neighboring borough, the city make a contract, provided it has a legal right to do so, to treat the sewage from the Borough of North Plainfield for a term of ten years at the rate of $25 per million gallons. It should be understood that the proposed sewage system in the borough shall be so constructed as to exclude infiltration of ground water, in order that it may be possible to predict, with reasonable certainty, what amount of sewage may be expected.

"To this end the plans of the proposed system, and the construction, material and workmanship of the same shall be subject to approval by an engineer for the city, the expense of such examination and inspection to be paid by the borough, but such examination and inspection not to be construed to relieve the borough from the responsibility of securing tight sewers.

"It is expected that an addition to the contact beds would need to be made in about two years and it is suggested that at the expiration of eight years notice may be given by either party that the agreement shall terminate at the end of the ten years' period."

CITY FINDS IT CANNOT COLLECT A PERSONAL TAX

WAS LEVIED AGAINST W. H. NEILSON AS TRUSTEE.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh communicated with the Common Council at its meeting last night, regarding the action brought against the city by Rev. W. H. Nielson, of East Ninth street, to have set aside an assessment of $675 on $50,000 worth of personal property in New York. The assessment was made against Mr. Nielson as trustee for Mrs. Anna Nielson, who has never resided in the State and who is now in a sanitarium in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Nielson appeared before the tax commissioners of New York and swore off the tax claiming that he was not a resident of New York, but of New Jersey. Then the local assessor, Charles H. Hand, of the Second Ward, in which Mr. Nielson resides, made the assessment which was confirmed by the Board. Mr. Neilson then brought an action against the city about a month ago to have the assessment set aside, on the grounds that he is a trustee for the property of Mrs. Nielson, and that the custody of the property ih in the hands of the Supreme Court, of New York.

Mr. Marsh stated that the city could not collect the tax, that a proper return of the writ had been made and he asked that the Common Council pass a resolution authorizing him to apply to the Supreme Court, of New York to have the suit terminated. It is understood by both parties that there shall be no expense attached to the city in the matter. Later Mr. Mellick offered a resolution, which was adopted, giving Mr. Marsh the authority he requested.

ASSESSOR HUBBARD WITHDRAWS RESIGNATION

INFORMS MAYOR FISK, HOWEVER, HE WILL SERVE ONLY FOR ONE YEAR.

At the earnest solicitation of Mayor Fisk and other friends, Tax Assessor Joseph A. Hubbard has consented to withdraw his resignation, presented the first of the year and to serve the city as assessor from the Third Ward until January 1, 1908. He emphatically tells the Mayor, however, that he will not serve any longer than this year.

Mr. Hubbard in explaining his reasons for wishing to retire as assessor, told Mayor Fisk that he is now seventy-seven years old and that he has held the position long enough. He considers that he earned a rest from official duty. It was only at the urgent request of Mr. Fisk that Mr. Hubbard changed his mind.

In the meantime Mr. Fisk may perfect his plan of having a tax commission of three members, which was suggested the first of the year. It is understood that Mr. Fisk has some pronounced views on the question of assessment and taxation and he believes that a commission is the proper means to secure the best results. This system has been found to work well in other cities.

SCHOOL BOARD MILDLY SLAPS COLLECTOR'S WRIST

MEMBERS DO NOT LIKE TARDINESS IN RECEIVING MONEY REPORT.

Mildly, but sternly, the official wrist of Collector John W. Murray, Jr., was slapped by the Board of Education, at its monthly meeting, last night. The chastisement followed Secretary F. T. Woodhull's announcement that the collector's monthly report on school moneys had not been received.

"That has happened once or twice before, hasn't it?" asked Mr. Woodhull of Clerk F. B. Clark.

"The collector said we could have it tomorrow," reported Mr. Clark. "He said the Council met tonight."

"What has the Council got to do with our money?" asked Mr. Abbott, looking as if he feared a new game was being worked on the board.

"I think the Board ought to take some action," said President Probasco. "This has happened several times lately."

"A resolution was passed two months ago, requesting the collector to be prompt," said the clerk.

There was no further comment. The Board tacitly agreed to give the collector another chance.

E. M. Cave was the only absentee from the meeting, in spite of the baby blizzard. The session was brief and but little business was done.

Iron stairways to go under the fire exits on each side of the High School auditorium were voted. The stairways will be about eight feet high. When the wings provided for in the plans are erected the stairways will be rendered unnecessary. Their cost has not been estimated but it will not be large.

Superintendent H. M. Maxson was authorized to attend the annual meeting of the National Association of School Superintendents, at Chicago, February 25, as the representative of the Plainfield schools. It has been customary to send Dr. Maxson to the convention yearly.

The president announced the following committees for 1907: Teachers and Text-Books, Probasco, Lovell, Abbott; fuel, Cave, Lovell, Woodhull; books, stationery and supplies, Woodhull, Cave, Probasco; finance, Lovell, Abbott, Cave; buildings and repairs, Abbott, Woodhull, Cave.

A Finished Performance Assured.

In presenting "The Chimes of Normandy," at the Casino on Thursday night, the Plainfield Operatic Association expects to eclipse all previous efforts in amateur opera work. The members have been rehearsing for several weeks and have attained a degree of efficiency that promises an exceptional production. The music is very catchy and is sure to be well received. With a well trained chorus of sixty, an orchestra of thirteen pieces and fine soloists a finished performance is assured. Tickets can be had at Armstrong's pharmacy.

Mound Builders and Cliff-Dwellers.

An interesting paper on the "Mound Builders and Cliff-Dwellers" of the far away past was presented by Mrs. George H. Campbell at the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club, held yesterday at the Casino. Discussion of the paper followed. Mrs. F. O. Herring, president of the club last year, was present and gave a brief account of life at Saranac in the Adirondacks and reported continued improvement in the health of Mr. Herring.

REPLIES TO HUGH FOX

Mrs. Kelley Meets the Exceptions Taken to Monday Club Lecture.

NEW JERSEY'S RECORD

How the State Went From a Crusaders' White List To Their Black List—Consumers' League's Aims.

Mrs. Florence Kelley, general secretary of the National Consumers' League and an active advocate of child labor reform, has made a statement in reply to Hugh F. Fox, of this city, president of the State Board of Charities, who took up the gage in defense of New Jersey's child labor laws in The Daily Press last month, after Mrs. Kelley's criticism of those laws in an address before the Monday Afternoon Club was published. In a letter to The Daily Press, under date of February 4, Mrs. Kelley says:

"I have just received a copy of the Press of January 8, containing a report of my address to the Monday Afternoon Club on the preceding day. I spoke without notes and rapidly, so that the report quite naturally omits some essential qualifications, and in one case substitutes a different bill for the Beveridge child labor bill. The intent of the report is so obviously fair and friendly that I feel sure you will print my statement as conspicuously as the original report, the more so as we are all alike desirous of having the best conditions for the children in all the States, a thing impossible without a widespread, accurate knowledge of conditions as they actually are.

"My criticism is directed to the statutes of New Jersey, not the enforcement thereof. The child labor and educational statutes of New Jersey are gravely defective in four important respects—as to an educational requirement for children about to begin to work; as to the scope of the child labor law, which applies only to children engaged in manufacture; as to the hours of labor, and as to the appointment of truant officers.

"1. The New Jersey child labor law does not, like the law of New York require that, before beginning to work, a child must have attended a school in which it has received instruction in reading, writing, arithmetic, geography and English grammar, the arithmetic to be "up to and including fractions," and the child to be specifically examined as to its ability to read fluently and write simple sentences in the English language. Nor does the New Jersey law require, like the law of Illinois, that the child must be able to read and write (in some language). Nor does the New Jersey law, like that of Massachusetts, require that the child under the age of 16 years must, before beginning to work, be able to read and write in the English language sufficiently to get into the third grade of the public schools. In New Jersey a child under 14 years of age must go to school, but it need not learn anything. Or a child may come to the State between the ages of 14 and 16 years and go to work immediately, although newly arrived from Russia, Syria, Croatia, Italy or any other country, and wholly illiterate. It need prove only its age.

"2. The child labor law of New Jersey applies only to factories and workshops, not to stores or offices. It gives no protection to messenger and telegraph boys, or to cash boys or girls. In this respect it is less effective than similar laws in New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Oregon.

"3. The best child labor law is always a compulsory education law requiring the children to be in school throughout the school year and vigorously enforced throughout the State. The compulsory education law of New Jersey leaves each locality free not to appoint a truant officer and some of the glass-manufacturing communities appoint no truant officers, or appoint them for so few weeks in the year that the children are free to go to work, being in the factories until the factory inspectors discover them.

"4. The saddest chapter is that which deals with the hours of labor. In this respect New Jersey was, for eleven years from 1892 to 1903, in advance of all the State and nations. The law of 1892 prohibited the employment of women and minors longer than 55 hours in one week, ten hours in one day, after 6 p. m. on any day, and afternoon on Saturday. There were excepted canneries, fruit preserving establishments and glassworks. Overtime was prohibited sweepingly. Although this law was not enforced by numerous prosecutions, and although no case arising under it was carried to the highest court in the State, it was obeyed by many law-abiding employers.

"The International Association for Labor Legislation printed a white list of the States and nations graded

REPUBLICANS STILL DISCUSSING CANDIDATE

Senator Ackerman Said to be Holding Out on Selection of Briggs.

MINORITY FOR MARTINE

In Caucus This Morning Plainfielder Is the Unanimous Choice of the Democratic Side.

According to the slate the New Jersey Legislature was scheduled to go into joint caucus at 12 o'clock noon today, following a caucus of the two parties held this morning, to select the successor of Senator John F. Dryden. The Democrats held their caucus and were ready for the joint session shortly after noon, but the Republicans were still in caucus and at 2 o'clock this afternoon it looked as though it would be several hours before they would be ready to meet with the Democrats.

The latest reports gives State Treasurer Frank O. Briggs forty votes for United States Senator, and it is reported that Senator Ackerman is one of those holding out on the question of making Mr. Briggs the party candidate. It was reported that he was not satisfied in his own mind as to whether Mr. Briggs would be acceptable to the people of the State. It is understood that Mr. Ackerman's choice for the office has been John W. Griggs.

Another report received late this afternoon says that Senator Colby is satisfied with Mr. Briggs and is ready to enter the joint session and vote for him as the party's candidate. From present indications it looks as though the result of the caucus would depend upon the action of Senator Ackerman.

Democrats Honor Martine.

When the Democrats of the New Jersey Legislature held their caucus this morning, James E. Martine was made the unanimous choice as the party's candidate for United States Senator to succeed John F. Dryden. The session was not a lengthy one and it did not take much time for the Democrats to unite upon Mr. Martine. While, of course, his election is improbable, the decision of the caucus is considered a fine compliment to the "farmer orator," and leader of his party in Union county.

The mention of his name for the office in the first instance was a great surprise to him for he had not the slightest intimation from any source that he would be considered with so many other candidates in the field. In connection with the choice of Mr. Martine for the office of United States Senator, there is a strong and persistent rumor throughout Trenton today that he will be the Democratic nominee for Governor next year. There is a growing sentiment that the recent actions of the Republican members of the Legislature has not tended to strengthen the party's position and that a candidate like Mr. Martine would have an unusual chance for success in the contest for the office of chief executive of the State.

Reed for State Treasurer?

Another name mentioned for the office of State treasurer, in case Mr. Briggs is elected United States Senator, is that of Former Senator Chas. A. Reed. In certain political circles at Trenton today he is considered a strong factor and it would not be surprising if he should be appointed to fill the vacancy. "Davy" Baird, of South Jersey, who has been a candidate to succeed Mr. Dryden, was said to have secured twenty votes, last night, but in the meantime the Briggs faction got busy and rallied forty votes for its candidate.

FRANK O. BRIGGS ELECTED

Trenton, Feb. 5.—State Treasurer Frank O. Briggs was elected United States Senator this afternoon, succeeding John F. Dryden. The joint session of the Legislature convened at 3:29 and by 3:45 the election was over. Mr. Briggs received forty-one votes, all the Republicans present, except Senators Ackerman and Colby, voting for him. Mr. Ackerman voted for John W. Griggs, while Mr. Colby voted for Mahlon Pitney.

Martin B. Hutchinson nominated Mr. Briggs and it was seconded by Assemblyman Perkins. Senator W. H. Gebhart nominated James E. Martine as the choice of the Democrats and he received thirty-five votes. Three Republican members were absent.

PLAN A $75,000 SCHOOL

That is What the Darrow Avenue Structure Will Cost.

HURRY CONSTRUCTION

Board of Education Faces Urgent Need For More School Room—New School Will Furnish Margin of Room.

Facing an immediate need for the building, the Board of Education is gathering its energies for as speedy an erection of the proposed new school at Darrow avenue and Essex street as is possible. The necessity for the school is present and urgent, and the structure will be made a fact as rapidly as the preparations, which include designing and contracting, as well as the actual work on the building itself, can be worked through.

The school is to be a twelve-room structure, most likely of brick, and will cost in the neighborhood of $75,000. The lot has already been purchased at a cost of about $4,500. It will be fireproof from top to bottom, with terra cotta lining between the doors and other features of safety from flames. It will be ready for service by September of next year. No name for the school has been considered.

It is probable that Walter Cook, who advised the Board in its choice of plans for the new high school, will again be employed to perform the same service in connection with the designs for the Darrow avenue school. Whether or not there is to be an architectural competition, as in the case of the high school, has not been decided.

In a statement to a Daily Press reporter last night, Charles F. Abbott, chairman of the building committee of the Board of Education, said that every school building in the city was now full, and that every schoolroom with the exception of one was crowded. In four or five rooms there are two classes, one going into session as the other ends. The Bryant School is full to overflowing, with certain classes on half time.

With the opening of the new school this condition—which will be aggravated by the time the school is ready—will be relieved completely. At least four rooms will be left over for future growth.

The pupils of the new school will be drawn mainly from the Washington School, at Liberty and Fifth streets, which was recently sold to St. Mary's R. C. parish, for parochial purposes. Irving School will contribute a large batch. It is estimated that the congestion everywhere will be relieved by the use of seven rooms in the new building. At the beginning, there will not be, of necessity, an increase in teachers. The teaching staff is always kept up to the size of the enrollment, and the change from the old schools to the new ones will not make it necessary to hire additional teachers.

By the terms of the sale, St. Mary's parish will not take over the Washington School until the Darrow avenue school is ready for the pupils. The day when the Darrow avenue school is declared fit for the reception of pupils will be the day St. Mary's parish will get the Washington building.

LICENSE APPLICATIONS.

Usual Number Presented at Last Night's Council Meeting.

The usual number of applications for liquor licenses were presented at the February meeting of the Common Council, and contrary to the rule not a new applicant appeared. There are now ten retail and two wholesale places in the city and the same number applied last night as follows:

J. A. Staats, Henry Windham, Henry Haurand, William and Charles Clark, Alex. Findlay, Chris. Gloeckler, John Rafferty, Jacob Blimm, Eastern Bottling Works, Frank Linke, Michael Watson and Jerome Leary. They will be advertised in the usual way and the Common Council will meet on Monday night, February 25, to act upon the same. It is necessary that this be done as the licenses all expire on March 1. For the first time an many years there were no new applicants and no new complications to meet and the members of the Common Council seemed pleased.

Was Quartermaster-Sergeant.

Emmett Wortman, who was arrested at Somerville, Saturday, on a charge of non-support and desertion preferred by his wife, was quartermaster-sergeant of Co. M, Somerville, and not lieutenant, as reported. He was employed at the Manganese Steel Safe Works and was well-known in this city.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of Miss Mabel Tice, of Westfield, to S. Herbert Vance, of Jersey City, has been announced.

CONSOLIDATION MEMBERS HOLD ANOTHER SESSION

QUESTION THE STREET COMMISSIONER ABOUT THE CITY SEWAGE SYSTEM.

Another session of the consolidation committee was held in the office of Mayor Fisk, yesterday afternoon, all the members being present. While no official statements have been given out concerning the matters discussed, it is known that the commission took up the question of sewers, in relation to what would be required in the borough in case of consolidation.

The commission desiring information regarding Plainfield's sewage system, Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett was invited to attend the meeting. He was questioned in detail about the local sanitary sewer, answering only such questions as were put to him by the various members of the commission.

In the line of questioning no intimation was given as to the ideas of the members on the subject of sewers. It is the purpose of the commission to secure every bit of information possible about the subject under consideration, after which it will go over the ground thoroughly and upon that basis will frame its report to be presented to the Common Council.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES CONTINUE AT MONROE

LARGE CROWD IN ATTENDANCE DESPITE THE STORMY WEATHER.

The storm had no appreciable effect on the tenth anniversary services held at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, last night, there being 125 persons present to attend the reunion and fellowship service arranged. It was a happy occasion for the members had the opportunity to meet three former pastors of the church, Rev. William C. O'Donnell, now of the West End Avenue church, Jersey City; Rev. John MacMurray, of the Brown Memorial church, Jersey City, and Rev. George Mooney, of the South Orange M. E. church.

Each one of the former pastors had a few pleasant words to say to their former parishoners. They congratulated the members of the church and congregation for the excellent results of the past ten years, in which they had a part and it was their wish that the coming ten years would be even more fruitful and blessed than the first.

Rev. L. R. Howard, of Hope chapel, was the only one of the local pastors present, and he opened the service with prayer. The pastor, Rev. E. E. Roberson, also took part in the programme. Congratulatory letters were received and read from Rev. Dr. G. H. Whitney, of this city, president emeritus of Hackettstown Institute; Rev. Mr. Short, acting rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, who resides in Trenton, and Rev. Hubert Munson, of Hempstead, L. I., who was in charge of the services before the Monroe Avenue church, was constituted a regularly organized body. Following the services a social hour was enjoyed and the Ladies' Aid Society served refreshments. The anniversary services will be continued tonight.

CHAIRMAN MONTGOMERY HOLDS UP P. S. C. LIGHT BILL.

Wants to Have Conference With Officials About New Contract Before Paying It.

Pending the making of a new contract between the city and the Public Service Corporation for street lighting, Mr. Montgomery, chairman of the light committee of the Common Council, moved that the P. S. C. bill for lighting be held up at the meeting of the Common Council last night. This action no doubt was suggested by recommendations adopted by the Plainfield Protective Association at its meeting last week, when it presented a lengthy report of Alfred Spice, the expert, engaged by the association to investigate light conditions in Plainfield.

Mr. Montgomery, who is the new chairman of the light committee, is anxious to secure from the P. S. C. as favorable terms as possible and it is his intention to have a conference with the officials of the company before making any recommendations as to another contract.

Only a Firelet.

Some papers and boards left behind a stove, the damper of which was open, caught fire in the clothing store of Tunison & Giles, North avenue, at 11:11 o'clock last night. The firemen summoned by telephone, put out the blaze with one extinguisher. A broken pane of glass was the sum of the damage to the building.

KITCHELL FOR CAPTAIN

Company K. Members Decide Upon Him at Caucus Held Last Night.

ELECTION COMES LATER

First Lieutenant John M. Lewis Resigns Because of Pressure of Business Matters.

The members of Company K at a caucus held last night after the drill selected Second Lieutenant Harry Kitchell, of Westfield, for the position of captain to succeed Captain Martin, recently elected major of the Second Regiment, succeeding Major Dungan, who was likewise promoted to the position of colonel, taking the place of Col. Collins, successor of Brig.-Gen. Gillmore. First Sergeant Charles Peterson was the choice of the company for the position of first lieutenant to succeed John M. Lewis, resigned, and Quartermaster Sergeant A. I. Littell was the choice for the position of second lieutenant to succeed Harry Kitchell. It is not known at present when the election will be held, but the date will be announced by the regimental officials.

There is deep regret over the resignation of First Lieutenant John M. Lewis, who has been acting captain since the promotion of Captain Martin. He is a charter member of the company and has always taken great interest in all the affairs of the organization, working hard for its success in drills and marksmanship. Resolutions expressing the appreciation of the entire company for faithful services performed by Lieut. Lewis were adopted and a copy of them engrossed will be presented to him. Mr. Lewis resigns from the company for business reasons, finding that he has not time to devote to its many duties.

In the selection of Harry Kitchell for the position of captain, the members believe that the same high standard of efficiency will be maintained in the future as in the past under Captain Martin. He is also a charter member of the company and from the first has been closely identified with the organization and its successes. It is believed that he will enjoy the respect and confidence of every member of the company.

VACANCIES FILLED IN CITY FIRE DEPARTMENT

MAYOR FISK WITHDRAWS HIS RECENT POLICE APPOINTMENTS.

In view of the several vacancies in the call and regular force of the fire department, Mayor Charles J. Fisk made several appointments at the February meeting of the Common Council, last night, all of which were confirmed. John A. Townley was appointed a member of the regular department in place of Harry Bush, resigned; James B. Compton was appointed a call-man in place of David S. Dunavan, resigned, and Thomas Cavalear was appointed a call-man in place of Theodore J. LaRue, resigned. The Mayor appointed John P. Neylon a call-man in place of Daniel V. Force, but as the latter had not resigned, the appointment was withdrawn.

At the request of Mayor Fisk his appointments to fill the offices of captain, sergeant and detective-sergeant in the police department, were withdrawn and returned to him. The appointments were made at the meeting on January 7, but failed of confirmation because Chairman Frank Randolph, of the police committee, sought to have all three appointees, Christian Frederickson, John Flynn and Florence McCarthy, confirmed at once. The matter will probably come up again later on, when Mr. Randolph recovers from his illness.

The following special policemen appointed by the Mayor were confirmed:

Frank Day, David F. Stewart, Edwin Dobbs, Nathan Pollard, William Forrestel, John Albert, Jeremiah Cash, Fred Winn, Jacob Kriney, Ameriga C. Brancati, Edward Martin, Charles J. McCarthy, Samuel J. Robinson, Lewis Clark, Jacob Dunham, Rutherford B. Daily, Charles A. Peterson, Alexander D. Ayers, William Addis, W. R. Overland, Frank Sweeney, Tobias W. Nolan, Cornelius McCarthy, Henry Pugh, Charles Harris, Frank Kelso, Jesse M. Scull, Joseph B. Morrison, Benjamin W. Evans, George A. Broadbent, Henry A. Peterson, T. J. Clarkson, Robert McCormick, Tucker Johnson, Isaac Kennedy, Edward Maynard, George Dean, Edgar Brokaw, Henry Adams, F. W. Pearce, Thomas Morcom and Daniel McCarthy.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Rev. William Mulford, rector of All Saints' Episcopal church, will deliver a lecture in the parlors of the Baptist church upon Washington Irving. Proceeds will be turned into the treasury of the Public Library. Mr. Mulford needs no introduction as a speaker to the residents of either the Plains or the borough, having delivered a number of lectures here during his pastorate of All Saints' church. Of course you want to hear him and at the same time help the Public Library, so don't fail to attend.

In justice to the local hotel men, it should be reported that some of the drunks seen on the streets Sundays of late do not get their drink in town, it is said, but at a "speak easy" place not many miles away. The place does not come under the jurisdiction of the local police, being outside of the township limits.

William T. Sharpe and family, who have been residents here for several years, occupying the Marsh property on Front street, have removed to their new home in the Highland Park section, near Leland avenue, which was recently opened up.

The fur mill opened yesterday morning for active operation once more. The mill was to have opened last week but there was some delay in opening the plant, so but little work was done.

Richard B. Duyckincks, who has been occupying the Cook property on Mountain avenue, has given up housekeeping and is spending the winter in New York.

Miss Maud Merceirs, of Grand street, has returned from a visit with her sister, Miss Mamie Merceirs, of West Fourth street, Plainfield.

William C. Stanbery, who has been detained at home for several months on account of illness, is reported as improving nicely.

Mrs. Peter Smith, of Lincoln, has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark, of Front street.

NORTH BRANCH.

John Aiken, Lewis Baldwin, Elmer Davis, William Lampe, Carl Sorges and Hattie Thompson were the pupils of the public school at Liberty Corner neither tardy nor absent during the month of January.

Exhibition and Sale of Printed Wash Fabrics

There has never been such an exhibition of these popular priced Washable Fabrics in this country, and the interest the show and sale awakened yesterday and today indicates that we touched a popular chord when we exploited these new, perfect and unmatched products of those biggest of producers, the AMERICAN PRINT WORKS.

In the immense collection we are showing are patterns almost uncountable in light, medium and dark grounds, and in color combinations that are both novel and pretty. The popular deep blues, new grays and many on white grounds; rich plaid effects; floral and other stripes; white dots—big and little—on blue grounds, and an immense variety of designs in white on blue and in white and colors on gray.

These are splendid fabrics for women's wrappers, house waists and little folks' dresses, and we do not wonder that we are selling so many of them at the diminutive price at which they are marked for this event—Six Cents a Yard..... .6

PLAINFIELDER TOLD OF BANKING IN THE SIXTIES

FORMER MAYOR GILBERT GAVE INTERESTING ACCOUNT AT BANKERS' DINNER

At the annual dinner of the New York State Bankers' Association in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, President Alexander Gilbert, of the New York Clearing House, of this city, portrayed the happy existence of the banker of the '60s.

Chairman Stephen Baker, in introducing Mr. Gilbert, said that he had started in business in 1864 as cashier of the old Market Bank.

"I am also told," said Mr. Baker, "that my good friend, Mr. Morgan went in business that year; so it was a memorable year."

"I suppose you will take no exception to the statement," said Mr. Gilbert when he arose, "when I say that if Mr. Morgan started in 1864, the same year as I did, he has left me far behind him in the race."

Mr. Gilbert went on to say that it was a fitting thing that the second toast at a bankers' dinner should be the New York Clearing House.

"It is," said he, "the tie that binds us together, that holds us in with gentle strength, that creates the standard by which is made possible conservative banking in the city of New York and in times of danger rallies us all together in defense of the credit of this country. We must not forget that long after we pass away it will live and its power increase until it will have become the greatest financial power in the civilized world."

Mr. Gilbert spoke of the wonderful changes in business life in the last four or five years and said that it had been forging ahead by leaps and bounds, the changes being something too marvelous to grasp.

"We find ourselves," he said, "surrounded by forces which are pushing us along at too fast a pace, and it is to the New York Clearing House that the people are looking to maintain in New York conservative banking. The magazine writers tell us that we are living in an age of hazardous enterprise, of high finance and overcapitalization, the age that shuts the sunlight out of our streets and a good deal of it out of the hearts—an age for gain.

"Well, this may be true. Some of us believe that it is true. But what are we going to do about it? We can't get off this planet. Let us hope that these things are nothing more than the legitimate expression of the resistless energy of our people. But let us remember as bankers that the business prosperity of the country today and for all time to come must rest on the conservation of the banking in New York city."

Mr. Gilbert said that he could remember when banking in New York was delightful, when the rate of interest was 7 per cent. the year round and when there was no competition.

"Today," he said, "the banker feels that he must stand on guard all day to prevent the other fellow from encroaching on his reserve. Then bank presidents were elected because they had gray hairs and had nothing to do but look wise. Every application for a loan had to go into the discount box and go before the board. Those were the days when the directors earned their fees, although we didn't pay them anything. Gentlemen, you may not believe it, but it seemed an honor. We were all happy. We all made money.

"If the bankers of New York today would just stand shoulder to shoulder and work to maintain conservative banking instead of reaching out to get everything in sight we would have more happiness in our business lives."

Mr. Gilbert said that in those days no one had thought of "elastic currency." He said that the bankers of that time had reached the conclusion that there could not be financial activity and Wall street speculation at the same time.

"Now," said he, "we have several great speculative movements at the same time, the result being high interest and abnormal business conditions. I don't know why the banker should not meet his obligations at maturity. In those days the comptroller used to compliment our system. I never heard then that it was a shrewd scheme of the Government to sell its bonds. You did hear, though, that it was a scheme to help this Government preserve its life and at the same time give the country safe currency in lieu of wildcat money.

"That system has served the country well for forty years, and you find no one who can question its soundness. Its notes pass for par in every part of the civilized world."

Plainfield, N. J., February 5, 1907.

WANTS CITY TO HAVE A TREE COMMISSION

MATTER BROUGHT BEFORE COMMON BY MR. MONTGOMERY.

Acting in accordance with a suggestion by Mayor Fisk in his annual message, Mr. Montgomery, at the February meeting of the Common Council, last night, took steps to have the city take advantage of a new State law which gives the Mayor authority to appoint a tree commission to look after the preservation of trees in Plainfield. He explained that it would be necessary to commence early the work of spraying trees if they were to be saved, hence the action at this time.

In answer to questions by Mr. Mellick and other members, Mr. Montgomery explained that the law provides for the appointment of three commissioners, for three, four and five years. They must be freeholders, and are to serve without compensation. The law further provides that the expenses of the commission and its work shall be raised by a tax which in Plainfield would approximate about $2,000 or $2,200. Mr. Montgomery stated further that the mater had been considered by the light and tree committee and all agreed that such a commission for Plainfield would be a good thing.

The only question that seemed to arise was as to whether a public hearing would not be necessary before the adoption of such a resolution as Mr. Montgomery proposed. The latter stated that he had communicated with Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, and referred especially to the question of a public hearing. Having received no reply concerning it from Mr. Marsh he took it for granted that a public hearing would not be necessary. Mr. Mellick favored the idea, but thought it best to let the resolution lay over for a time. Mr. Buxton agreed with him. Mr. Montgomery then withdrew the resolution and it will be presented later.

acording to their legislation prohibiting night work for women. England, Switzerland and New Jersey were the first numerated in that honor list, and New Jersey led all the others. But while that International Association white list was being printed, in 1903, New Jersey repealed that beneficient law, left women wholly unprotected from night work, abolished the 6 p. m. closing hour for minors, and enacted the present non-enforceable statute. Under the present law no suit has been begun. This statute provides that children under 16 years of age shall not work longer than ten hours in one day and 55 hours in one week. They may work by day or night, or partly by day and partly by night, or by day one week and by night the next week. There is no fixed closing hour.

"By this action the State of New Jersey transferred itself from the head of the White List of the International Association for Labor Legislation to the black list of those States which do not prohibit night work for women.

"Meanwhile, fourteen European States have arranged by treaty to prohibit night work in manufacture for women. The United States and Russia are the only nations which are not parties to these humane agreements.

"Finally, the Federal child labor bill which the National Consumers' League strives to get enacted is the Beveridge bill forbidding inter-State commerce in the products of factories and mines employing children under the age of fourteen years."

HORSES, HORSE BLANKETS AND TWO EATING PLACES

Police headquarters received a telephone message from Bailey's restaurant, Watchung avenue, near the trolley station, at 7 o'clock last night, asking that a policeman be sent around to make two men pay for a supper they were said to be trying to "beat" Bailey out of.

Patrolman Overbaugh, sent out in answer to the call, found two men who had driven here with a van from Summit, with a vanload of furniture, at the restaurant, with sixty cents worth of food in them and no money to pay for it. They had been drinking. They said they never intended to sneak away without paying, and offered to leave the blankets on their teams as a guarantee that they would pay up when they got money. Overbaugh told them one blanket would be enough, if Bailey would accept the security. Bailey took the blanket. The horse from which it was taken was covered with burlap, and the pair drove off. They said the furniture was consinged to 1200 Evergreen avenue. The names of the pair were not learned.

Shortly after the restaurant episode, Patrolman Higgins saw two gray horses, tied to a pole at North and Park avenues, shivering, blanketless and snow-encrusted. He reported to Chief Kiely and the latter went out to look at the team. When he got there he found two men hitching the horses to the lunch wagon that was conducted by Fred Meeker on the lot opposite North avenue until it was damaged by fire a week ago. They said they were sent here from Summit with the team by a man named Welsh, who owned the wagon, to drive it back to Summit. A man who said he was Welsh drove up in a sleigh and told the chief that the men were all right and acting under his orders. The chief satisfied himself that Welsh was what he described himself, but he told the Summit man that the horses, weakened and chilled by exposure, were in no condition to draw a lunch wagon through the snow-drifted streets and roads. The chief watched the shivering team make a feable attempt to draw the wagon from the lot, and ordered the proceedings stopped. He made the men take the team to a stable for the night.

The police said this morning that the two men in charge of the lunch wagon team drove into the city drunk, with one horse hitched to a sleigh and the other trailing behind. The blankets were wrapped around the men.

The chief thought last night that the men in the restaurant episode were the ones who had come for the lunch wagon, but a comparison of the reports of Patrolmen Overbaugh and Higgins this morning corrected that idea.

THE FORUM.

A Dinner With a Purpose.

Editor, The Daily Press:

It seems to me that the recent dinner of the Jr. O. U. A. M. had more of a purpose than most affairs of this kind. The order desired to make known the work that has already been accomplished by it and to set forth the things it aims to do in the future, for these men not only meet to enjoy a good dinner and good speeches, but they actually do things. The speakers were interesting, the dinner was excellent and was especially notable for the absence of wine and beer from the table. The prominence given to the amber liquor at another notable occasion suggests its mention here. Toastmaster McCutchen showed his usual good taste by refraining from any allusions to the absence of wine. Success to this excellent order, which stands for temperance as well as for reforms in naturalization and immigration laws, for the Bible in our public schools and the Star Spangled Banner floating over them. How a Quorum Was Gotten.

For a time last night it looked as though it would be impossible to get a quorum for the February meeting of the Common Council, on account of the illness of several members. Among those detained were President Daniel, William L. Gloak, Frank Randolph, W. S. Tyler and Henry D. Hibbard. First Councilmen Charles Randolph and Herbert Buxton arrived. Then Mr. Mellick, who has just returned from the south, put in appearance, followed by Mr. Tolles and Mr. Montgomery. With a number so near a quorum, it was decided to get the one necessary member, and a cab was sent to Mr. Ginna's home for him. At first it was decided to meet, pass the bills and adjourn for a week, but when the members got into the business they kept at it until most all of it was cleared up. An adjournment was taken to February 25 to act on the liquor licenses.

WOMEN'S EXCHANGE HAS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

OFFICERS ELECTED AND REPORTS FOR THE YEAR RECEIVED.

Officers were elected for the coming year and reports presented at the annual meeting of the Women's Exchange held this morning in the parish house of Grace church. Owing to the storm many of the members were prevented from attending and in the absence of the president, Mrs. O. T. Waring, the recording secretary, Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell, called the meeting to order. At her suggestion Mrs. Isaac N. VanSickel was made chairman pro tem.

It was reported that the receipts for the past year were $7,303.10 and out of this sum $4,863.21 was paid to consignors. Some persons have had the idea that consignors were not paid for their work and the officers of the exchange wish to correct the impression. There are 134 consignors at present and 130 subscribers to the exchange, thirty-three more than last year. No entertainments were given during the year, yet the exchange closes the year entirely out of debt and with a good balance in the treasury.

These officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Mrs. O. T. Waring; first vice-president, Miss Elizabeth R. Cock; second vice-president, Mrs. S. D. Lounsbery; treasurer, Mrs. William M. Stillman; recording secretary, Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Howard C. Tracy; chairman of the house committee, Mrs. Tompkins.

Funeral of Thomas Rafferty.

The funeral of Thomas Rafferty was held this morning at 9:30 o'clock at St. Mary's church, where solemn requiem mass was said. Father Bogan was the celebrant, Father Delehanty the deacon and Father Sciollia the sub-deacon. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, including many former associates of the young man. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery and the pallbearers were Harvey Moynihan, Edward Lynch, Francis J. Blatz, John Carty, Harry DeMeza and Erwin Neighbor.

Four Hundred Pounds of Turkey.

The committee from the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, having charge of the arrangements for the annual turkey supper to be held Thursday and Friday nights, met yesterday to further details for the affair. It was reported that 400 pounds of fine turkey have been secured for the feast, in addition to all the good things which accompany it. Kenneth Stuart's orchestra will furnish music both nights.

The regular Tuesday evening song service will be held at the Grove Street Rescue Mission tonight. It will be followed by a business meeting.

ATLANTIC CITY'S WINTER SEASON.

Atlantic City is the great perennial resort of America, and at no season of the year is it more attractive than during Lent and at Easter time. Its great beach-front hotels are the centers of a charming social life, which overflows to smaller but excellent hotels on the avenues. Concerts on the piers, boardwalk promenades, the great sun parlors, the Country Club with its ideal golf course, automobiling on the boulevard and other features afford a variety of entertainment or recreation suited to the personal inclination of the visitor.

Strength and vigor are imparted by a short stay at this famous resort, and a longer sojourn renews the energy of the overworked man of business, the convalescent, and the tired devotee of society.

Special excursion tickets to Atlantic City with liberal return limits are on sale at Pennsylvania Railroad ticket offices.

Full information regarding rates and train service will be furnished by Ticket Agents.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Thomas Duffy, who received a severe injury to his foot a couple of weeks ago, a heavy iron falling on it, is able to be about again and will soon return to his position with the railroad company.

The attendance at the sessions of the public school today was exceptionally small, it being impossible for the children to get through the huge snow drifts.

While the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company is maintaining a fairly good local service today, the through trains are all several hours late.

Harry Mundy, who has been detained at home by illness for several days, is recovering.

Miss Margaret Randolph is critically ill at her home with rheumatism.

Mrs. George H. Frost, of 745 Watchung avenue, has invited a few friends for Thursday evening of this week to listen to an informal talk about the Kentucky mountaineers, by Rev. William Goodell Frost, president of Berea College, an institution which cares for the education of about 900 students annually, the majority being children, of varying ages and of both sexes, of these interesing but little known fellow citizens of the great Republic. Mr. Frost has been president of Berea College for several years and through his intimate acquaintance with the life and habits of these quaint people has many interesting experiences to relate. Contributions are not solicited: better knowledge of the work that is being done among these people is the object of the lecture.

Death of George D. Howell.

COUNCILMANIC ROUTINE

Many Petitions Presented and Various Improvements Decided Upon.

WORD FROM THE P. P. A.

Secretary Hands In Resolutions Adopted Asking Council's Co-Operation in Gas and Electric Matters.

Resolutions adopted at the meeting of the Plainfield Protective Association, last week, asking that the Common Council co-operate with it in securing better gas and electric service from the Public Service Corporation in accordance with suggestions made in the report of the expert, Alfred Spice, were presented at the February meeting of the Common Council, last night, by the secretary, H. C. White. They were referred to the light committee for consideration and a report later on.

John Porter and other residents petitioned for electric lights and repairs on Prescott place, between Third and Fourth streets. The petitions were referred.

Mrs. Mary S. Myers, through her attorney, W. M. Stillman, asked for the return of $20.25 overpaid taxes for 1906, the Union County Taxation Board having allowed a reduction in her assessment. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

A report was received from the treasurer of the Plainfield Fire Department Pension Fund, showing a balance at last report of $274.20, disbursements of $148.64 and a present balance of $103.53. The report was referred to the fire and building committee.

Theodore J. LaRue resigned as a call member of Hose Company No. 1, and the same was accepted. Residents of Martine avenue asked for the location of two fire hydrants on that thoroghfare and the matter was referred.

Elston M. French, who is interested in the development of the Highland Park Realty Company property in the east end of the city, called the attention of the members to three petitions presented last year asking for sewers, macadamized streets and sidewalks and asked that something be done. Later Mr. Montgomery reported back a previous petition from Mr. French and moved that three electric lights be located in that section, one on East Front street and Sumner avenue, one at East Second street and Emerson avenue and the third at Emerson avenue and George street.

This called forth considerable discussion. Mr. Buxton stated that he thought that the Common Council should exercise care in granting lights. He understood that the houses in the section referred to are not occupied and he thought it was time to place lights there when they are.

Mr. Montgomery said that no owner of property could hope to sell or lease it unless it had such improvements and he understood that the houses referred to were now occupied. Mr. Mellick agreed with Mr. Montgomery and added that persons who are willing to invest money in improvements should be encouraged. Mr. Montgomery's motion for the three lights was finally adopted.

Petitions received from J. D. Loizeaux and others asking for lights on Rock avenue, between West Second and Third streets, and that South Second street be macadamized and graded were referred to the proper committees.

A communication from the Board of Education notified the Common Council that L. N. Lovell and C. F. Abbott had been appointed to represent the board on the Board of School Estimate. Two members from the Common Council and the Mayor constitute the board.

By way of explanation, Clerk MacMurray said that Clerk Walters, of the New Jersey Senate, had informed him that he would be willing to furnish the city with a double set of all laws passed during the session of the Legislature for $30. Heretofore, the city has paid $25 for one set sent to the office of Corporation Counsel Marsh. Now the city wants to secure extra copies for the clerk's office. The extra $5 would cover postage. Later a resolution was adopted authorizing Clerk MacMurray to make the arrangements.

A petition from the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club and others asked the Common Council to widen Randolph road between Park and Woodland avenues sixty feet and macadamize it sixteen feet. The matter was referred. A petition for a light on Netherwood avenue, between East Front and Second streets, was referred, and the bonds of Constables John Manley and Street Commissioner Gavett, which were approved by the corporation counsel, were received and filed.

Proposed plans for the remodelling of Bernard Mann's building at 120 West Fourth street, were presented by Blanchard Fosgate, architect, and referred to the fire and building committee. The Board of Health's annual report for last year was referred to the committee on public affairs. Clerk Horace G. Adams, of the district court, reported receipts of $119.59 for the past month, with a balance of $75.24. Street Commissioner Gavett reported that from December 14 to January 14, twenty sewer permits were granted, and Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of twenty-two permits.

On the recommendation and motion of Mr. Montgomery, an electric light was ordered placed on Rose street, opposite the property of B. A. Mumford & Son, according to a petition.

Mr. Ginna, as chairman of the street committee, presented several resolutions, which were adopted. The first one provided for the laying of crosswalks in certain sections of the city, another provided for the location of a hydrant near the city's disposal beds and a third requested that the Union Water Company be requested to lower a water pipe on Park terrace, to prevent freezing.

Mr. Ginna offered an ordinance providing for the establishment of the proper grade on Elmwood place, Pruden's alley, Exchange alley, Cottage place, Denmark road, West End avenue, Arlington place, West Third street, South Second street, and a part of Randolph road. The ordinance was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised. A public hearing on the ordinance will be given on Monday night, March 4.

When Mr. Buxton moved, according to a notice previously given, that the rule of the Common Council be adopted as the by-laws, it resulted in considerable discussion on the part of Mr. Montgomery, who was anxious to have the matter laid over until the adjourned meeting February 25, when all of the members could attend.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Tolles, Mr. Buxton and Mr. Ginna stated that the finance committee had agreed to recommend that the rules remain as at present, Mr. Montgomery was anxious that they be amended according to Mr. Tyler's suggestions, which provide that no official or member of the Common Council shall expend an amount greater than $30 without obtaining bids. It was explained that the rules at present safeguard the city in this respect.

Mr. Montgomery questioned Mr. Buxton's right to present a formal report, one not in writing, but Mr. Tolles explained that it had always been the custom and he ruled against him. The motion to adopt the rules as by-laws was finally adopted, all but Mr. Montgomery voting in favor of it.

Mr. Buxton offered an amendment to an ordinance, which was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised. It provides that the Mayor shalll grant licenses to peddlers, hawkers, expressmen, truckmen, hackmen, etc., to so many as he thinks is proper and to those of good moral character, and that the clerk keep a record of the same.

Engagement Announced.

Mrs. John Lance, of Dunellen, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Enid Mabelle Fonda, daughter of the late A. P. Fonda, of Kansas City, Mo., to Otto Muller, of Elizabeth.

HANGS BY LEGS FROM FIFTH FLOOR WINDOW

Daring Young New York Bookkeeper Risks His Life to Save Two Strangers.

New York.—An old six-story American basement dwelling on East Eleventh street caught fire on the first floor the other afternoon and in the scramble to get out no one on the five lower floors thought of two men, Louis and Max Schwartz, who were working in a fur room in the rear of the top floor.

The first known of their danger was when the Schwartz brothers came out on the fire escape and shouted for help.

No hook and ladder had arrived and there seemed to be no way of escape but to jump. The Schwartz brothers were about to leap to the sidewalk when a window adjoining in a nine-story building was raised and Charles Bell, a bookkeeper 21 years old, called to them to stay where they were and he would rescue them.

He Pulled Both of the Men to Safety.

Abraham Goldberg and Solomon Strow, workmen for a manufacturing company, for whom Bell is bookkeeper, had remained with him. The window of the building where Bell and his comrades stood is half a story higher than the fire escape where the Schwartz brothers stood and about five feet to one side. Bell told the two workers to hold fast to his legs and the young bookkeeper crawled out on the window ledge, over the coping and swung, head first, far to the side toward the balcony of the adjoining house. Louis Schwartz, standing on the fire escape rail, was just able to reach Bell's outstretched hands when the bookkeeper was let down almost to his full length by his legs. The young bookkeeper pulled both men to safety.

Dead Man Sat Beside Him.

New York.—Harry Melbourne drove a heavy furniture van through the Christmas shoppers Sixth avenue for nearly an hour with a dead man on the seat beside him. With John Parken, 45 years old, the regular driver of the van, Melbourne went to a house in West Thirteenth street to get a load of household goods to take to Harlem. The two men carried out chairs, tables, beds and other effects and had a large pile on the sidewalk when Parken reeled and complained of feeling ill. Melbourne supported him and led him to the wagon. Propping him up on the seat and wrapping a blanket around him he finished loading up the big vehicle alone. At Thirty-first street Melbourne drew his wagon up alongside the curb, made a hasty examination and found that Parken was dead. A physician called from the New York hospital said that Parken had died of heart disease and apparently had been lifeless for nearly an hour.

Finds Family Are Disagreeable.

Edmonton, Ala.—A weird tale of cannibalism among the Indians of the far north was brought in the other day by John McDougall, son of the first missionary to the Canadian northwest, who is in the employ of the Hudson's Bay company, and L. S. C. Ward, an independent trapper. A member of the Rib tribe, when provisions ran short, killed and ate his wife and three children, one by one, but soon died from the effects of overeating.

MacDougall and Ward are enthusiastic over the possibilities of the great wilderness. They tell of salt wells of inexhaustible wealth, of supplies of game limited only by the abilities of trappers to carry it away and of lakes full of excellent fish, but at present inaccessible on account of the lack of transportation.

College Gets a Mule.

Oberlin, O.—A big mule in Peter's hall was what greeted Janitor May as he entered the building early the other morning.

No sound did the animal make except the shuffling of his hoofs as he stood on the second floor in the gallery overlooking the central court. He was a large specimen and it required the united efforts of May and Folk, the college carpenter, to get him out of the building.

The stairs were broad and it was not very difficult for a bunch of college boys to lead him up, where he would have caused trouble had he not been discovered by the janitor. Whether it was a class "stunt" has not been learned, but it is attributed to the freshmen.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The great success which attends "When Women Love," which was seen at the New Plainfield theatre last night and will be repeated tonight, is easily accounted for as it pleases both the eye and the ear. The company that interprets the play is said to be exceptionally fine, and gives tone to it. "When Women Love" is a four act drama of much merit, each act fitting together consistently. The scenes are laid in New York and on the Hudson river, and embody a play that is true to life. A phonograph is employed in a startlingly novel manner in solving the mystery of a crime in the melodrama. An innocent person has been wrongly condemned when, through the instrumentality of the phonograph, his innocence is clearly established and he is discharged. The scene is one of the most effective and the most novel ever seen on the stage.

"As Told In the Hills," the new melodrama of Western life which is being presented by W. F. Mann, is regarded as one of the best dramatic offerings of the season. The play is one that appeals especially to lovers of melodrama who have grown tired of those depicting life in the under world of the great cities where crime and debauchery are brought to view and in contrast with that class of play the new production is refreshingly clean and bright all through. The opening scene of the play where the little band of emigrants has been surrounded by hostile Indians and in danger of annihilation is intensely thrilling while the later scenes showing the Arkansas farm have a charming touch of nature that is made especially effective by not being overdrawn. This new and intensely interesting play will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night.

A beautiful stage portraiture of a woman's fidelity and man's injustice is said to be charmingly presented in the successful emotional drama, "A Wife's Secret," which Spencer and Aborn produced two years ago on a splendid scale, and which has steadily grown in popularity ever since, in many cities where it has played three annual engagements. It will be at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night. Far from losing its prestige by repetition, criticisms clipped from newspapers in other cities show that this year it is meeting with more enthusiasm than ever before, and on account of its exceptional merit as a dramatic work, and a mirror held up to human nature, its popularity is likely to continue for a long time. It involves an interesting story, told in a simple, straightforward manner, with engaging heart interest, thrilling realism and original comedy. The cast is reputed to be an excellent one this year, in every detail of its personnel, containing such familiar names as Grace Hopkins, Winona Bridges, Willard Bowman, George B. Connor, William J. Shea, Tommy Toner, Allan St. John, W. W. Newton, Anna Little, Estel Dudley and many others.

Mrs. Whitney Frazee, of South avenue, who has been quite ill, is improved.

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON
AUTHOR OF "THE MAIN CHANCE," "ZELDA DAMERON," ETC.
COPYRIGHT 1905 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

You better give them a wide berth; they might catch you in their net. Sister Theresa is said to have quite a winning way. She certainly plucked your grandfather."

"Nuns in spectacles, the gentle educators of youth and that sort of thing, with a good-natured old man for their prey. None of them for me!"

"I rather thought so," remarked Pickering,—and he pulled his watch from his pocket and turned the stem with his heavy fingers. He was short, thickset and sleek, with a square jaw, hair already thin and a close-clipped mustache. Age, I mentally reflected, was not improving him.

I had no intention of allowing him to see that I was irritated. I drew out my cigarette case and passed it across the table.

"After you! They're made quite specially for me in Madrid."

"You forget that I never use tobacco in any form."

"You always did miss a good deal of the joy of living," I observed, throwing my smoking match into his waste-paper basket, to his obvious annoyance. "Well, I'm the bad boy of the story-books; but I'm really sorry my inheritance has a string tied to it. I'm about out of money. I suppose you wouldn't advance me a few thousands on my expectation—"

"Not a cent," he declared, with quite unnecessary vigor; and I laughed again, remembering that in my old appraisement of him generosity had not been represented in large figures. "It's not in keeping with your grandfather's wishes that I should do so. You must have spent a good bit of money in your tiger hunting exploits," he added.

"I have spent all I had," I replied amiably. "Thank God, I'm not a clam. I've seen the world and paid for it, and I ask nothing of you. You undoubtedly share my grandfather's idea of me, that I'm a wild man who can't sit still or lead an orderly, decent life; but I'm going to give you a terrible disappointment. What's the size of the estate?"

Pickering eyed me—uneasily, I thought—and began playing with a pencil. I never liked Pickering's hands; they were thick and white and better kept than I like to see a man's hands.

"I fear it's going to be disappointing in his trust-company boxes here I have been able to find only about ten thousand dollars' worth of securities. Possibly—quite possibly—we were all deceived in the amount of his fortune. Sister Theresa wheedled large sums out of him, and he spent, as you will see, a small fortune on the house at Annandale without finishing it. It wasn't a cheap proposition, and in its unfinished condition it is practically valueless. You must know that Mr. Glenarm gave away a great deal of money in his lifetime. Moreover, he established your father. You know what he left,—it was not a small fortune as those things are reckoned."

I was restless under this recital. My father's estate had been of respectable size, and I had dissipated the whole of it. My conscience pricked me as I recalled an item of $40,000 that I had spent—somewhere grandly—on an expedition that I led, with considerable satisfaction to myself, at least, through the Sudan. But Pickering's words amazed me.

"Let me understand you," I said, bending toward him. "My grandfather was supposed to be rich, and yet you tell me you find little property. Sister Theresa got money from him to help build a school. How much was that?"

"Fifty thousand dollars. It was an open account. His books show the advances, but he took no notes."

"And that claim is worth—?"

"It is good as against her individually. But she contends—"

"Yes, go on!"

I had struck the right note. He was annoyed by my persistence and his apparent discomfort pleased me.

"She refuses to pay. She says Mr. Glenarm made her a gift of the money."

"That's possible, isn't it? He was forever making gifts to churches. Schools and theological seminaries were a sort of weakness with him."

"We'll pass that. If you get this money the estate is worth $60,000, plus the value of the land out there at Annandale, and Glenarm House is worth—"

"There you have me!"

It was the first lightness he had shown, and it put me on guard.

"I should like an idea of its value. Even an unfinished house is worth something."

"Land out there is worth from $100 to $150 an acre. There's an even hundred acres. I'll be glad to have your appraisement of the house when you get there."

"Humph! You flatter my judgment, Pickering. The loose stuff there is worth how much?"

"It's all in the library. Your grandfather's weakness was architecture—"

"So I remember!" I interposed, recalling my stormy interviews with John Marshall Glenarm over my choice of a profession.

"In his last years he turned more and more to his books. He placed out there what is, I suppose, the finest collection of books relating to architecture to be found in this country. That was his chief hobby, after church affairs, as you may remember, and he rode it hard. But he derived a great deal of satisfaction from his studies."

I laughed again; it was easier to laugh than to cry over the situation.

"I suppose he wanted me to sit down there, surrounded by works on architecture, with the idea that a study of the subject would be my only resource. The scheme is eminently Glenarmian! And all I get is a worthless house, a hundred acres of land, $10,000, and a doubtful claim against a Protestant nun who hoodwinked my grandfather into setting up a school for her. Bless you heart, man, so far as my inheritance is concerned it would have been money in my pocket to have stayed in Africa."

"That's about the size of it."

"But the personal property is all mine,—anything that's loose on the place. Perhaps my grandfather planted old plate and government bonds just to pique the curiosity of his heirs, successors and assigns. It would be in keeping!"

I had walked to the window and looked out across the city. As I turned suddenly I found Pickering's eye bent upon me with curious intentness. I had never liked his eyes; they were too steady. When a man always meets your gaze tranquilly and readily, it is just as well to be wary of him.

"Yes; no doubt you will find the place literally packed with treasure," he said, and laughed. "When you find anything you might wire me."

He smiled; the idea seemed to give him pleasure.

"Are you sure there's nothing else?" I asked. "No substitute,—no codicil?"

"If you know of anything of the kind it's your duty to produce it. We have exhausted the possibilities. I'll admit that the provisions of the will are unusual; your grandfather was a peculiar man in many respects; but he was thoroughly sane and his faculties were all sound to the last."

"He treated me a lot better than I deserved," I said, with a heartache that I had not known often in my irresponsible life; but I could not afford to show feeling before Arthur Pickering.

I picked up the copy of the will and examined it. It was undoubtedly authentic; it bore the certificate of the clerk of Wabana county, Indiana. The witnesses were Thomas Bates and Arthur Pickering.

"Who is Bates?" I asked, pointing to the man's signature.

"One of your grandfather's discoveries. He's in charge of the house out there, and a trustworthy fellow. He's a fair cook, among other things. I don't know where Mr. Glenarm got Bates, but he had every confidence in him. The man was with him at the end."

A picture of my grandfather dying, alone with a servant, while I, his only kinsman, wandered in strange lands, was not one that I could contemplate with much satisfaction. My grandfather had been an odd little figure of a man, who always wore a long black coat, silk hat, and carried a curious silver-headed staff, and said puzzling things at which everybody was afraid either to laugh or to cry. The thought of him touched me now. I was glad to feel that his money had never been a lure to me; it did not matter whether his estate was great or small, I could, at least, ease my conscience by obeying the behest of the old man whose name I bore, and whose interest in the finer things of life and art had given him an undeniable distinction.

"I should like to know something of Mr. Glenarm's last days," I said abruptly.

"He wished to visit the village where he was born, and Bates, his companion and servant, went to Vermont with him. He died quite suddenly, and was buried beside his father in the old village cemetery. I saw him last early in the summer. I was away from home and did not know of his death until it was all over. Bates came to report it to me, and to sign the necessary papers in probating the will. It had to be done in the place of the decedent's residence, and we went together to Wabana, the seat of the county in which Annandale lies."

I was silent after this, looking out toward the sea that had called me since my earliest dreams of the world that lay beyond it.

"It's a poor stake, Glenarm," remarked Pickering consolingly, and I wheeled upon him.

"I suppose you think it a poor stake! I suppose you can't see anything in that old man's life beyond his money; but I don't care a curse what my inheritance is! I never obeyed any of my grandfather's wishes in his lifetime, but now that he's dead his last wish is mandatory. I'm going out there to spend a year if I die for it. Do you get my idea?"

"Humph! You always were a stormy petrel," he sneered. "I fancy it will be safer to keep our most agreeable acquaintance on a strictly business basis. If you accept the terms of the will—"

"Of course I accept them! Do you think I am going to make a row, refuse to fulfill that old man's last wish!

I Found Pickering's Eyes Bent Upon Me With Curious Intentness.

I gave him enough trouble in his life without disappointing him in his grave. I suppose you'd like to have me fight the will; but I'm going to disappoint you."

He said nothing, but played with his pencil. I had never disliked him so heartily; he was so smug and comfortable. His office breathed the very spirit of prosperity. I wished to finish my business and get away.

"I suppose the region out there has a high death rate. How's the malaria?"

"Not alarmingly prevalent, I understand. There's a summer resort over on one side of Lake Annandale. The place is really supposed to be wholesome. I don't believe your grandfather had homicide in mind in sending you there."

"No, he probably thought the rustication would make a man of me. Must I do my own victualing? I suppose I'll be allowed to eat."

"Bates can cook for you. He'll supply the necessities. I'll instruct him to obey your orders. I assume you'll not have many guests,—in fact,"—he studied the back of his hand intently,—"while that isn't stipulated, I doubt whether it was your grandfather's idea that you should surround yourself—"

"With boisterous companions!" I supplied the words in my cheerfullest tone. "No; my conduct shall be exemplary, Mr. Pickering," I added, with affable irony.

He picked up a single sheet of thin typewritten paper and passed it across the table. It was a formal acquiescence in the provisions of the will. Pickering had prepared it in advance of my coming, and this assumption that I would accept the terms irritated me. Assumptions as to what I should do under given conditions had always annoyed me, and accounted, in a large measure, for my proneness to surprise and disappoint people. Pickering summoned a clerk to witness my signature.

"How soon shall you take possession?" he asked. "I have to make a note of it."

"I shall start for Indiana to-morrow," I answered.

As I rose to go Pickering said:

"It will be sufficient if you drop me a line, say once a month, to let me know you are there. The postoffice is Annandale."

"I suppose I might file a supply of postal cards in the village and arrange for the mailing of one every month."

"It might be done that way," he answered evenly.

"We may perhaps meet again, if I don't die of starvation or ennui. Good-by."

We shook hands stiffly and I left him, going down in an elevator filled with eager-eyed, anxious men. I, at least, had no cares of business. It made no difference to me whether the market rose or fell. Something of the spirit of adventure that had been my curse quickened in my heart as I walked through crowded Broadway past Trinity church to a bank and drew the balance remaining on my letter of credit. I received in currency slightly less than $1,000.

As I turned from the teller's window I ran into the arms of the last man in the world I expected to see.

This, let it be remembered, was in October of the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and one.

Sale of Sample Upholsteries.

About three weeks ago we held a sale of sample upholsteries and factory odd lots which proved so successful that we promptly set about to secure a similar lot. Owing to the present upward market tendency the task looked unpromising, but we persevered, and were rewarded by securing at a positively unlooked for concession the entire stock of a large Pennsylvania upholstery mill. This big purchase embraces odd lots and factory samples, and while some of the merchandise is slightly soiled and otherwise imperfect, we have made prices that no really shrewd buyer can afford to miss. Here are a few examples:

Curtain Swiss—An exceptionally good quality of Swiss, 36 inches wide—a number of colored floral designs—for dining or bed room curtains and bureau covers—regularly worth 15c per yard, special 8

Velour Squares—Some in figured effects, others in plain colorings; also tapestry kinds—24 inches square—regularly worth from 60c to $2.00 per yard—this sale, special per square, 25c and ..... .60

Window Shades—These shades are made of an extra quality opaque, with fancy fringe, mounted on good spring rollers, regularly worth 29c and 39c each; 650 of them special at, each .21

Lace Curtains—A number of pairs of Irish Point and Scotch Lace Curtains to go at exactly half price; only one pair of a kind; curtains that are actually worth from $2.00 to $10.00 pair, special, HALF PRICE.

Door Panels—Fine Irish Point panels on good quality net—a variety of beautiful centre designs—suitable for either square or oval glass—actually worth $1.00 each, this sale only, special at ..... .59

Mercerized Portieres—One hundred pairs of beautifully mercerized portieres in this season's newest colorings—rose, green, red and olive—heavy fringe top and bottom—regular price $6.00 pair, at $4.50

Mercerized Portieres—An odd lot, only half pairs of each pattern, just the thing for a single door—some with fringe, others without—regularly worth $3.00 each, special, at each.... $1.50

Couch Covers—One hundred couch covers made of very heavy tapestry in neat, small patterns, well covered, fringe all around; sold regularly $2.50 each; during this sale we offer them special at $1.50

Couch Covers—Just seventy-five of these handsome couch covers; a number of beautiful Oriental patterns, some slightly imperfect, very best quality, 60 in. wide, worth $5 each, special $3.50

Couch Covers—Just received three hundred couch covers and will offer them at a very special price. All of excellent quality striped material—Oriental effects—alike on both sides—special each ..... .69

Table Covers—Allover designs in one and two toned colorings—fringed all around—two yards square—extra good quality—would retail regularly for $1.50 each, for this sale, special at, each $1.10

FIRST TEAM LOSES; SECOND TEAM WINS

USUAL THING HAPPENS IN Y. M. C. A. BASKETBALL DEPARTMENT.

The Y. M. C. A. five lost a close basketball game with the Naval Reserve team of New Jersey, last night, by a score of 30 to 26. It was played at the Y. M. C. A. The Y. M. C. A. players owe their defeat to poor shooting. They had chance after chance to basket the ball, but failed in the throws. They went at their opponents hammer and tongs in the second half, and nearly snatched the game out of the jaws with which defeat is always provided. These jaws worked a little too fast for a second-half recovery, and they closed on the panting Plainfielders with a horrid crunch that upset Physical Director Listman.

Line up and summary:

Y. M. C. A.	Naval Reserves.
Gilmore	Newbert
Loizeaux	Renner
forward.
Collier, Aalholm	Voss
centre.
Miller, Loizeaux	VanDoren
Gavett	Voght
guard.

Goals from field, Gilmore (2), Loizeaux (4), Aalholm (4), Collier, Miller, Newbert (2), Renner (4), Voss (3), VanDoren (2), Voght (2).

The Second team won its game, defeating the Plainfield High School five by the same as that of the main game. It was a lively and a pretty contest. The line-up: Seconds—Sheppard, Templin, f; Aaholm, c; Hoagland, Miner, g. P. H. S.—Caldwell, Doane, Line, f; Gavett, c; Freeman, Leggett, Loizeaux, g.

POND TEAM SWAMPED.

Defeated By Hope Boys By Terrific Score of 54 to 16.

The Hope Boys' Club basketball team defeated a team from the Pond Tool Works, in the Hope Y. M. A. gymnasium, last night, the final score being 54 to 16. The game was the first of a series to be played between these teams. The Hope boys had no difficulty in scoring at will and the victory was an easy one. The line-up:

George McComb was referee; James Penny, timekeeper, and William Chamberlain, scorer.

STILLMAN TEAM WINS.

Defeats Westfield Freshmen at Basketball By Score of 21 to 11.

The basketball team from the Stillman Public School defeated the Westfield freshmen team at Westfield, yesterday afternoon, by a score of 21 to 11. The Plainfield boys had the best of the argument throughout the game. At the end of the first half the score was 10 to 9 in favor of the Plainfield boys and at the end of the second half the score stood 21 to 11. The best work for the Stillman team was done by Bohan, while Cherry excelled for Westfield. The line-up:

Stillman—Clark and Manley, forwards; Bohan, center; Little and Bristol, guards.

Westfield—Cherry and Delatour, forwards; Hanford, center; Irving, Brown and Taylor, guards.

Pythian Bowling Match.

Arrangements have been completed for two bowling contests between a team from Perseverance Lodge, K. of P., this city, and Newark Lodge, K. of P., champions of the Pythian League of Newark. The Newarkers will roll here, at McLaughlin's alleys, on February 20, and the return games will be rolled in Newark. Perseverance's team will be composed of V. W. Nash, George E. Firstbrook, W. N. Runyon, E. D. Cutting, John Cose and Philip Jahn.

Clear Snow From Fire Hydrants.

Chief Doane, of the fire department, issued a warning anent walk-cleaning this morning. Said Chief: "If the people who clear their walks will be careful to clean away the snow from and around the fire hydrants they may save time for the fire apparatus. A snow piled hydrant cannot be opened with any speed."

WINTER'S WORST STORM

Snowfall Which Began Yesterday Brought Nearly a Foot of "The Beautiful."

TRAFFIC HINDERED

Railroad Trains Ran Behind Time and Trolleys Had to Fight Hard to Get Through Drifts.

Business and travel suffered as a result of the snowstorm that began yesterday afternoon and which was still faintly active at noon today. The fall was so heavy by early nightfall yesterday that only the things on runners could move with anything like ease.

The snow came down in small particles, but the latter made up in number what they lacked in size. The air was full of them all through the afternoon and most of the night. They were driven by a biting East wind that drove them into the faces of those outdoors, and made the street the last place anyone with a fire wanted to go. By noon today a total of 11.8 inches had been registered.

The drifting piles took the starch out of the trolley and railroad schedules very early. Before night the surface cars were engaged in a losing battle with delay, and the trains were struggling haltingly to make their stations with no hope of promptness. The trolley sweeper hustled up and down the tracks, but the going was too heavy to be eased up more than a bit. The cars were able to move this morning, because the sweeper fought the snow all night, but not with any snap. The trains were steadily behind time. As a result the mails were late.

North Plainfielders found easier going this morning than their city brethren. The borough sidewalk plow was put into commission at 10 o'clock last night, and it was kept going. When the boroughites left their houses this morning they found the walks cleaned enough to make walking possible without rubbers—until they got to the city streets. Over the line, where industrious householders has not wielded the shovel it was a case of plunging through drifts.

PLAY PLEASED AUDIENCE.

"When Women Love" One of the Best Melodramas of the Season.

Despite the storm, a good-sized audience was at the New Plainfield theatre last night and was rewarded for braving snow drifts by witnessing one of the best melodramas of the season. "When Women Love" is the title and it is a cleverly written piece capably acted by a large company. The scenic effects are good and there is an absence of the "stupendous" features usually prominent in a play of this kind and which only serve to hinder the action.

"When Women Love" will be repeated tonight and should be seen by all lovers of good, clean drama.

Moument For Mrs. Rogers.

Rutland, Vt., Feb. 5.—The grave of Mrs. Mary Rogers, who was hanged at Windsor in December, 1905, for the murder of her husband at Bennington in 1902, is to be marked by a $600 monument. The donor's name is withheld other than it is a wealthy Vermont woman who was greatly interested in the desperate fight for Mrs. Rogers' life on the eve of her hanging. The order for the tribute has already been placed with a manufacturer of Barre. The monument will stand eight feet tall and will measure three feet six inches each way at the base, weighing three tons.

Bad Smell in a Defense.

Only one case was contested in the District Court today, that of the Joy Courts Realty Company against Marvin D. Rae, on contract. The plaintiffs sued for $240, claimed to be due for four months' rent on an apartment at 210 West 107th street, New York. The defense is that the odor from a dynamo in the cellar of the apartment house compelled the Raes to move out. They left in 1904. The case was still on at 2:15 o'clock, with Mrs. Rae on the stand. It was said a plea of recoupment would be filed. H. C. Runyon is the plaintiffs' lawyer. W. A. Coddington is the defendant's attorney.

Volunteer Firemen Killed.

White Plains, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Three volunteer firemen were killed and four injured, one probably fatally, while at work early yesterday morning on the ruins of the Mead Building, which was destroyed by fire Sunday night. The dead are. John Cromwell, thirty years old, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, of which institution his father is president; Charles E. Cooley, thirty years old, a real estate agent; Caleb Underhill, thirty-two years old, a liveryman.

—On Monday evening, February 11, at the Y. M. C. A. hall, D. W. Robertson's Famous Moving Picture Company of New York City, will give another of their matchless moving picture entertainments, which have become so popular in Plainfield. This will be Mr. Robertson's twelfth visit to this city, and already seats are selling, and indications are for another crowded house.

LAWSON SYNDICATE ATTACHED BY LOCAL MAN

H. G. RUNKLE ALLEGES MONEY FOR COPPER MINES WAS USED IMPROPERLY

Two orders of attachment of $500,000 each were issued yesterday by Judge Lawson in the Superior Court at Boston in favor of Henry G. Runkle, of this city, on the funds and property of Albert C. Burrage, Thos. W. Lawson, G. B. Burrage, the Eliot National Bank, National Shawmut Bank and the firm of Hayden, Stone and Company, bankers and brokers.

The orders were granted because of the two suits brought about three years ago. The first suit is to recover $386,125 subscribed by persons in 1899 to a syndicate for the purpose of developing copper mines in New Mexico and Arizona. It is alleged that the syndicate did not exercise reasonable care and judgment in the spending of the funds and received profit from the promotion.

The second suit is to recover $20,000 given by Runkle for the same purpose.

The bill of complaint alleges that Lawson Burrage and others organized a $500,000 syndicate to buy copper mines in Mexico and Arizona, and received subscriptions from a number of persons to the amount of $400,000 on representations that were not carried out.

It is alleged that they did not use proper judgment and prudence in the investment of the funds of the syndicate, but devoted them to the purchase of unworked and unprofitable copper mines, received large personal profits for the promotion of the enterprise, and offered the subscriber an unfair and disproportionate amount of the stock of the Arimex Consolidated Copper Company, which acquired the purchased properties.

Runkle declared himself willing to deliver the receipts and certificates of the subscribers represented by him, but wanted the defendants ordered to pay back what the subscribers paid in.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel will meet tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Louis Martin, 1004 West Third street.

COUNTRY CLUB'S ANNUAL

Elliott T. Barrows Elected President to Succeed George P. Mellick.

AMEND CONSTITUTION

Past Year the Most Successful in the History of the Organization.

Reports of the most successful year in the history of the Plainfield Country Club were presented at the annual meeting at the Casino, last night, officers were elected for the coming year, and several amendments were adopted, the most important of which was one providing that "The clubhouse shall be closed on Sunday except to such members, guests and transients as occupy rooms as boarders at the club." This amendment was originally proposed, but was amended slightly by Thomas M. Day and carried by a vote of 17 to 8.

The amendment caused spirited discussion on the part of some, who seemed to think that the wording might be miscontrued and permit an "open Sunday" at the club and eventually lead to Sunday golf. The retiring president, George P. Mellick, declared, however, that the purpose was to permit the classes mentioned in the amendment to remain at the clubhouse over Sunday, when they previously engaged rooms there and were considered boarders, and that its adoption would provide for the serving of meals. At present no one is allowed to remain in the clubhouse over Sunday and it is kept closed from Saturday night until Monday morning.

The other amendments adopted refer to the nominating committee, which shall be composed of five members, the trustees and the manner of election by previous notice, and independent nominations, all of which were published in The Daily Press a few days ago. They were adopted unanimously.

The report of the treasurer, which had previously been circulated among the members, shows receipts for the year of about $15,000 with a small balance in the treasury. There are now about 838 members of all classes. The annual reports of the club events and general comments by President Mellick, as also previously published, was referred to. Copies have been sent to all the members.

Stuart A. Patterson, Henry J. Cochran and James P. Murray were elected trustees, upon the motion of the nominating committee, and Charles W. McCutchen, Charles F. Abbott and Howard W. Beebe were elected a nominating committee for 1908.

In view of the retirement of Mr. Mellick as president and trustee, Elliot T. Barrows took occasion to speak of the appreciation of his long and faithful services, adding that he would be missed by the Board of Trustees, of which he had been a member since 1896. He offered a resolution expressing the appreciation of the club for his services and it was ordered spread on the minutes.

Mr. Mellick thanked the members for the kind words spoken. He recalled his association with the club when he first assisted in the organization of the Hillside Tennis Club, which later became the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and then the Plainfield Country Club. It was about in 1889 that the Hillside Tennis Club was organized and used to meet on Watchung avenue. He said that he had always been interested in the success of the club and hoped that its growth would continue.

Leighton Calkins also spoke of the retirement of Mr. Mellick with regret. He referred to his efficiency, tact under many trying circumstances, and took occasion to also speak of the retirement of Senator Ernest R. Ackerman as a trustee. He expressed the appreciation of the club for his faithful and conscientious service. Complimentary remarks were also made by John M. Whiton and Thomas M. Day.

After the regular club meeting the board of trustees met to organize. These officers were elected: President, Elliot T. Barrows; vice president, Thomas M. Day; secretary, James P. Murray; treasurer, Joseph M. Shellabarger; chairman of the greens committee, Leighton Calkins; chairman golf committee, Thomas R. VanBoskerck; chairman house committee, Lewis G. Timpson; chairman tennis committee, Henry J. Cochran; chairman building and grounds committee, Stuart A. Patterson. These various chairmen will select their own assistants later. After discussing matters pertaining to the approaching season, the meeting adjourned.

COLLEGE ALUMNAE ELECT CLUB MEMBERS

COMPLETE ORGANIZATION AT THE HOME OF THE MISSES GODDARD.

The college alumnae completed the organization of their club yesterday afternoon. Thirty-six graduates of women's colleges met at the home of the Misses Goddard, East Ninth street, and elected the officers of what was decided to call the Plainfield College Club. These are the officers:

President, Miss Margaret McCutchen, Smith; vice president, Miss Harriet Goddard, Wellesly; secretary and treasurer, Miss Elsie Suffern, Vassar. Miss McCutchen presided all through the session.

A complete constitution was adopted. The club is to meet "every little while," but not more than six times a year. The next meeting will be held in April; where, has not yet been decided.

Tea was served after the meeting. Tea will be a concomitant to all the meetings, but no plans have been made for a formal luncheon or dinner of the sort beloved by most college organizations.

CITY UNUSUALLY FREE FROM CONTAGIOUS DISEASE

REPORT OF SANITARY CONDITIONS MADE TO BOARD OF HEALTH.

According to the reports presented at the February meeting of the Board of Health, yesterday afternoon, it was shown that the sanitary condition of the city remains good and unusually free from communicable disease. But three cases of scarlet fever were reported during the past month. Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow reported that he had inspected nineteen dairies and all were found to be in excellent condition. The total number of inspections of all kinds was 153.

Complaints have been received by the board of the unsatisfactory way in which scavengers, licensed by the board, have been cleaning cesspools, it being stated that they did not scrape the bottoms of the cesspools and remove all solid matter. In view of this the board adopted a resolution authorizing the health officer to notify the licensed scavengers to do the work according to the provisions of the ordinance.

Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, president of the board, appointed the following committees for the year: Finance and supplies, W. C. Kinney, Charles H. Dunham; contagious diseases, Dr. T. S. Davis, W. C. Kinney; food and drink, F. W. Dunn, Dr. T. S. Davis: nuisances, Charles H. Dunham, F. W. Dunn.

During the past month there were reported twenty marriages, thirty-five births and thirty-four deaths. Permits were granted to Charles W. Squires and Dencklau & Co., to sell milk and to John Giles to collect garbage. The plumbers bond of Daniel W. Hibbits was approved and ordered filed and the bond of Willard L. Larrabee was not approved. It was decided to ask for bids for publishing the annual report of the board for 1906.

Special Lenten Services.

Rev. Charles Fiske, of St. John's church in Somerville, who has been spending several weeks doing mission work in Oakland, Cal., is expected home next week to have charge of the special Lenten services in his church. He has announced the following preachers, one from Plainfield, for these services: Feb. 13, Rev. Charles Fiske; Feb. 20, Rev. J. R. Atkinson, of Elizabeth; Feb. 27, Rev. W. Dutton Dale, of New Brunswick; March 6, Rev. E. J. Knight, of Trenton; March 13, Rev. C. S. Wood, of Roselle; March 20, Rev. Sydney Cross, of Westfield; March 27, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Plainfield.

Like An Old Time Ball.

The annual ball of Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E., at Saengerbund Hall, Friday night, gives every indication of being what the fire companies' balls were to Plainfield twenty years ago. Several hundred dollars have been appropriated for decorations and the grand march will be one of the prettiest ever seen in the city. Visiting delegations will be present from aeries at Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Newark and Jersey City.

K. G. E. Anniversary.

Freedom Castle, No. 42, K. G. E. will celebrate its anniversary Tuesday night, February 26. The newly appointed good and welfare committee, the make-up of which was announced at the meeting last night, will have charge of the affair. The committee is as follows: Dr. J. H. Buchanan, chairman; Edward Schmeyer, Raymond Carver, Frank Neidig and Walter Randall.

SMELL DEFENSE FAILS

Couldn't Prove Alleged Odor Was Strong Enough to Break Lease.

VERDICT AGAINST RAE

He Tried to Prove the Health of Family Suffered Through An Aroma From Lighting Plant.

Unable to prove that a dynamo in the cellar gave forth a smell strong enough to break a lease, Marvin D. Rae's defense of the action brought against him by the Ivy Courts Realty Company, of New York, for four months' rent of an apartment at 217 West One Hundred and Seventh street, New York, failed in the District Court yesterday. The case ended yesterday afternoon, after a trial lasting four hours. The verdict for the plaintiff amounted to $240, the apartment having rented for $60 a month.

Mr. Rae moved to this city in 1904, after giving up the apartment in One Hundred and Seventh street. The Realty company sued for the rent due for the four months the apartment was unoccupied. Mr. Rae's defense centered on the odor declared to have come from the electric lighting plant in the cellar of the house. The defense testified that the smell was so strong and so bad that the health of the family suffered. It was declared that a baby born in the apartment was weakened by it, and that a doctor ordered Mr. Rae to move in order to save the child from worse ill health.

The plaintiffs denied that there was anything like the smell complained of. It was admitted that on one day in the week, when the batteries of the plant were charged, an odor might be detected in the hall, but that a strong smell of any sort reached the Raes' apartment at any time was denied unqualifiedly. It was also denied that any vibration from the dynamo, which was also complained of, could be felt on the Raes floor. The agent of the apartment house swore that Mr. Rae told him, at the time he spoke of moving, that the doctor had ordered him to the country for the benefit of the general health of his wife and child, and not because of the alleged odor.

It was rumored about the court room early in the case yesterday that Mr. Rae would file a claim for recoupment on the ground of damaged health, but no such claim was introduced. Harry C. Runyon conducted the plaintiffs' case.

DEGREE TEAM TO TRAVEL.

Freedom Castle, K. G. E., Initiators Invited to Yonkers.

To demonstrate the full beauty of the degree work when displayed by a well balanced team, the degree experts of Freedom Castle, No. 42, K. G. E., will go to Yonkers, N. Y., the night of Washington's birthday, to put a large class through the three degrees. This is the first time a New Jersey team has been asked to leave the jurisdiction to give an example of the work.

The request for the team was made by Supreme Chief John D. Harger, who is helping on a lodge boom at Yonkers. He was highly impressed with the work of Freedom's team when he visited the castle recently.

Inspection of Schools.

Dr. S. Josephine Baker, of New York, made an interesting address last night on the medical inspection of schools before the Public Education Society in Somerville. She is the personal representative of Dr. Thomas Darlington, Health Commissioner in New York. The work of medical inspection in the Somerville public schools has already been commenced by Dr. McConaughy and will be continued by the physicians of the town in rotation.

Celebrated Silver Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walsh, of McKinley place, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding at their home Monday night. About fifty guests were present to enjoy the festivities and congratulate the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Walsh received a great many handsome gifts. An elaborate collation was served during the evening.

Last McIntyre Concert.

The fourth McIntyre Chamber Concert, and the last of the season's series, will be given at the Casino, Friday night, with Mrs. Viola Waterhouse, soprano, of New York, as assisting artist. Tickets can be had at Armstrong's drug store.

Company K's Annual Banquet.

At the business meeting of Company K on Monday night the entertainment committee was authorized to go ahead and make arrangements for the annual banquet to be held on Monday night, February 25.

COMPLETING PLANS FOR BOARD OF TRADE DINNER

COMMITTEE PREPARED TO ANNOUNCE LIST OF SPEAKERS.

Arrangements are rapidly being completed for the annual banquet of the Board of Trade to be held at the Casino on Tuesday night. The committee on speakers, of which Alexander Gilbert is the chairman, will be prepared to announce the complete list tomorrow. It is expected that several men of State prominence will speak.

Among those from this city who will speak will be Rev. B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church, and Rev. Geo. A. Warner, of the Church of the Holy Cross. The committee in charge of the details for the banquet have left nothing undone in providing a fine menu and good music.

The committee hopes to be able to secure the presence of Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation, who will be asked to speak on the toast of "Public Utilities." He has been invited and a favorable answer is expected this week. The tickets for the affair are selling rapidly and those intending to be among the guests should secure them as early as possible.

ASSESSOR WAS TOLD TO MAKE NEILSON LEVY

MR. HAND GIVES OUT A STATEMENT ON THE CLERGYMAN'S CASE.

That the public may know he did not act without consideration in placing a levy against Rev. W. H. Nielson for the personal property of his wife in New York, which assessment Mr. Nielson has succeeded in having quashed, as reported in yesterday's Daily Press, Assessor Charles H. Hand, in whose ward Mr. Neilson lives, made a statement regarding the case this morning.

Mr. Hand assessed the property, which was valued at $50,000, under instructions from the County Board of Taxation, and by subsequent legal advice. Before the property was brought within the ken of the local assessors, Mr. Neilson appeared before the New York tax commissioners, and swore off the levy on it, directed against him, on the ground that he was a resident of this State. He is said to have acknowledged before the commissioners that the value of the estate was $50,000. The New York commissioners dropped a line to the Union County Board of Taxation, informing the body that there was a man in Plainfield with $50,000 worth of personal property in his charge who couldn't be taxed in New York.

When the County Board met the local assessors in the Council Chamber in this city soon after that, the members told Mr. Hand to put Mr. Neilson down for $50,000 worth of personal property. Subsequent to that Mr. Hand sought legal advice, and was told that, in the face of Mr. Neilson's appeal from the New York levy, the property was plainly taxable here. Thereupon Mr. Hand made the assessment.

Mr. Nielson brought his action to set the Plainfield assessment aside on the ground that he was simply trustee for Mrs. Nielson, and that the custody of the property is in the hands of the Supreme Court of New York. Corporation Counsel Marsh advised the Common Council that the city could not collect the tax.

The New York tax commissioners have been advised of the case. They are expected to take up the matter.

Storm Stalled Freeholders.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders were to have had a special meeting in Somerville yesterday to award the contract for macadamizing the public road from North Branch to the Hunterdon county line and from North Branch to North Branch Depot, but some of the county roads were so badly blocked with snow that a quorum of members were not able to reach Somerville, and the special meeting was indefinitely postponed.

Accepts Position as Gen. Manager.

George M. Macintyre, of West Front Street, has taken a position with the Laing Machine-Auto Repair Company, on Sycamore street, between Fourth and Fifth streets. He will act as general manager for the company. Mr. Macintyre has had a long experience with the automobile business and is thoroughly acquainted with every detail.

P. H. S. Alumni Annual.

Frank Moss, counsel for the Parkhurst Society for the Prevention of Vice, New York, will speak before the Plainfield High School Alumni Association at its annual meeting February 22. It is probable Mr. Moss' address will be open to the public.

REED FOR BRIGGS' PLACE

North Plainfielder One the Two Prominent Candidates For the Job.

PAYS $6,000 A YEAR

Senator Dryden Said to Have Pledged Support to Daniel Voorhees, of Morristown.

With the U. S. Senatorial fight off their hands the State Legislature will have another important matter to deal with, that of the appointment of a State treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by the elevation of Frank O. Briggs, the present incumbent, to the United States Senate, succeeding Senator Dryden.

Two candidates have so far loomed up prominently for the job, former Senator Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, and County Clerk Daniel S. Voorhees, of Morristown. Voorhees is said to have the support of Senator Dryden and his friends in the Legislature, this matter being settled at a conference held in the Prudential Building, Newark, one day last week, at which Dryden practically decided to retire from the Senatorial race.

That Mr. Reed is also a candidate for the position is not denied by his friends in this city and borough. A reporter for The Daily Press was unable to see Mr. Reed today owing to his absence from his offices. From that source it is given out that he is in Washington, D. C. From this fact it is to be inferred that Mr. Reed is at the national capital for the purposes of rallying national influences to his support in the contest for the office. Mr. Reed has many friends in the administration at Washington and for this reason it is not at all improbable that he will develop into a strong candidate for the place.

Mr. Reed was a candidate for the office five years ago but was beaten out by Mr. Briggs after one of the biggest fights in New Jersey legislative history. Mr. Reed had the support of the Senate but was unable to muster sufficient strength in the Assembly, hence his defeat by a narrow margin. After that setback Mr. Reed retired from State politics and has since confined his activities to local affairs.

There is no doubt that Senator Reed is well qualified to fill the office and his local friends are anxious to see him win out in the fight. Mr. Voorhees is also known locally, being an uncle of Mrs. James T. MacMurray, of this city.

While the smoke following the battle for the U. S. Senatorship is slowly blowing over there is much discussion over the election of Briggs. While the fact is clear that Dryden was personally defeated for re-election it remains to be seen that his terms of surrender were all arranged in his favor by his chief lieutenant and son-in-law, Colonel Anthony Kuser. When Dryden decided to retire from the race, he personally selected Briggs, and also picked out Voorhees as the man to take Briggs' place in the State treasurer's office.

As Mr. Reed remained in a neutral position during the senatorial fight and did nothing to hamper the chances of Dryden's re-election, it is the general impression that the "tall sycamore of Somerset" may have gone to Washington for the sole purpose of putting his case before Senator Dryden and asking for his support for the treasurership. The job pays $6,000 per annum.

SOMERSET DOCTORS' MEETING.

Kentucky Physician Will Make An Address On Health Matters.

The Somerset County Medical Society, of which the North Plainfield physicians are active members, is arranging to hold a public meeting in the assembly room of the high school in Somerville next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The speaker will be Dr. McCormack, of Bowling Green, Ky., who will deliver an address on "The Things About Doctors Which Doctors and Other People Ought to Know." He will go to Somerville as a representative of the American Medical Society and his address will be anent the relation of the physician to the public, the patent-medicine evil and fake practitioners. He will discuss hygiene, sanitary arrangements, and other health matters.

P. H. S. Seniors' Class Pins.

The seniors of the Plainfield High School are wearing their class pins which arrived today. It is a seal pin, having the high school in relief, bordered with the class colors, red and green.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Bertha Frazee, of Elmwood place, to Lawrence Fahn, Jr., of Somerset street. The wedding will take place in the spring.

ACKERMAN REFUSED TO VOTE FOR BRIGGS

WRITTEN TAX COMPLAINTS REACHED A TOTAL OF 868

COMPILATION OF LIST COMPLETED BY COUNTY BOARD'S SECRETARY.

William R. Townsend, secretary to the Union County Board of Taxation, has just completed the compilation of written complaints and decided by the board up to February 1, and he finds a total of 868. This does not include the hundreds of verbal complaints received. As yet Mr. Townsend is not able to give the number of complaints granted and refused, but a statement of this will be made within a short time.

Elizabeth presented the greatest number of written complaints, a total of 359, and Plainfield was second in order with 154. It is noticeable that no complaints were received from Clark township, Mountainside and New Providence Borough.

The written complaints received in the order of towns, cities, boroughs and townships throughout the county are as follows:

Clark township, 0; Cranford, 94; Elizabeth, 359; Fanwood township, 13; Fanwood borough, 4; Garwood borough, 3; Linden township, 17; Linden borough, 12; Mountainside, 0; New Providence township, 1; New Providence borough, 0; Plainfield, 154; Rahway, 8; Roselle borough, 41; Roselle Park, 25; Springfield, 5; Summit, 60; Union, 13; Westfield, 59; a total of 868.

WORK PROGRESSING ON MT. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE

CONTRACTORS EXPECT TO HAVE BUILDING READY FOR ROOF BY APRIL.

Mt. St. Mary's College which has been in course of construction on the picture lands near Mountain avenue, the borough, has reached that point where the work is progressing rapidly and it is the hope that the main building will be ready for the occupancy of pupils by August 1. A large force of men has been working steadily on the large structure and it is expected that by April it will be ready for the roof.

This roof will cover the largest area of any building in this vicinity, it being approximately 2,000 square feet. The architecture of the college is very attractive and when completed will be one of the best equipped of any in the State. The college is being erected on land given for the purpose by David T. Kenney, of North Plainfield.

John Abbott & Son have the general contract for the construction work and the other contracts have just been given out. William H. Bartle has the mason and stone work; Daniel Galbraith that of plumbing and steam-fitting; John H. Cose the roofing, and Philip Jahn's Sons that of the sheet metal work.

In connection with the general improvements of the property in that section is the building of a fine macadamized road leading from Mountain avenue to the college, and W. H. Bartle, who has the stone and mason contract, has built a private road from Washington Valley to the college over which he carts the stone used in the building.

Father Miller, rector of St. Joseph's church, the borough, as well as officials of the college from Bordentown, make frequent visits to the new college to inspect the work and they are much pleased with the progress thus far made. Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, who is the head of the Trenton Diocese, in which the college is located, keeps in close touch with the building of the new structure and many of his suggestions have been incorporated in the plans.

Library Directors Meet.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library was held at the library last night with the following directors present: Col. Mason W. Tyler, president; J. Herbert Case, treasurer; W. M. Stillman, secretary; Dr. Leonard Waldo and W. F. Merrill. The treasurer's report for the months of December and anuary was presented and placed on file, as well as the librarian's report for January. Following the regular routine business and payment of bills the meeting adjourned.

Senator Colby Also Bolted the Caucus and Held Out For Mahlon Pitney.

MAJORITY REDUCED

Successful Candidate for Dryden's Place Got Through Only By Narrow Limit.

The election of Frank O. Briggs as United States Senator to succeed John F. Dryden, as announced in yesterday's Daily Press, came after one of the greatest political struggles in the history of New Jersey.

It was a case of battle until the last moment and the successful candidate got through by a bare majority. Senators Ackerman and Colby bolted to the last ballot and the party majority was cut to narrow limits.

Forty-one Republican votes were recorded for Briggs. Fake, of Bergen, voted for him, although he staid out of the caucus. Buck, of Cumberland, was absent because of illness.

Senator Colby voted for Mahlon Pitney after bolting the Briggs caucus, and Ackerman voted for John W. Griggs. He also remained out of the caucus.

All day long the fight was waged against Briggs, and when the caucus was held Briggs had but 40 votes, not a majority of all the Republicans in the joint meeting, but a majority of the members present.

When the voting commenced in the joint meeting Senator Ackerman, of Union, was understood as voting for Briggs, when he really voted for Griggs. His was the first name on the alphabetical list, and his mistaken vote was applauded to the echo. It was not until the result was announced that it was known that Ackerman really voted for Griggs.

With Ackerman, of Union, and Colby, of Essex, voting away from Briggs, the election seemed to turn on the absence of the two Democrats, Aufderheide and Eppinger, of Hudson. Fake, of Bergen, was in consultation with former Assistant Postmaster General William M. Johnson when the balloting was started. Fake was nervous and asked Johnson, "What shall I do?" Johnson replied: "Your duty is to go in the joint meeting and cast your ballot for Frank O. Briggs."

Fake went to his seat, and when his name was called said: "Frank O. Briggs." This vote was received with applause as the enormous audience, which crowded every portion of the Assembly chamber galleries and lobby, realized that Mr. Briggs was to be elected United States Senator by a full Republican majority of the whole membership of the joint meeting.

When Secretary Tyler announced the vote of 41 for Briggs and 35 for James E. Martine and one each for Pitney and Griggs, there was prolonged applause.

This was the Briggs vote:

Avis, Barber, Bradley, Brown, Burk, Buxton, Cattell, Chaplin, Crowther, Davison, Devine, Drake, Elvins, Fake, Frelinghuysen, Gibbs, Haines, Hand, Hillery, Hutchinson, Irick, Jess, Jones, Lee, Lewis, Lillagore, Manson, Minch, Moxon, Perkins, Plummer, Potter, Ridgeway, Robbins, Shinn, Smalley, Stille, Taylor, Thompson, Tillman, Wakelee. Total, 41.

Ackerman voted for Griggs and Colby for Pitney. The absentees were Buck (Rep.), of Cumberland, and Aufderheide and Eppinger (Dem.), of Hudson.

President Minch, of the Senate, the presiding office of the joint meeting, declared Briggs elected Senator from New Jersey and the joint meeting dissolved, ending the fight.

Interesting as was the election of Briggs, the whole day was full of surprises. The supporters of State Assessor David Baird, of Camden, worked all night in an effort to land enough votes to win him the caucus nomination, and although Assemblyman Buck was in the company of newspaper correspondents until long after midnight, it was announced early in the morning that he had appendicitis and had been taken back home to Cumberland county. Mr. Buck is an ardent supporter of Gov. Stokes. Before 8 o'clock in the morning Senator Avis, of Gloucester, was at the State House looking for votes for Senator Bradley, of Camden, for Senator. It was announced that Baird had withdrawn and thrown his

"As Told in the Hills," the new melodrama of Western life, will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night. The play is regarded as the best of the new offerings of the season in the melodramatic line and has met with unqualified success from its first performance. It has a strong plot, original and cleverly conceived, and the play is written with true dramatic skill and literary excellence.

The real emotions that are experienced in every-day life were never more beautifully portrayed, it is said, than in Spencer and Aborn's comedy dramatic offering, "A Wife's Secret," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night. "A Wife's Secret" was first produced two years ago by these well-known managers on a splendid scale, both from a scenic standpoint, and in point of excellence in the cast. It was hailed at once by press and public, as a welcome addition to the list of melodramatic and comedy-dramatic successes. Since then, it has piled up a record of crowded attendence never excelled in the popular priced houses, and there is little doubt that it will hit the spot to perfection among the patrons of the New Plainfield theatre. Though "A Wife's Secret" possesses many thrilling scenes and exciting adventures necessary to melodrama, its sponsors claim for it more than this—distinct merit as a play of human sentiment and clever character drawings. Its pictures are said to portray all of the phases of real life, as it is today, with quick passages from grave to gay, and from ridiculous to the sublime, with comedy, human nature, humor and pathos, all cleverly blended in an absorbing story of the kind that gains and holds the rapt attention of its auditors from start to finish.

Maclyn Arbuckle (the original County Chairman) and his brilliant company in George Ade's spectacular comedy, "The County Chairman," will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. This announcement should create unusual interest, partly on account of the play's prevailing spirit of jollity and partly also by reason of its wholesome simplicity and fidelity to home life and character. Its types are true to everyday life, its love interest is charming, its drollery is delicious, and its dramatic episodes are intensely stirring. Maclyn Arbuckle in "The County Chairman" comes to this city endorsed by long engagements in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

William Hand & Sons, general truckers, of East Second street, move goods to all part of the country, promptly. The prices are reasonable.

J. W. Brady, proprietor of the Plainfield Art Store in the Y. M. C. A. building, invites your inspection of his artists' materials and art works.

There is scarcely anything that gives the pleasure to be found in an Edison phonograph or Victor talking machine and Harry K. Lister carries both at his store on North avenue; also a full line of records.

A. M. Griffen, the East Front street hardware merchant, is always prepared to attend to your plumbing and heating work for you promptly and at reasonable charges. He also carries a full line of housefurnishings.

When out shopping go to the Woodhull & Martin Company store and you will have no trouble in getting what you want at reasonable prices. Every department is just filled with the best goods to be found in the market and you can get anything from men's furnishings to housefurnishing goods. The cloak and suit department as well as that of carpets and draperies, cannot fail to interest and please you.

—It was James B. Conklin and not James B. Compton who was appointed a call-man at the meeting of the Common Council Monday night.

EVENING DRESS SUITS
We make it easy for a man to be appropriately dressed for every occasion, whether for receptions, card parties, smokers, the theatres or weddings. We make it easy by annihiliating the enormous profits that were once asked by the tailors.
We sell a first-rate Tuxedo Suit—fine looking, splendidly tailored, silk-lined, satin-faced, in the most fashionable model, for only $15.00.
The price is so low as to discredit this suit, but stood side by side with suits that the lowest-price tailor would ask you $30 to $50 for, these Tuxedo Suits hold their own. Perhaps an expert could tell the difference between the cloth in these $15.00 Tuxedo Suits and one that would cost $50.00; but the ordinary observer no difference would be apparent, and in the matter of wear there is as little difference as in the appearance.
Full Evening Dress Suits, equal in character and quality to the $15.00 Tuxedos, are here at $20.00.
Other Evening Dress Suits up to $35.00.

Evening Apparel for Men
This establishment has won first place for itself as purveyors to well-dressed gentlemen. This proud position has been held for some years—gained through carrying the largest and most complete stocks of Evening Dress Wear, and in presenting only the most fashionable and dependable products of the foremost makers.
The variety here is always tremendous, the stock embracing practically everything that any well-dressed man could wish for, and the prices are always moderate, no extravagant profits being asked for exclusiveness or for name.

DRESS SHIRTS.
You begin with the standard Earl & Wilson make, which is without question the best obtainable; perfect in fit and most excellent in finish; five different styles to choose from, at $2.25.
Other excellent makes, very popular, are the Monarch, Cluett and Wachusett, splendidly finished and perfect-fitting shirts that may be had at 75c, $1.00 and $1.50.

COLLARS AND CUFFS.
Earl & Wilson Collars—Finest of Linen, perfect in fit; 25c each; $2.75 the dozen. Earl & Wilson Cuffs—25c and 40c the pair; $2.75 and $4.50 the dozen. Arrow Brand Cuffs—two for 25c; $1.50 the dozen. Cuffs, 25c a pair. Boys' Collars in a large variety of styles, 10c each. We also carry cuffs for men and boys at 15c a pair.

DRESS NECKWEAR.
Neckwear for formal or informal occasions in the widest variety of prevailing styles. English Squares and Ascot Scarfs for day weddings, afternoon calls, receptions and matinees; white or pearl Barathea silks, at the modest price of $1.00.
Club and Bat Wing Ties and Band or Shield Bows of lawn or mercerized Barathea for the evening dress suit, for receptions, formal dinners and theatres, at prices from 12½c to 50c.
Black Silk Ties and Bows, such as are worn with Tuxedo Suits for informal dinners, club, stag and at home affairs; 25c, 50c and 75c.

EVENING DRESS PROTECTORS.
Your dress outfit is not complete without one of these handsome protectors, which not only add to your appearance and comfort, but saves the soiling of your linen while en route to theatre or social function of any sort. A very large stock here to choose from—all the newest shapes, made of finest silks; lined in most exquisite style; prices $1.00 to $5.00.

CONSTIPATION CURSE OF MANKIND
Dr. Oidman's Liv-r-oids never fail to cure Constipation, Billiousness and all Liver Complaints. They destroy the germs and thus remove the cause.
You May Try a Full-Sized Bottle Free.
Constipation is the starting point of all kinds of dangerous and distressing diseases, such as Appendicitis, Piles, Billiousness, Sick Headaches, Dyspepsia Female Troubles and scores of others. If your bowels are strong and healthy they will act properly and disease cannot enter or remain in the system. A sound Stomach means sound lasting health.
The true way to cure constipation, Billiousness, Sick Headache and all those diseases arising from a Torpid Liver, has been discovered by Dr. Oidman, and his prescription is known as Liv-r-oids. We ourselves know that Liv-r-oids will cure the worst forms of constipation and all the dangerous diseases of the Bowels and Liver, which are such a great menace to life. If you have never tried Liv-r-oids before, we will send absolutely free to every one sending name and address, a 25 cent bottle of this great remedy. Liv-r-oids make you feel right, and make you look on the bright side of life.
Liv-r-oids are not a patent medicine but an eminent physicians prescription in tablet form (formula on bottle). There is no element of doubt in the curing power of Liv-r-oids. They are not a miracle, but only science working along on natural lines assisting nature. We want you to try Liv-r-oids to-day, they sell at 25c. a bottle, but if you have not tried them before, send your name and address and you will receive a full sized bottle free—no obligations—nothing to pay—merely recommend them to your friends if they do what we claim. FOR TABLE DECORATION.

An elaborate and yet easily worked set of plate doilies and a long oblong scarf for the centre of the table were seen recently in an art store. This set was of fine white linen, with pointed inserts of Valenciennes lace and an edge and vine embroidered in several shades of green filo.

The doillies were circular, with four pointed inserts of the lace connected by a heavier edge, so shallow as to scarcely amount to a scallop. This was worked in an open buttonhole stitch about one-sixteenth of an inch apart. Beneath the edge and between the lace points were graceful sprays of maidenhair fern done in satin stiich in the natural colors.

The long centerpiece was worked in the same manner, but in addition to the lace inserts on the edges it also had them at intervals through the centre, with maidenhair arranged in loose wreaths around them.

Such a set would be especially effective on a mahogany table with green and white china and a silver fern dish filled with the real maidenhair ferns.

RAILROADS PAY STATE HALF MILLION IN TAXES.

Big Companies Make Plans to Fight Main Stem Tax Law—Little Ones Settle Up.

More than $500,000 has been turned into the State treasury during the past few days by the railroad companies in settlement of the one-half of one per cent. main stem" tax, which fell due yesterday. The Central Railroad of New Jersey was the first of the larger railroads to make its settlement.

The Erie, New York, Susquehanna and Western, Lehigh Valley, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western and West Shore followed suit yesterday, with some of the smaller unclassified systems.

The separate amounts paid by some of these systems follow: D., L. & W., $167,612; Lehigh, $91,248; Erie, $67,854; Susquehanna, $32,363; West Shore, $21,980; New Jersey Junction, $7,141; Raritan River, $1,766.

A few of the smaller independent railroads have not joined with their more powerful contemporaries in the litigation to test the "main stem" tax act. The Tuckerton railroad, for example, paid over yesterday $3,605, which is the full amount of tax levied by the State. Had it followed the larger roads example by paying only one-half of one per cent. its check would have been only $1,000.

To Settle Jap Question.

Washintong, D. C., Feb. 6.—Mayor Schmitz, of San Francisco, and the representatives of the School Board of that city are expected to arrive in this city on Friday, and the Congressional representatives of California made arrangements with the President today to meet the delegation on that day. It is expected this conference will put an end to all that is important in the Japanese school controversy. It is understood the meeting will be most amicable and mutual concessions will be made. This impression comes from California's representatives here, who say they see no reason for any further difference of opinion, and they feel that when once the President has learned from Californians their views of the situation there will be no further difficulty. They are very positive that all war talk will subside and the question will be considered in a matter-of-fact manner. In the departments, particularly in the War and Navy, all talk of war is decried. In the Navy Department it is regarded as unfortunate that anything of the sort should have arisen, since the services of the two countries have always been on the most friendly terms.

Expect Pennsy Strike.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 6.—So serious do the officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad consider the situation between the railroad and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who are demanding an increase of pay, that, following a meeting between General Manager Atterbury and a committee of the employees held at the Broad street station, yesterday, a special meeting of the officers and several of the Board of Directors was held to consider what should be done in the event of a strike being declared. Final refusal was today given to the men's demands and the angry disposition shown by the committee of the employees at the treatment accorded them caused such apprehension at Broad street station that measures were at once taken to prepare for any possible emergency. One of the first things done was to issue a hurry call to members of the railroad detective force in all parts of the State to report at once to the head of the department in the Arcade building, Fifteenth and Market streets. Each train brought some of these detectives, and by evening a large force had been gathered.

Bell Boy Was a Girl.

Beaumont, Texas, Feb. 6.—A strange case of dual personality came to light here yesterday. On December 17 of last year a young man, apparently about twenty-five years old, called on the secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association and required to be assisted in his search for employment. He said he came originally from New York, but had become ill in New Orleans and was only recently discharged from a hospital there. He gave his name as Perry Martin. Employment was obtained at the Oaks Hotel as bellboy. Last Friday the manager saw the bellboy without his coat and noted that the contour was not masculine. Charged with masquerading in false attire, the young woman burst into tears and confessed her sex. She declared she had been compelled by force of circumstances to don man's apparel. She vounteered no statement as to her past life. She left yesterday for Houston.

$1,000,000 From Mrs. Sage.

Troy, N. Y., Feb. 6.—The gift by Mrs. Russell Sage of $1,000,000 to the Emma Willard School, of this city, was announced yesterday at a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the institution when the gift was formally accepted. The handsome buildings which are now in the centre of the city, including Russell Sage Hall, are to be taken down and the stone and brick removed a mile and a half to a picturesque spot on one of the hills on the outskirts of the city, where the buildings will be restored as nearly as possible as now. In addition, new buildings will be erected.

SENATOR BRIGGS.

By the selection of Frank O. Briggs to succeed John F. Dryden in the United States Senate, which prediction was made by The Daily Press three weeks ago, the Republican members of the New Jersey Legislature have happily ended a long drawn out and somewhat acrimonious contest within the party. The continuance of the deadlock at Trenton seriously threatened Republican prospects in the State and aggravated differences of opinion aroused by the issues underlying Mr. Dryden's canvass for re-election. To have ended the session without harmonizing those differences would simply have been to invite defeat at the polls next fall. Mr. Dryden's timely and judicious retirement opened the way for a satisfactory compromise between the two elements in the Republican ranks, and the unanimous nomination of Mr. Briggs makes it clear that practical party unity has been restored.

As a loyal supporter of the junior Senator Mr. Briggs attracted the bulk of Mr. Dryden's supporters, and as a representative of South Jersey, which has had no Senator since General Sewell's death, he became the natural choice of the South Jersey element when Governor Stokes' determination not to run counter to the provisions of the State constitution by accepting an election to any other office while serving as Governor was demonstrated to be final and sincere. Mr. Briggs has a high personal reputation and has shown aptitude for public life. His election ends a dangerous situation and will create a general feeling of relief and gratification.

The selection of James E. Martine as the unanimous choice of the Democrats for United States Senator is another honor for a man who justly deserves it. Perhaps it was only intended as a compliment, but it paved the way for other things and may not be without its results. His name was mentioned at Trenton yesterday as the next Democratic Gubernatorial candidate and when the time comes his choice will in all probability be just as unanimous.

VALENTINE SOCIAL.

Seventh-Day Baptist Young People Gather at Dr. Clawson's Home.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, a Valentine social was held last night at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Marcus L. Clawson, of Park avenue. No special programme was prepared, the evening being devoted to the playing of games, a feature being the shooting at a large heart with a bow and arrow. During the evening there was a piano duet by Miss Eva Rogers and Miss Helen Rogers. The home was attractively decorated with red hearts.

Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard poured tea and coffee in the dining room, and she was assisted by Miss Evaloise St. John and Miss Helen Rogers. The social committee in charge of the affair comprised Miss Mary St. John, Miss Eva Rogers and Mrs. Charles H. Dunham.

Business College to Move.

The Plainfield Business College, which has occupied the third floor of the City National Bank since it was started here several years ago by Mr. Phelps, will soon move to the Woodhull & Martin building on East Front street, where there will be more room to mee the increasing demands of the college. During the past year the number of pupils enrolled has steadily increased, until the present accommodations are not large enough to carry on the several branches of work. Prof. Herr, proprietor and head of the college, is planning a number of improvements that will greatly add to the efficiency of the school.

ACKERMAN NOT FOR BRIGGS

strength to Bradley. The Briggs forces met this with some concern, as a Bradley fight was looked upon as a move of the forces of Gov Stokes. It was known that Stokes did not want an out-and-out South Jerseyman to win the fight for Senator, and some of the Briggs men saw the hand of the Governor attempting to hold the election of a Senator off for another year, when there would not run against him the constitutional inhibition to his election during the Gubernatorial term.

Late in the morning Baird came to the State House and said that there was a mistake, that he was for Briggs, had been for Briggs all the time, and every effort he could put forth would be used for Briggs. Baird went to work and soon the Bradley boom died. Avis was conspicuous in promoting Bradley after he had a long talk with Gov. Stokes.

Colby, who the day before had been declaring that he would vote for Briggs, turned tail yesterday and declared he would have nothing to do with him. He said this so often that Dr. Crowther, Middlesex, attacked him in the caucus which started just before noon, calling him a political trickster. Colby left the Republican caucus announcing that he would never enter one again. Then Senator Ackerman also left the caucus, saying he would not vote for Briggs on the rumor that the Briggs campaign was fixed before Dryden withdrew.

Mr. Haines, of Monmouth, being missing, telegrams and telephone messages were sent after him, and when he could not be found the regulars decided to go on with their caucus a little later in the day.

Later it was found that Fake, of Bergen, would not go in, and there was a wait until Haines arrived. Fake said that he was not personally opposed to Briggs, but he wanted to see what the people of his county thought of him, and had not found out, because the caucus followed so quickly the withdrawal of Dryden.

Frank O. Briggs.

Frank Obadiah Briggs was born in New Hampshire in 1850, and was a student at Phillips Exeter Academy in 1866-68. He entered West Point on September 7, 1868, and was graduated in 1872. Lieutenant Briggs served in the Second United States Cavalry as second lieutenant until 1877, when he resigned to enter the employ of the John A. Roebling's Sons' Co., Trenton. His services as an engineer were much in demand by the company, but finally he went in the financial department and is now the assistant treasurer. He is also a bank director and an official in the many Roebling companies.

Mr. Briggs was prominent in campaign clubs and political gatherings, and was on April 11, 1899, elected Mayor of Trenton, and served until January 1, 1902.

Governor Voorhees appointed him State Treasurer on January 3, 1902, upon the sudden death of George B. Swain, of Newark, and the appointment was ratified by the legislative election on February 11 following.

Mr. Briggs remained throughout the administration of Governor Franklin Murphy and into that of Governor Stokes.

In 1904 Mr. Briggs was elected chairman of the Republican State Committee, and still holds the place. He advised the equal taxation programme of the last Legislative, and when others were weakening because of the most powerful lobby the railroads had ever sent, Mr. Briggs, by virtue of his office as chairman of the Republican State Committee, called together some of the county leaders and told them that their legislators must not weaken, but must put through the equal tax programme. He succeeded, though the railroads went to the utmost length for a compromise, but Mr. Briggs said that the people demanded that the railroads pay their fair percentage of taxes, and the life of the Republican party in New Jersey was at stake.

Mr. Briggs led the Dryden fight for re-election as the fulfillment of a party pledge.

Fine Dress Rehearsal.

The final rehearsal for "The Chimes of Normandy," to be given at the Casino tomorrow night by the Plainfield Operatic Association, was held at the Casino, last night, and was satisfactory in every way. The participants went through the entire opera in costume and Mr. Holmes expressed much pleasure over the results. The work of the large chorus came up to the expectations of the director, and the soloists went through their parts perfectly. The production is deserving of generous support. There has been quite a demand for the tickets but there are a number of good seats remaining to be sold.

No Scarcity of Turkey.

There will be no scarcity of turkey and other good things at the annual turkey supper to be given by the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, tomorrow and Friday nights. The women have provided a liberal supply and no one will go hungry who patronize the affair. Good music will be furnished each night by Kenneth Stuart's orchestra.

LOTUS GLEE CLUB SCORES NOTEWORTHY SUCCESS.

Y. M. C. A. Audience Enthusiastic Over Last Night's Entertainment.

The Lotus Glee Club, assisted by Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith, passed its old high mark in the estimation of the Y. M. C. A. audiences last night. The success scored is indicated by the enthusiastic comment of one of the regular Star Course attendants: "I wouldn't have missed it for anything; it was the best Star Course entertainment I ever saw."

The strict accuracy of the last statement is a matter of opinion, but that the programme was one of the most enjoyable ever presented there is no doubt at all. The numbers were all delightful, and splendidly rendered. Mrs. Smith was as charming in her readings as at other appearances.

The quartette was made up of Harvey Hindermeyer, first tenor; O. Morgan Stricklett, second tenor; Charles L. Lewis, first bass; George Bermus, second bass. Mr. Lewis won warm applause from his townsfolk by especially good singing. The tragedy of the grasshopper—which was eaten by a turkey-gobbler—was sung with noteworthy success.

Frank J. Smith, the conductor, played his accompaniments with rare skill. There may be as good accompanists as Mr. Smith, but none better.

After Tardy Walk Cleaners.

Procrastinating property holders and tenants who neglected to clean their walks up yesterday were put on a black-list collected by the police last night. All the officers on duty took note of uncleaned walks and the house numbers were reported to Street Commissioner Gavett this morning. The street department men started out this morning to shovel the walks of the delinquents. The property owners will have to pay for it. Chief Kiely said this morning that the uncleaned walks did not total to an unusual number. The majority of people hustled the snow off early.

Flomerfelt Trial Again Delayed.

The third trial of Jacob Flomerfelt, who is under indictment in Somerset county for manslaughter, is not likely to be taken up in the Somerset county courts this term, because of the illness of the aged defendant at his home at Gladstone. Flomerfelt is charged with the killing of his brother-in-law, Constable Frank D. Cramer, at the latter's home in North Branch Depot, in a desperate fight over two years ago. The defendant has been tried twice and in each case the jury failed to agree. The trials caused deep interest because of the prominence of the Cramer and Flomerfelt families in Somerset county.

Sunday-school Rally.

The tenth anniversary services will be continued at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, with a Sunday-school rally. The speaker of the evening will be James R. Joy, of the First M. E. church Sunday-school, and there will be special instrumental music by a mandolin club.

Wings and Flies

By Tom Muir.

Manager "Bill" Counihan, who years ago used to run a bill-posting car for Barnum & Bailey, told the following story to a party of interested listeners in the Iroquois last evening:

"You know," said 'Bill,' "that the darkies down south think that there is no circus equal to that of John Robinson's. About ten years ago I had the gang posting bills at Columbus, S. C. Watching us were a couple of darkies. We had just put up the head streamer, reading 'Barnum & Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth,' when one of the darkies said to his companion, 'Look at dat, Sam; you know dat am a lie. Barnum & Bailey, whoebber dey are, hain't got de biggest show on earth. John Robinson has got de biggest show on earth.' 'Ob course he has,' replied the other darkey, who could not read, and depended on his companion for his information. Just then we put right under the greatest show announcement the date streamer, Sept. 1.

"'Now, dat's right,' said the first darkey.

"'How is dat,' asked the second one.

"'Why,' answered the other, slowly reading, 'Barnum & Bailey's greatest show on earth, sept one, and dat one am John Robinson's.'"

The first of the series of Laura Jean Libby's dramatizations of her own novels will be produced by Manager Charles E. Blaney at his theatre in Brooklyn on February 10. The novel was called "Miss Middleton's Lovers," but the play has been christeneed "Parted on Her Bridal Tour."

"The Galloper," the farcical comedy in which Raymond Hitchcock has been starring and which had its first performance in this city, has been converted into a musical comedy, and under the name of "The Yankee Tourist" will be produced by Manager Henry W. Savage at an early date.

The original Kirk La Shelle production of "Checkers" is to be one of the big novelties of the month at the New Plainfield theatre. It is booked for February 19.

The demand for seats for both matinee and night performances of Wilton Lackaye's "The Law and the Man," which will be at the New Plainfield theatre Lincoln's birthday, has been very large. The production is one of the largest and best that Manager Counihan has ever secured for his patrons and they have been quick to realize it. The company numbers forty people, many of them being among the Great White Way's favorite artists.

FOR LOCAL OPTION.

Congregational Men's Club Urges Legislators to Vote For It.

A resolution favoring the local option bill before the Legislature was passed by the Men's Club of the Congregational church last night. The secretary was instructed to write the assemblymen and senator and urge them to vote for the measure. The Congregational church, with several others in this city, took a stand for local option last year. The temperance movement is particularly strong in the Congregational church.

Following the meeting, which was well attended considering the weather, Joseph Lorraine, a humorist, entertained. Refreshments were served.

Warrant for Elizabeth Man.

Elizabeth, Feb. 6.—A warrant was issued in police court here yesterday afternoon by Judge Mahon for LeRoy Davis, twenty years old, of Salem avenue, this city, who, it is charged, last Wednesday tried to rob the grocery store of Edward S. E. Newbury. The young man is now in jail in New York city, where he was caught Saturday night by Detective-Sergeant Murphy and Detective Ward, of this city. Chief of Police Tenney will go to Albany early next week with a requisition on Governor Hughes for the prisoner, who will be brought here for trial.

DIES RATHER THAN RETURN TO HIS PIPE.

Johnson Swore Off Tobacco After Sixty Years, and, Needing Its Stimulus, Expires.

Atlantic City, Feb. 6.—"I will die trying to do right. I will not yield to temptation only to perish in hell fire," should be old John Henry Johnson's epitaph.

Conscious until his last gasp and glorifying in his moral strength, Johnson, eighty years of age, died at his home in Port Republic, Monday night. Up to a few days ago he had smoked tobacco incessantly for threescore years. As recently told in the papers, Johnson and every man and boy in the little town near here swore off tobacco after an evangelist in St. Paul's church declared eloquently that he who burns or chews or snuffs the weed will burn eternally that cigarette smokers will be particularly well broiled. Fired by the sermon Miss Amanda Blake, who keeps the general store in Port Republic, made a bonfire of her stock of pipes and tobacco.

Only a few hours after his renunciation of tobacco old Johnson was taken ill. His physicians said that his nervous system, accustomed to the tobacco stimulant for sixty years, was going to pieces for lack of it. They told Johnson that if he took to his pipe again he might get well. The old gentleman retorted with the words that may be graven on his monument.

Nor did he need the encouragement to stand fast given him in hundreds of letters from women and men which came to him after some of the facts here were published.

Johnson's funeral today will be one of the largest ever known in the shore village. A movement has been started to commemorate the old man's fortitude with an enduring shaft.

COST OF CORNELL FROLIC.

Students Endeavoring to Figure Up Their Expenditures for Junior Week Revelry.

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 6.—The last of the junior week girls who have been in possession of the Cornell campus for the past week departed yesterday, and the men are now trying to figure out the bills. It is estimated that this year's round of revelry cost about $30,000. Cornell junior weeks are generally the most elaborate in the country and this year's has proved no exception.

The four big serial events most about $10,000. The junior promenade involved an expenditure of about $3,500, the sophomore cotillion $2,500, the masque play and Glee Club concerts $2,000 apiece. The individual expenses of the men who took in the week and entertained necessarily fluctuate. There are about 100 men in the most noted fraternities whose expenses averaged $75, making a total of $7,500.

There are about 200 men who spent on a less elaborate scale, on an average of $50, making a total of $10,000. Then there were about a hundred more whose average expense was not more than $20, making a total of $2,000. The rest of those who took in some of the functions spent about $1,000. The cost of junior week to the girls can never be determined, but when it is considered that many of them traveled hundreds of miles to come here, and that practically every one of them had two new dresses for the big dances, their grand total would probably run way up into the thousands, too.

BIG INCREASE IN DEATHS.

January's List Is 1,000 More Than Was December's.

Trenton, Feb. 6.—According to the report of the State Bureau of Vital Statistics, the number of deaths in the State during January was 3,289, an increase over December of 1,019. The majority of deaths were due to diseases of the nervous system, the number being 617. There were 307 deaths from tuberculosis. The number from other diseases follow:

Typhoid fever, 45; measles, 4; scarlet fever, 11; whooping cough, 46; diphtheria and croup, 80; malarial fever, 3; tuberculosis of other than lungs, 53; cancer, 127; cerebro-spinal meningitis, 23; diseases of circulatory system, 343; diseases of respiratory system, 215; pneumonia, 332; infantile diarrhoea, 171; diseases of digestive system, 203; Bright's disease, 200ffi suicide, 22; all other causes, 687.

Cold Grips the West.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 6.—With few exceptions there has been below zero weather in this section for seventeen days and for three days thermometers have registered 22 degrees below zero. In North Dakota 30 degrees below was common, and this was coupled with terrific blizzards. For days the main lines of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie, the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railroads have been blocked and many of the branch lines have been at a standstill for weeks and months. There have been reports of many persons freezing to death, but these have been denied from North Dakota sources. It is, however, admitted by railroad managers that the spring thaws will reveal some grewsome tales of suffering, starvation and death.

Mrs. O. L. Jenkins is registered at the Chalfonte, Atlantic City. She arrived on Monday.

HIT BY TRAIN, ONE MAY DIE.

Adams Express Drivers in the Elizabeth General Hospital.

Elizabeth, Feb. 6.—Charles Johnson and Robert Wood, both 25 years old, drivers for the Adams Express Company, were struck by a special work train at the Pennsylvania Railroad station Monday night. They were taken to the General Hospital. It is feared that Johnson's skull is fractured and it is doubtful if he can recover. Wood's left arm and shoulder bone are broken and he is badly bruised about the body.

The men were hauling the trucks from the express storerooms across the tracks from the West. A freight train was approaching, but so far away that it gave them plenty of time to cross in safety. It concealed, however, the special coming from the same direction on the parallel track, which bore down on them before they were aware of their danger.

More Land Frauds.

San Francisco, Feb. 6.—Thomas B. Neuhausen, Inspector of the Interior Department, and the State Mineralogist, Lewis E. Aubury, have been investigating land locations in California, and, it is reported, have unearthed large frauds, which will be made a basis of criminal prosecutions. One of the men against whom proceedings will be begun is well known in San Francisco and has been rated a millionaire. Fifteen or twenty others are reported implicated by a report which Neuhausen has made to Washington. Frauds are said to have been discovered all the way from Siskiyou county to Death Valley. The most flagrant offences were in Tuolumne county, where homestead entries were freely made on the Table Mountain channel. This channel is of lava formation and contains rich deposits of gold. Millions of dollars worth of the yellow metal are said to have been extracted from this land.

INDICTED FOR MURDER.

Morris Grand Jury Makes Presentment Against James Dugan.

Morristown, Feb. 5.—The grand jury reconvened yesterday after adjournment from January 19, and found four additional indictments, one of which is for murder, in the case of James Dugan, the young man charged with shooting his grandfather, William Hager, of Mendham. The other three were against defendants who have been apprehended.

Besides the indictments, the Grand Jury presented Morris county for maintaining inadequate quarters for witnesses who wait upon the jury. These quarters consist of a room at one end of the vestibule, opening into the Grand Jury room.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY NOTES

List of Children's Picture Books at The Public Library.

One of the most attractive of the tables at the exhibit of children's books recently held at the Public Library, was the picture book table. The books there displayed appeal not only to the children for whom they were primarily intended, but to the large number of older persons who care for really good book illustration.

For the benefit of those interested, a list of those displayed is given. As will be seen the books show the names of some of our best contemporary illustrators.

Later we shall give a list of the fairy books.

Adelborg, Ottilie.—Clean Peter and the children of Grubbylea.

Bannerman, Helen.—Story of little Black Mingo.

Bannerman, Helen.—Story of little Black Quibba.

Bannerman, Helen.—Story of little Black Sambo.

Burgess, Gelett.—Goops and how to be them, illustrated by the author.

Burgess, Gelett.—More goops and how not to be them, illustrated by the author.

Caldecott, Randolph, illustrator.—Hey diddle diddle picture book.

Caldecott, Randolph, illustrator.—Panjandrum—picture book.

Caldecott, Randolph, illustrator.—Picture book. 2v.

Cox, Palmer.—Brownie books. 4v.

Crane, Walter, illustrator.—Baby's own Aesop.

Crane, Walter, illustrator.—Goody Two-shoes picture-book.

Crane, Walter, illustrator.—Flora's feast.

Crane, Walter, illustrator.—Masque of days.

Deming, Edwin W.—Indian child life, illustrated by the author.

Francis, J. G.—Book of cheerful cats.

Greenaway, Kate.—A apple pie, illustrated by the author.

Upton, Florence K. and B.—Adventures of two Dutch dolls and a golliwogg, illustrated by Florence K. Upton.

FOR THE YOUNG HOUSEWIFE.

You have very little knowledge of taking up the work in your own household, for this responsibility was never your portion at home. You want to do your own cooking and serving in that ne wlittle home, yet dread it with all your heart, because you know so little about the art of cooking. Let daintiness be the keynote of all you do when preparing and serving a meal. Do not begin trying French recipes with their fancy frills beore you learn the simple art of cooking. The one essential feature in cooking is to take time for it. A woman who rushes the cooking is never going to excel in that line of work. Do not try to make bread until you have mastered the art of cooking vegetables and meats. Then will it be time to learn how to make pastry.

In cooking meat never put the meat in a skillet with cold grease, or burning fat; the best results are obtained by slow cooking, keeping a lid on the skillet and occasionally dropping in a very little water to create steam, which you know is the quickest way to cook anything. In boiling meats place in the boiling water, or first place the meat in a dripping pan, partially cook it like a roast, then add enough water to boil. Always boil the meat dry, leaving enough liquor in which to cook vegetables. The secret of cooking vegetables is to use only enough water to cook them thoroughly done, and not have to drain them from the water. The instinct is natural, and a little care and judgment will serve you in the perplexing problems. Don't be ashamed to ask experienced persons hod to do a thing, and first begin with the simple, palatable meals.

Broke Jail for Fun of It.

Wooster, Ohio, Feb. 6.—Simply to show that they could, Allen Meller, Harry White and William Berhart, youths in jail here under indictment for murder in the first degree, made their escape yesterday morning by cutting the bars. The three got out of the steel cage and went down into another part of the building and gave themselves up. They escaped from jail a month ago and were recaptured in a few hours.

PENNSY RAILROAD GOES INTO TREE PLANTING.

Forced to Do It Because of the Scarcity of Material for Cross Ties.

A number of interesting stories have appeared in print telling of the scarcity of wooden cross ties for railroad uase and of the means employed by the more enterprising railroads to keep up the supply. The Pennsylvania, Santa Fe and Southern Pacific are principally interested in replenishing the rapidly disappearing forests from which the ties are obtained, and it is given out that the Lackawanna and Lehigh Valley Railroads are experimenting in this direction.

Thousands of acres of land chosen by experts as suitable for tree growing have been planted with young trees of the kind best suited for cross tie purposes, and it has been demonstrated by the Pennsylvania Railroad that in one year's time the young trees have shown satisfactory development and only a small percentage of loss, and that through breakage with plows which disturbed them during cultivation periods.

The cultivation of trees for tie purposes originated with the late President Cassatt, who was greatly interested in it, and President McCrea, it is stated, will carry out Mr. Cassatt's ideas. The P. R. R. has brought the cultivation of trees into New Jersey by setting out groves in that section of the State between Metuchen and Plainfield.

To further demonstrate the practicability of metal ties, that are already being tested on the Philadelphia division, the company has also laid a mile of track on metal ties between Metuchen and New Brunswick to dtermine whether metal can be used as effectively as wood. It is stated that the experiment has not proven entirely satisfactory because of the greater likelihood of the spikes loosening from the fish plates by the more pronounced vibration of steel as compared with wood. The experiment will be continued until it is seen definitely whether the steel ties will answer the purpose.

TO QUIT CHICAGO.

Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., Will Make Her Home in the East.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., will cease to be a resident of Chicago on Thursday next. In the future she will make her home in the East and will travel extensively abroad. With her will go the three direct heirs to the Field fortune.

On Thursday the big mansion of the late Marshall Field, Jr., at 1919 Prairie avenue, will be sold at public action. For many years occupied by the Fields, the $125,000 homestead is destined to pass into the hands of another family. Mrs. Field will arrive in Chicoga on Wednesday to stay three days.

Although it is said by friends that Mrs. Fields' decision to quit Chicago was reached because of her children, whom she wishes to be educated in the East, it is said that the tragic death of her husband a year ago is one of the contributing causes for the change. Mrs. Field has never cared to live within the walls of the big house since that time.

CHAPTER II.

A Face at Sherry's.

"Don't mention my name an thou lovest me!" said Laurance Donovan, and he drew me aside, ignored my hand and otherwise threw into our meeting a casual quality that was somewhat amazing in view of the fact that we had met last at Cairo.

"Allah il Allah!"

It was undoubtedly Larry. I felt heat of the desert and heard the camel-drivers cursing and our Sudanese guides plotting mischief under a window far away.

"Well!" we both exclaimed interrogatively.

He rocked gently back and forth, with his hands in his pockets, on the tile floor of the banking house. I had seen him stand thus once on a time when he had eaten nothing in four days—it was in Abyssinia, and our guides had lost us in the worst possible place—with the same untroubled look in his eyes.

"Please don't appear surprised, or scared or anything, Jack," he said, with his delicious intonation. "I saw a fellow looking for me an hour or so ago. He's been at it for several months; hence my presence on these shores of the brave and the free. He's probably still looking, as he's a persistent devil. I'm here, as we may say, quite incog. Staying at an East Side lodging house, where I shan't invite you to call on me. But I must see you."

"Dine with me to-night, at Sherry's—"

"Too big, too many people—"

"Therein lies security, if you're in trouble. I'm about to go into exile, and I want to eat one more civilized dinner before I go."

"Perhaps it's just as well. Where are you off for,—not Africa again?"

"No. Just Indiana,—one of the sovereign American states, as you ought to know."

"Indians?"

"No; warranted all dead."

"Pack train—balloon—automobile—camels,—how do you get there?"

"Varnished cars. It's easy. It's not the getting there; it's the not dying of ennui after you're on the spot."

"Humph! What hour did you say for the dinner?"

"Seven o'clock. Meet me at the entrance."

"I'll be there if I'm not in jail. Kindly allow me to precede you, and don't follow, please!"

He walked away, his gloved hands clasped lazily behind him, lounged out upon Broadway and turned toward the Battery. I waited until he disappeared, then took an up-town car.

My first meeting with Laurance Donovan was in Constantinople, at a cafe where I was dining. He got into a row with an Englishman and knocked him down. It was not my affair, but I liked the ease and definiteness with which Larry put his foe out of commission. I learned later that it was a way he had.

My friend, the American consul general at Constantinople, was not without a sense of humor, and I easily enlisted him in Larry's behalf. The Englishman thirsted for vengeance and invoked all the powers. He insisted, with reason, that Larry was a British subject and that the American consul had no right to give him asylum,—a point that was, I understand, thoroughly well-grounded in law and fact. Larry maintained, on the other hand, that he was not English but Irish, and that, as his country maintained no representative in Turkey, it was his privilege to find refuge wherever it was offered. Larry was always the most plausible of human beings, and between us,—he, the American consul and I,—we made an impression, and got him off.

I did not realize until later that the real joke lay in the fact that Larry was English-born, and that his devotion to Ireland was purely sentimental and quixotic. His family had, to be sure, come out of Ireland some time in the dim past, and settled in England; but when Larry reached years of knowledge, if not of discretion, he cut Oxford and insisted on taking his degree at Dublin. He even believed,—or thought he believed,—in banshees. He allied himself during his university days with the most radical and turbulent advocates of a separate national existence for Ireland, and occasionally spent a month in jail for rioting. But Larry's instincts were scholarly; he made a brilliant record at the university; then, at 22, he came forth to look at the world, and liked it exceeding well. His father was a busy man and he had other sons; so he granted Larry an allowance and told him to keep away from home until he got ready to be respectable. So, from Constantinople, after a tour of Europe, we together crossed the Mediterranean in search of the fleshpots of lost kingdoms, spending three years in the pursuit. We parted at Cairo on excellent terms. He returned to England and later to his beloved Ireland, for he had blithely sung the wildest Gaelic songs in the darkest days of our adventures, and never lost his love for The Sod, as he apostrophized—and capitalized—his adopted country.

Larry had the habit of immaculateness. He emerged from his East Side lodging house that night clothed properly, and wearing the gentlemanly air of peace and reserve that is so wholly incompatible with his disposition to breed discord and indulge in riot. When we sat down for a leisurely dinner at Sherry's we were not, I modestly maintain, a forbidding pair. We—if I may drag myself into the matter—are both a trifle under the average height, sinewy, nervous, and, just then, trained fine. Our lean, clean-shaven faces were well-browned—mine wearing a fresh coat from my days on the steamer's deck.

Larry had never been in America before, and the scene had for both of us the charm of a gay and novel spectacle. I have always maintained, in talking to Larry of people and races, that the Americans are the handsomest and best put-up people in the world, and I believe he was persuaded of it that night as we gazed with eyes long unaccustomed to splendor upon the great company assembled in the restaurant. The lights, the music, the variety and richness of the costumes of the women, the many unmistakably foreign faces that gave a cosmopolitan accent to the whole, wrought a welcome spell upon senses inured to hardship in earth's waste and dreary places.

"Now tell me the story," I said. "Have you done murder? Is the offense treasonable?"

"It was a tenants' row in Galway, and I smashed a constable. I smashed him pretty hard, I dare say, from the row they kicked up in the newspapers. I lay low for a couple of weeks, caught a boat at Queenstown, and here I am, waiting for a chance to get back to The Sod without going in irons."

"You were certainly born to be hanged, Larry. You'd better stay in America. There's more room here than anywhere else, and it's not easy to kidnap a man in America and carry him off."

"Possibly not; and yet the situation isn't wholly tranquil," he said, transfixing a bit of pompano with his fork. "Kindly note the florid gentleman at your right—at the table with four—he's next the lady in pink. It may interest you to know that he's the British consul."

"Interesting, but not important. You don't for a moment suppose—"

"That he's looking for me? Not at all. But he undoubtedly has my name on his tablets. The detective that's here following me around is pretty dull. He lost me this morning while I was talking to you in the bank. Later on I had the pleasure of trailing him for an hour or so until he finally brought up at the British consul's office. Thanks; no more of the fish. Let us banish care. I wasn't born to be hanged; and as I am a political offender, I doubt whether I can be deported if they lay hands on me."

He watched the bubbles in his glass dreamily, holding it up in his slim, well-kept fingers.

"Tell me something of your own immediate present and future," he said.

I made the story of my grandfather Glenarm's legacy as brief as possible, for brevity was a definite law of our intercourse.

"A year, you say, with nothing to do but fold your hands and wait. It doesn't sound awfully attractive to me. I'd rather do without the money."

TIME TO ACT.

Don't Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness—Profit by Plainfield People Experiences.

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches and dizzy spells are common early symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time, but return with greater intensity. If there are symptoms of dropsy—puffy swellings below the eyes, bloating of limbs or ankles, or any other part of the body, don't delay a minute. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and keep up the treatment until the kidneys are well, when your old-time health and vigor will return. Cures in Plainfield prove the effectiveness of this great kidney remedy.

Charles H. Lippencott, painter, of 107 Somerset street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "The statement made by me some years ago regarding what Doan's Kidney Pills had done for me was not only true at that time but now, four years later, I am glad to confirm it. I had dull, heavy pains around my groins, dreadful backache, dizzy spells and in damp weather or when I caught cold the trouble was so bad I could not get about. I tried by best to find some prescription or remedy to cure me, but without success. I was suffering intensely when I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's pharmacy, but it only required a few doses to convince me that I had the right remedy. In a short time I was cured. I have used your remedy since then and with the same satisfactory result. I am glad to say anything in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

"But I intend to do some work. I owe it to my grandfather's memory to make good, if there's any good in me."

"The sentiment is worthy of you, Glenarm," he said, mockingly. "What do you see—a ghost?"

I must have started slightly at suddenly espying Arthur Pickering not 20 feet away. A party of half a dozen or more had risen, and Pickering and a girl were detached from the others for a moment.

She was young,—quite the youngest in the group about Pickering's table. A certain girlishness of height and outline may have been emphasized by her juxtaposition to Pickering's heavy figure. She was in black, with white showing at throat and wrists,—a somber contrast to the other women of the party, who were arrayed with a degree of splendor. She had dropped her fan and Pickering stooped to pick it up. In the second that she waited she turned carelessly toward me, and our eyes met for an instant. Very likely she was Pickering's sister, and I tried to reconstruct his family, which I had known in my youth; but I could not place her. As she walked out before him my eyes followed her,—the erect figure, free and graceful, but with a charming dignity and poise,—and the gold of her fair hair glinting under her back toque.

Her eyes, as she turned them full upon me, were the saddest, sweetest eyes I had ever seen, and even in that brilliant, crowded room I felt their spell. They were fixed in my memory indelibly,—mournful, dreamy and wistful. In my absorption I forgot Larry.

"You're taking unfair advantage," he observed quietly. "Friends of yours?"

"The big chap in the lead is my friend Pickering," I answered, and Larry turned his head slightly.

"Yes, I supposed you weren't looking at the women," he observed dryly. "I'm sorry I couldn't see the object of your interest. Bah! these men!"

I laughed carelessly enough, but I was already summoning from my memory the grave face of the girl in black,—her mournful eyes, the glint of gold in her hair. Pickering was certainly finding the pleasant places in this vale of tears, and I felt my heart hot against him. It hurts, this seeing a man you have never liked succeeding where you have failed!

"Why didn't you present me? I'd like to make the acquaintance of a few representative Americans.—I may need them to go bail for me."

"Pickering didn't see me, for one thing; and for another he wouldn't go bail for you or me if he did. He isn't built that way."

Larry smiled quizzically.

"You needn't explain further. The sight of the lady has shaken you. She reminds me of Tennyson:

"'The star-like sorrows of immortal eyes—' and the rest of it ought to be a solemn warning to you,—many 'drew swords and died,' and calamity followed in her train. Bah! these women! I thought you were past all that!"

"I don't know why a man should be past it at 27! Besides, Pickering's friends are strangers to me. But what became of that Irish colleen you used to moon over? Her distinguishing feature, as I remember her photograph, was a short upper lip. You used to force her upon me frequently when we were in Africa."

"Humph! When I got back to Dublin I found that she had married a brewer's son,—think of it!"

"Put not your faith in a short upper lip. Her face never inspired any confidence in me."

"That will do, think you. I'll have a bit more of that mayonnaise if the waiter isn't dead. I think you said your grandfather died in June. A letter advising you of the fact reached you at Naples in October. Has it occurred to you that there was quite an interim there? What, may I ask, was the executor doing all that time? You may be sure he was taking advantage of the opportunity to look for the red, red gold. I suppose you didn't give him a sound drubbing for not keeping the cables hot with inquiries for you?"

Leal's Last Chance.

Leal's School will have a chance to get in the running for the interscholastic basketball championship this afternoon, when the five meets the Plainfield High School team. If Leal's wins, the private school will have a call on the title, but a defeat will push it irretrievably in the ruck. If the city school five does win, it will have the championship cinched. All of which is a long way of saying that the contest will be sizzling hot. There will be much rooting.

ELIZABETH MAN SPEAKS AT ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Missionary Societies in Charge at the Monroe Avenue Church Last Night.

Anniversary services were continued at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, last night, when the missionary societies of the church were in charge. There was the usual large attendance and the programme arranged was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Robert L. Lee read the Scripture lesson and Mrs. J. C. Pierson made the address of welcome.

The address of the evening was given by Clarence Titus, of Elizabeth, who is secretary of "World Evangelism" of the Elizabeth District Conference. His subject was "Mission Study," and his remarks were very interesting and helpful to all.

During the evening there were several selections by a male quartette, and a feature were vocal solos by Mr. Delmhorst, of this city, who is a soloist in one of the New York city churches. An informal social followed the service. Tonight there will be the Sunday-school rally, with an address by James R. Joy, of the First M. E. church.

Church Boxing Bout Fatal.

New York, Feb. 6.—From injuries received in a friendly boxing bout at the monthly entertainment of the St. Bartholomew's Parish Club, in East Forty-second street, John Mason, twenty years old, of No. 664 East 135th street, died last night at the St. Francis Hospital. Adam Brown, nineteen years old, of No. 401 East Twentieth street, with whom Mason was boxing when he was injured, has given himself up to the police and is held in bail of $1,500.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Martha J. Adams.

Mrs. Martha J. Adams, widow of John Q. Adams, for many years a well known resident of this city, died on Monday at the Baptist Home for the Aged in Newark, aged seventy-eight years. Mrs. Adams had been a resident at the Home for the past two years and during the past year she was in feeble health. Mrs. Adams was the daughter of the late Jacob Lacey and was a native of this city. She resided on East Second street for a number of years. She was one of the oldest members of the First Baptist church and a regular attendant as long as her health would permit. She is survived by a number of nieces and nephews in this city. The funeral services will be held at the home of her niece, Mrs. Charles VanWinkle, 301 West Fourth street, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and the interment will be in this city.

Henry Williams.

Henry Williams, colored, died Monday at the home of Joseph Kates, Leland and North avenues, where he boarded. He was night watchman at the Rogers silver plating plant and had been a resident of this city for thirty years. The funeral will be held at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church appointed for yesterday, was postponed on account of the weather to Tuesday, Feb. 12, at 3 o'clock, in the lecture room of the church.

The Men's Club of the First Baptist church will meet on Monday night and listen to an allustrated lecture by Dr. Harold D. Corbusier, of Watchung avenue, on "China During the Boxer Uprising." Besides there will be a number of selections on a Victor talking machine.

In the course of study on the "Life of Christ," to be taken up by the Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Friday night, an excellent opportunity is offered interested persons to cover in a systematic way the story of the Gospel. All are invited to attend the study.

Robert Hill Cox, son of Mrs. Rowland Cox, of West Seventh street, was one of the ushers at the Morgan Prynn wedding which took place at noon, yesterday, in St. George's church, New York. It was a very brilliant affair.

SEEKS SUPPORT FOR MISSION.

U. B. Crane Addresses C. E. Society of Trinity Reformed Church.

Following the regular business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society, at Trinity Reformed church, last night, U. B. Crane, who is actively engaged and interested in the Endeavor mission work at the Hunter Avenue Tabernacle, spoke to the members concerning this work. He told briefly of the work that has been done by Endeavors in the West End of the city and asked that the society assist in supporting the mission.

After the talk by Mr. Crane, the society elected W. C. Leek as chairman of a committee, to devise ways and means for assisting other Endeavorers in supporting the mission work. W. R. Kriney, as president of the society, was in the chair, and Miss Eliza Dufford, secretary, occupied her position.

"Skip" Dundy Dead.

New York, Feb. 6.—After an illness lasting less than two weeks, and after his physicians had pronounced him on the road to recovery, Elmer S. Dundy, of the firm of Thompson & Dundy, proprietors of Luna Park and builders of the Hippodrome, died yesterday afternoon in the home of his mother in the Amidon apartment house at Broadway and Eighty-third street. At his bedside were his mother, his sister, Mrs. Edward Willard Lee, and his brother-in-law, Dr. Lee. The latter, who had cared for him, pronounced the cause of death as slight pneumonia followed by an attack of acute dilation of the heart.

5,000 'Phone Calls an Hour.

Under ordinary conditions the telephone girls at the central office of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, handle about 1,200 calls an hour between 8 and 10 o'clock in the morning. Yesterday during each of these hours 5,000 calls were handled by the force. This large increase was due to storm conditions, subscribers depending largely on their 'phone, where ordinarily they would be able to get out and transact business.

Congratulations for Mr. Martine.

Since his splendid showing in the Senatorial fight at Trenton, James E. Martine has received nearly fifty congratulatory telegrams from men of prominence both in the State and out of it. The struggle was watched with great interest by William Jennings Bryan and the fact that his warm personal friend, the "farmer orator," received the unanimous Democratic choice was a source of great satisfaction to him.

Snow Shoveller Uncovers Body.

New York, Feb. 6.—When Michael Donegan, a park laborer, was shovelling snow from the sidewalk adjoining Central Park in Fifth avenue between Seventy-fifth and Seventy-sixth streets yesterday morning, he uncovered the body of a young man. There was a bullet wound in the right temple and one hand still clasped a pistol. From papers found in his pockets it was learned that the dead man was Walter Phillips, an inspector, employed by the New York Telephone Company.

German Socialists' Loses.

Berlin, Feb. 6.—Returns of the elections from ten wards in Berlin are still missing. The socialists gained Duisburg, Wiesbaden, Strassburg and Hanau, but lost more than thirty-eight seats. They lost Frankfort on the Main, long considered a stronghold, to the radicals. Other losses were Stettin, Dresden and two more Saxon districts, Weimar and Darmstadt.

Boy's Snowball Hits the Kaiser.

Berlin, Feb. 6.—Emperor William was accidentally hit in the face by a snowball while driving through the Brandenburg Gate on Sunday. The missile was aimed at a person who was passing in an automobile. The Emperor, the Deutsche Tages Zeitung says, shook his finger at a group of boys from which the snowball came, and they thereupon scampered away.

Want School Exhibit at Jamestown.

The city schools have been especially requested to prepare work for exhibition at the Jamestown Exposition. The special request comes as a result of the work they produced for the St. Louis Exposition, which was particularly satisfactory to the State authorities.

City Court Cases.

Bartholomew Taylor and Charles Bayne, arrested last night for drunkenness, were arraigned before Judge Runyon, in the city court, this morning. They were released under suspended sentence.

Jerseymen Involved In Deals.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Certain railroads seeking to secure valuable coal lands in the Big Horn Basin, in Wyoming, hired cab drivers, barkeepers and barbers living in New York, Amityville, L. I., and in certain towns in New Jersey, to enter these lands and then to turn them over to the railroad interests, according to officials of the Interior Department. Secretary Hitchcock is reported to have secured confessions from a number of New Yorkers and Jerseyites. The entire matter has been laid before the Attorney General for prosecution.

Jackson Sued for Divorce.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 6.—The announcement made by Edward F. Coatesworth that he had begun proceedings for divorce against William S. Jackson, Attorney General, caused a profound sensation in the legal profession and in political circles, both Democratic and Republican, here yesterday. Mr. Coatesworth was retained by Mrs. Jackson and he has already begun the preparation of papers preliminary to asking the court to separate under process of law the Attorney General and his wife.

Mrs. Amos Blazier, of West Fourth street, has been ill for the past two weeks with a complication of troubles.

LAWMAKERS SETTLE DOWN

With Senatorship Fight Out of the Way, They Return to Business.

PLENTY TO TRANSACT

District Plan of Elections Among the First Matters to Receive Attention.

With the fight for the United States Senatorship out of the way, New Jersey legislators are ready to settle down to the serious business of making laws. Up to the present time little progress has been made on the important measures that have been introduced, as the sessions have been given up to the contest over Senator Dryden's seat.

It is expected the law mill will begin to grind in earnest next week, and among the bills and resolutions that are slated to receive early attention is the Hillery concurrent resolution providing for an amendment to article four of the State Constitution by which it is proposed to establish Assembly disericts and to elect the members of the lower branch of the Legislature by that method, instead of by the present cumbersome and unsatisfactory system of electing them by counties.

It is believed that the measure will go through both branches of the Legislature unimpeded, since both Republicans and Democrats are committed to the policy of establishing districts through the declarations of their party platforms.

All the members of the Essex county delegation, including Senator Colby, and eleven Democratic Assemblymen are understood to be favorable to the project. Mr. Colby voted last year for the bill creating districts on a plan exactly the same as that contemplated in the proposed amendment. The Essex Senator and his followers of the "New Idea" wing of the Republican party not only helped to work the law through, but they had the satisfaction of having the Assembly districts for Essex apportioned according to the division they submitted, in preference to the districting plan offered by the "regular" wing of the party.

The Colbyite lines would now be in effect had it not been for the decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals, which overthrew the act as being in conflict with the decree of the Constitution that "the General Assembly shall be composed of members annually elected by the legal voters of the counties, respectively, who shall be apportioned among the said counties as nearly as may be according to the number of their inhabitants.

The Essex Senator has announced himself as favorable to the district plan of changing this section of the organic law of the State. All the Essex Assemblymen have similarly expressed themselves, although some of them have stated that they would prefer to see a constitutional convention called for the purpose of securing a general revision of the Constitution.

"JOE, THE TURK," SPEAKS.

Addressed Large Audience at Salvation Army Hall Last Night.

A full house greeted "Joe, the Turk," at the Salvation Army Hall, last night, when this unique character gave an interesting recital of his twenty-four years of work for Christ under the banner of the army. Joe, whose name is J. Garabed, is from Constantinople. Last night he wore the gorgeously bright costume of the turk and added realism to his description of the Turkish massacres of Armenians.

In Constantinople Joe was a shoe merchant, following the trade until he was old enough to sew until he became of age. He then began to travel and it was while in San Francisco that he met the Salvation Army and became converted and he has had a wonderful experience ever since. He says that there is no use trying to extend the army into Russia as the natives are almost as bad as the Turks. Joe will speak at the local barracks again tonight, when he will tell of the wonderful conversion of his sister through his letters to her. Tomorrow night he will give a zonophone concert and display his original electrical umbrella.

Will Visit His Old Home.

James Kermode, an employee in the composing room of The Daily Press, will sail on the Cunard Liner Carmania on Saturday, February 16, for his former home in the Isle of Man. This will be his first visit to his native home and that of his parents since he came to this country twelve years ago. He will probably remain abroad until next fall.

—The automobile school will hold its first session at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium tonight.

GOOD SPEAKERS FOR THE BOARD OF TRADE DINNER

DR. CROWTHER, T. H. M'CARTER AND W. G. BESLER ON THE LIST.

Assemblyman Frank Crowther, of Perth Amboy, will be one of the speakers at the Board of Trade banquet to be held at the Casino on Tuesday night, and a reply has been received from Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation, that he will attend and speak on the toast, "Public Utilities."

Other speakers will include W. G. Besler, vice-president and general manager of the New Jersey Central. If he is able to be out, Mayor Charles J. Fisk will be the toastmaster.

The committee in charge has engaged the Eureka Quartette, colored, singers and dancers, to provide music for the evening. This quartette appeared at the college smoker and made a great hit.

Among the other speakers will be Rev. George A. Warner, of the Church of the Holy Cross, and Rev. B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church. They spoke at last year's banquet and so pleased the guests that the committee lost no time in securing them for this year's affair.

The general committee in charge of the arrangements is composed of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, chairman; Alexander Gilbert, William L. Saunders, B. Frank Coriell and H. W. Marshall. L. B. Woolston, president of the Board of Trade, is a member of the committee ex-officio.

Tickets are now to be had from any member of the committee and it is hoped that applications for them will be made as soon as possible so that it will be known how many to provide for. The Casino will be decorated appropriately for the festivities by Laggren, of Elizabeth.

POOR OVERSEER'S REPORT FELL BY THE WAYSIDE.

And Mayor Fisk Forget to Mention This Department in His Annual Message.

Through an oversight the annual report of Overseer of the Poor Alexander D. Ayers was not included in the other reports mentioned to the Common Council in January, and Mayor Fisk forgot to mention this department of the city in his message. On the first of the year the city, through the poor department, was caring for ten widowed families and there were eighteen inmates of the Industrial Home, ten men and eight women.

By way of comparison this work is equal, considering population, to the work accomplished by the poor department of Elizabeth, which has a population of nearly 60,000. In the annual message of Mayor Ryan, of Elizabeth, there are 110 families being cared for and there are sixty inmates of the poor house at the county seat.

During the coming year several improvements are being planned for the Industrial House, which will further increase the efficiency of the place in caring for the city's poor. Conditions here are different from those in many other cities, because of the co-operation on the part of the Charity Organized Aid and Plainfield Relief Association, which were recently merged. Through this agency much of the suffering on the part of the poor is relieved, thereby making it unnecessary for them to go to the Industrial Home.

Has Leased the Entire Building.

The present accomodations not being large enough to carry on the business, F. L. C. Martin has leased from the Boice Estate the second and third floors of the building now occupied by him. He will install a large electric elevator in the building to carry automobiles between the ground floor and the upper floors. Mr. Martin will use the second and third floor as a repair shop, giving him the space now used for that purpose as a show room and the storage of machines, when not in use.

Sure He'll Make a Hit.

It is agreed by all who have attended the rehearsals that Judge William N. Runyon, who takes the leading part in "The Chimes of Normandy," to be given at the Casino, tonight, will make a decided hit. As "Gaspard," the miser, he has the heaviest part he has ever essayed in amateur productions, and he and Miss Hortense M. Sheldon, as "Serperlotte," will undoubtedly share the honors of the evening.

Loses Valuable Collie Dog.

The thoroughbred registered Scotch collie dog, "Vixen," owned by W. E. Smith, of West Second street; died Tuesday night from distemper. Drs. Knott and Herbert were called to treat the dog, but their efforts were of no avail. The dog came from the Beckstein kennels and was three years old. He was well trained and displayed unusual intelligence.

—Come and hear the Chimes at the Casino tonight. ***

ELKS VAUDEVILLE SHOW WILL NET PROFIT OF $500

LARGE AUDIENCES PRESENT AT BOTH MATINEE AND NIGHT PERFORMANCES.

Two large audiences witnessed the Elks vaudeville benefit at the New Plainfield theatre, yesterday afternoon and evening, and as a result the lodge will net close to $500. The show was held in place of the amateur minstrel performance as given last year and proved satisfactory in every way. The money will be added to the fund now being raised for the furnishing of the lodge rooms, the present fixtures belonging to the F. O. E. aerie, which has planned to move.

The various artists on the vaudeville bill scored individual hits and the entire programme was without any exception as good as those found at the best New York houses devoted to this class of entertainment. James Harrigan, the tramp juggler, who has a wide acquaintance in Plainfield, received something lige an ovation when he came on for his turn and he reciprocated with a lot of "good stuff."

The show was arranged and conducted by a committee from the lodge composed of Manager W. J. Counihan, chairman; Maze Edwards and Clarence Teel.

TEA FOR MISS ENGLISH.

The Misses McCutcheon Give Charming Affair In Her Honor.

The Misses McCutcheon, of Plainfield avenue, gave a charming tea at their home, yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Edith English, of West Seventh street. There were about seventy-five guests present and all enjoyed the social function exceedingly. Simple, yet effective decorations were arranged. In the dining room the color was red and in the reception room pink.

The Misses McCutcheon and Miss English were assisted in receiving by Miss Rae Hooley, Miss Anna Garrigues, the Misses Clark, Miss Sarah Moe Howell and Mrs. Allen B. Laing. Mrs. Laing and Miss Howell also assisted by pouring tea in the dining room.

Treat For Music Lovers At Casino.

All lovers of light comic opera should not fail to attend the production of "The Chimes of Normandy," to be given at the Casino, tonight, by the Plainfield Operatic Association. Weeks have been spent in rehearsals and the chorus of sixty voices has been well trained for the performance, which promises to excell anything of the kind ever given here by amateurs. There will be an orchestra of thirteen and the opera will be given in its entirety in a manner than cannot fail to please all who attend. Those who have attended the rehearsals declare that the chorus equals those to be found in many of the best professional companies.

Improvements at the P. C. C.

Included in the work of improvement planned at the Plainfield Country Club during the coming season is the filling in of the ditch on the third hole, and of the unplayable ground to the left of the fouth green. The latter will require much filling in, and will take time to complete. In addition, the green on the fourteenth hole is to be moved to the corner. It is hoped that more attention can be given another year to the tees. They have been in very bod condition and really require the constant attention of one man. An addition will be made to the force of men for this purpose, if possible.

Somerville S. P. C. A.

The annual meeting of the Somerset County S. P. C. A. in Somerville on Tuesday evening, was largely attended by members and the annual reports indicated that much had been done for animals. The following officers were elected: President, Joseph Fitzga; vice president, Mrs. Evelyn W. Murray; secretary, Miss Emily Messler; treasurer, Henry Reimers; counsel, Miss Mary M. Steele; executive committee, Mrs. A. L. C. Hardwicke, Miss Mae Loomis, Mrs. Tompkins, John B. Osbourn, Miss Kittie Veghte. Mrs. Murray, of New York, sent her annual check for $100.

Back to the Reformatory.

The only prisoner arraigned in the Union County Court of Special Sessions yesterday, was George Herman, of this city, a young man who was arrested on a charge of larceny. He plead guilty. Herman was a paroled prisoner from the State Reformatory at Rahway. By his own request Judge Atwater sent him back to that institution.

Colored Drunk.

Alfred Jordan, colored, arrested for drunkeness last night by Patrolman Saunders, also colored, was released under suspended sentence by City Judge Runyon this morning.

Annual Reception and Ball

PLAN HOLY NAME RALLY

The Members of St. Joseph's Church Society Now Working Up the Idea.

DIOCESE INTERESTED

Suggested That It Be Held on the Grounds of the New Mt. St. Mary's Convent.

If plans that are now being considered are formulated and carried out, North Plainfield will be the scene of a big rally of Holy Name societies. The members of the society in St. Joseph's church are working up the idea.

Once or twice each year there is a great rally of Holy Name societies in the State. They are designed to solidify the members and to hold their enthusiasm for the aims of the organization at crusading heat. They help swell the membership, and keep the spirit of advancement alive. They are heartily approved by the church authorities, and the diocesan heads lend their assistance to making them impressive.

The rally would be held some time during the mild weather. It has been suggested—and there is a decided probability that the suggestion will be carried out—that the rally be held on the grounds of St. Mary's Convent, on the mountain, which is now building. Bishop McFaul, of the Trenton Diocese, would be secured as the chief speaker. Societies from all this section of the State would take part with big delegations.

It was reported yesterday that the plans were for a Holy Name demonstration in connection with the consecration of the convent. Rev. Father Miller, of St. Joseph's church, said this morning that there was nothing in that report.

"It is true that there has been some talk of a Holy Name rally," he said, "but even that is not in any definite shape. It may not take place this year. It might be held on the convent grounds, when it is held.

"As to the consecration of the convent," continued Father Miller, "nobody can say when that will take place with any certainty as to the date. The building will not be completed for some time yet. I do not believe the date for the laying of the cornerstone has been fixed yet. It will probably be set in the spring."

ROBERT A. MEEKER SPEAKS ON STATE ROAD BUILDING.

Addressed Joint Session of the Delaware Legislature at Dover Yesterday.

State Supervisor of Roads Robert A. Meeker, of this city, appeared at a joint session of the Delaware Legislature, at Dover, yesterday, in the interest of a movement to adopt State aid in the matter of road building. There were several members who did not favor the plan proposed of having the State appropriate funds for building roads, as in New Jersey, and Mr. Meeker was invited to go to Dover and explain the methods in force in this State.

His statements were so convincing that he was able to bring the wavering members over with the majority, and while no vote was taken on the proposed measure a canvass showed that there are now enough votes to put it through. Prior to yesterday four votes were necessary to adopt the measure, while there were six members wavering. The legislators were much pleased with Mr. Meeker's talk and expressed surprise over what they learned concerning the great progress made in road building in New Jersey.

While at Dover Mr. Meeker met Joseph J. Wilkins, whose niece is the wife of Jabez Gilbert, of West Eighth street, and who is a member of the Delaware Legislature.

Funeral of George D. Howell.

The funeral services of George D. Howell, who died in New York early in the week, were held from the Seventh-Day Baptist church, yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Hutton, of New Brunswick, an intimate friend of the family, conducted the services. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Leaves Navy For Fire Department.

John A. Townley, who has been appointed a regular fireman in the local department, taking the place of Harry C. Bush, resigned, is now on duty. He was formerly in Uncle Sam's Navy, serving three years. He has decided to give up the sea for the present and fight fires.

Injured by Fall.

Mrs. J. D. Ferguson, of Sherman avenue, who recently met with an accident in Canada, is now undergoing treatment at the home of her sister in Montreal. She fell on a slippery walk three weeks ago and will probably be detained two weeks longer.

"BOB" DAVIS ENGINEERED MARTINE'S NOMINATION

THE ESSEX REPRESENTATIVES FELL IN LINE AT HIS SUGGESTION.

The determination to make James E. Martine the caucus nominee of the Democrats for Senator was largely brought about by the efforts of Robert Davis, the Democratic boss of Hudson county, who went to Trenton on Monday and after consultation with the Essex county representatives of ex-Senator James Smith, Jr., the programme was arranged which was carried out Tuesday. The movement for Martine started on Friday of last week, when a prominent Democrat of Elizabeth wrote a letter to "Bob" Davis, calling attention to the fact that Martine was the man in the fight for the empty honor who was closest to the people. Martine was in Trenton on Monday evening and after shaking hands with everybody, took dinner with his Union county friends and went home on the 9:50 train.

Assemblyman Frank A. Pawelski, of Passaic, who has been voting for Martine all along, has never met him and told the newspapermen that he didn't think there was anything in the talk of Martine for Governor, but the general talk among the regular attendants in the lobby was that Martine because of his friendship with Smith and his apparent indifference to corporate interests would be the popular candidate of his party. Assemblyman Joseph H. Firth was outspoken in his opinion of Col. Edwin Stevens as a candidate for anything and will work for Martine's nomination.

BUSINESS COLLEGE WILL MOVE IN THE SPRING.

Plans to Occupy the Entire Third Floor of the Woodhull & Martin Building.

The Plainfield Business College, of which Prof. A. S. Herr is the principal and owner, is gradually making arrangements to move to the Woodhull & Martin building on East Front street, at the end of the spring term. The entire top floor of the building, 105x80, will be occupied for school purposes. It is proposed to divide the space into three departments, a commercial room seating 175 pupils, a short-hand room seating 125 and a typewriting room that will accommodate seventy-five machines.

The rooms will be divided by portable partitions of glass, and which can be removed at any time for large gatherings. There will be a seating capacity of 500.

The college will keep the present quarters, another lease for a year having been made with the City National Bany, yesterday. Prof. Herr took the college in 1905 and since then there has been a phenomenal growth. The college was established in 1895.

The following young people have entered the college from December 1 to January 31: Girard B. Harris, Harry Porter, Alva LaTourette, Bertie Lubeck, Lynn B. Case, Robert Baillie, John Jonuzzi, A. R. Loizeaux, William Seaders, Orrie P. Baker, Harry Giles, Clifford Giddes, Alfred Pool, Edward Hoffman, Harry Geist, Leroy Miller, Samuel Cox, Raymond Dufford, Cecil McConnell, J. L. Moore, the latter of Montgomery, W. Va.; the Misses Carro B. Bird, Clara K. Allen, Cecelia McHale, Nellie G. Lake, Florence B. Conroy, Florence E. Koehler, Sadie C. Fallon, Irma Hoffman, Lida B. Apgar and Irene Ledlie.

Mr. Hand Arranges Hunting Party.

Captain William H. Hand, of East Second street, has received from his nephew, Charles Hand, Mayor of Sanford, Florida, an account of an enjoyable hunting expedition led by him in Florida recently. He has been entertaining Frank A. Burrella, of New York, and he decided to organize an old-fashioned hunting party. The participants took a trip of seventy miles below Sanford into the wilds of the State. Those in the party were Charles Hand, Richard Calhoun, Tom Williams, Harry Wilson and Mr. Rossiter, of Sanford; George Davies and William Sellig, of Jacksonville, and Messrs. Bulkley and Burella, of New York. Deer, turkey, ducks, quail, squirrels, rabbits and even wild hog were on the bill of fare. Mayor Hand is the son of the late Henry Hand, who for many years resided in Plainfield.

Miss Christofferson Marries.

Miss May Christofferson, daughter of Waldermer Christofferson, of 1040 Sherman avenue, and Charles A. Harsell, of Whitehouse, were married Sunday night, at the home of the bride by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel. There were no attendants, it being a quiet affair and only the members of the family being present. The bride is an attendant at Warren chapel and has many friends in this city. The groom is also well known here. The couple will probably reside at Whitehouse.

GRIP-CRAZED LIVERYMAN HANGS HIMSELF IN ROOM

Strangled to Death in a Noose Fastened to Rings on Door.

STRUGGLE HEARD

Sound of His Heels on the Door Ascribed to Steam in Radiator, and Louis Franken Died as He Planned.

His mind unhinged by the grip, Louis Franken, 38 years old, one of the proprietors of the Plainfield Cab Company, committed suicide by hanging in his room at the boarding house of Mrs. Elizabeth McAndrews, 130 North avenue, just before daybreak this morning.

The body was discovered at 7:30 o'clock, hanging by a short piece of manila rope from the hinge of his door, by Dr. F. C. Herbert, a veterinary, and Mrs. McAndrews.

The man's death struggles were heard by Mrs. McAndrews at 5:30 o'clock. She first took them to be the sound of some one shaking out a skirt, and then decided, after tracing the noise to Franken's room, that the sound came from a pounding radiator. Mrs. McAndrews conducts the whole house at No. 130, and rises at 4:30 to prepare breakfast and lunch packets for a houseful of boarders. About an hour after rising this morning she heard a peculiar noise from the floor above, and afraid that the sound would disturb the boarders who were still sleeping, she went upstairs to have it stopped. The noise came from Franken's room, and she went to the door in alarm. Franken had been confined to the house since Tuesday, and she began to fear that something was wrong with him.

The noise seemed to her, then, to come from the door. She called William VanLiew, man-of-all-work about the house. The noise was still going on when VanLiew came up. He listened a moment, and told Mrs. McAndrews there was nothing to worry about. "That's the steam in the radiator," he said. Mrs. McAndrews accepted the explanation and returned to her work. After a bit the noise stopped.

But Mrs. McAndrews was only partially reassured. Her fear that something was wrong returned almost as soon as she went on with her work, and it increased with each minute. She went to the telephone shortly before 6 o'clock, and called up the Cab Company's office. She told the man in charge to send Dr. Herbert, who has an office at the Cab Company, and was friendly with Franken, to her house as soon as he reached the office. Dr. Herbert came to the house at 7:30 o'clock.

Mrs. McAndrews told the veterinary of her fears, and begged him to get into Franken's room. She told him she had looked through the keyhole and had seen that Franken was not in his bed. Dr. Herbert, with Mrs. McAndrews, went to a store room adjoining Franken's room, and unlocked the double doors between the two. Franken's body, hanging from the hinge of his door, confronted them. Dr. Herbert cut him down swiftly, but the man was beyond hope of resuscitation.

The manner in which he had gone about the work of self-destruction was evident. The rope about his neck had been doubled carefully to a length that would leave his feet clear of the floor. His toes hung just about two inches from the floorboards. He must have stepped on a chair, after adjusting the noose about his neck, held the loop at the end of the rope over the hinge, and kicked the chair away. It was the drumming of his heels on the door, as he strangled slowly to death, that Mrs. McAndrews heard.

The body was partly dressed; slippers were on the feet. The appearance of the bed indicated that Franken had lain in it little, if at all, through the night.

The police were notified at once, and Coroner C. B. Lufburrow was on the scene with Chief Kiely within an hour. County Physician Westcott arrived at 9:30 o'clock, and satisfied himself that investigation was unnecessary. He gave Undertaker T. A. Moore a permit to remove the body.

Franken's illness is the only apparent cause for his act. He complained of pains in his head last night to Dr. Herbert, who was with him up to 10 o'clock, and had told Mrs. McAndrews earlier in the evening that his head seemed to be full of wheels. Mrs. McAndrews asked him if he couldn't forget his illness by reading, and he said he couldn't remember what he read. So far as the police could discover, Franken

SUNDAY-SCHOOL RALLY IN MONROE ANNIVERSARY.

Superintendent Walter McGee in Charge and Attendance Largest of the Week.

The tenth anniversary services were continued at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, last night, with a rousing Sunday-school rally. Walter M. McGee, superintendent of the school, presided and had full charge of the programme. The attendance was the best of the week, the church being filled with worshippers.

In place of James R. Joy, of the First M. E. church Sunday-school, who was to have made an address, Rev. Dr. O. S. Bakepel, one of the field secretaries of the Sunday-school Union, was present and took his place. He gave a fine address, speaking especially of the educational and evangelistic work of the Sunday-school. He featured these points and made them very impressive.

Dr. Bakepel related many instances in connection with his work, showing the great progress being made throughout the country in Sunday-schools, both in the increase of membership and spiritual benefit to young and old.

During the evening banjo solos by William Briggs were enjoyed. Tonight the Men's Association will entertain, it being "Ladies' night" in the programme for anniversary week.

"PHIL" VAN ARSDALE DEAD.

Oldest Central Conductor Passes Away at His Home.

Philip J. VanArsdale, 79 years old, the oldest conductor on the New Jersey Central Railroad, is dead at his home in Somerville. Yesterday he was stricken by pneumonia and that with a complication caused his death. Mr. VanArsdale had retired some years since, but for over forty years he was a railroader. He was with the Pennsylvania Central, the New Jersey Transportation Company and finally with the New Jersey Central. He saw the latter road built to Somerville, then to Whitehouse and then to Easton. He was an interesting talker and was always full of reminiscenses and railroad stories. A widow and two children survive him, Charles L. VanArsdale, of Somerville and Mrs. Samuel Drummond, of Bound Brook. The funeral will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the First Reformed church in Somerville. Rev. William S. Cranmer, D. D., the pastor, will officiate, and burial will be in the new cemetery in Somerville.

Men's Association to Entertain.

The Men's Association of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will have charge of the tenth anniversary services tonight, and there will be an address by Prof. Isaac, of the Plainfield Business College, on an appropriate topic. It will be "ladies' night," and all of the women of the church and congregation will be the guests of the association. In addition there will be a fine programme of music and refreshments will be served. Tomorrow night, the last service of the week, will be "Epworth League Night." There will be linked readings from James Whitcomb Riley by Charles Sumner Kemble, and special music.

Won Gold Medal Prize in Paris.

John Wynkoop, of the firm of Squires & Wynkoop, architects, of 44 Cortlandt street, New York, recently won a gold medal in Paris in competition for the plans of a hotel. He has been abroad for over a year and as a result of winning the open competition for the Paris prize, he is admitted to the highest class in the school of fine arts in Paris which pays his expenses for travelling and study in Italy. Afterward he will return to take up his work with the firm of which he is a member. Mr. Squires, his partner, resides on Watchung avenue, and is a son of the late Henry C. Squires.

Don't Forget the Turkey Supper.

Everything is in readness for the annual turkey supper to be given at Trinity Reformed cuhrch tonight and tomorrow night by the Ladies' Christian Work Society. Persons intending to patronize the supper can go right from their business to the church, where a fine supper will await them. Kenneth Stuart's orchestra will present a popular programme both nights.

R. F. D. Carriers Stalled.

It was not until yesterday that the rural free delivery carriers attached to the local postoffice were able to cover their routes. Prior to that time the snow was piled so high and was drifted to such an extent that it was impossible to drive through in the country districts. Especially was this true on the Mt. Bethel and Warrenville route. Yesterday the roads were broken.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

WHITEHOUSE.

The snow storm that started on Monday developed into a blizzard in this section, and traffic on the New Jersey Central and Rockaway Valley railroads was greatly delayed. A heavy wind blew the light snow in great clouds and many of the highways, particularly those running north and south, were drifted shut. The railroads were caught unprepared, few of the engines being provided with snowplows.

The Christian Endeavor Society connected with the Reformed church at Peapack will observe Christian Endeavor day in the edifice at that place next Sunday evening with special services. The State president is expected to make an address.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Rev. William Mulford, rector of All Saints' Episcopal church, delivered his lecture upon Washington Irving, last night, in the parlors of the Baptist church. Considering the weather the attendance was good. Mr. Mulford, who is an able speaker, spoke of the life, habits and characteristics of the man, presenting his subject in such an interesting way that he commanded the attention of his audience throughout. Proceeds of the lecture will be donated towards the Public Library fund.

The effects of the winter's heaviest snow storm on Monday is beginning to wear off. The township snow plow has been kept busy opening up the sidewalks and the residents are able to get around again; the trolley schedule is fair and the company deserves credit for the fight it made to keep the line open.

The Suburban Club holds its regular monthly dance tonight in the club's hall on South avenue. The committee in charge has planned to make the club's February dance one of the most enjoyable the club has yet held.

Fanwood Bucket and Engine Company held its regular monthly meeting last night in the company rooms. Only the regular monthly routine business was transacted.

Sleighing certainly should be fine for a week or two. The owners of fast steppers and neat cutters should be able to get their share of the sport for a time.

Edward Gahagan expects to leave next week for an extended visit with friends in the South.

Thomas Sellers has taken a position with Voehl & Waldron, of Plainfield.

Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., meets tonight in the library rooms.

A Fine Picture Free.

A collection of Charles Dana Gibson's best drawings has been secured by the New York World for its readers. These drawings have been reproduced upon fine art paper, each suitable for framing, and are now being given away with the New York Sunday World. These drawings would sell in stores for no less than 50 cents each, and often for $1.00. You may get them free with The Sunday World.

—There will be no further meetings of the Republican City Executive Committee before the latter part of March, when the committee will take action on the new constitution now in course of preparation. At present there is nothing demanding the attention of the committee.

—The new offices of Mayor Fisk and Overseer of the Poor Alex Ayers are now completely furnished and make an attractive place of meeting for the Mayor and those who wish to see him. The offices are also being used by the water and consolidation commissions as a place of meeting.

Franklin Council, No. 42, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet tonight and have initiation. There will also be a report from the committee on the Junior banquet held last week.

WANTS A WOMAN "COPPER."

Mrs. Williamson's Appointment Seriously Considered in New Brunswick.

New Brunswick, Feb. 7.—H. Raymond Groves, at Monday night's meeting of the Common Council, introduced a resolution providing for the appointment of Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, of Elizabeth, the new probation officer of Middlesex, a special officer.

This is the first time the appointment of a woman as a special policeman has been considered, and there is much doubt as to the legality of such apointment. The resolution was referred to City Attorney Edward Hicks.

Council fixed Tuesday, March 19, as the day for a special election to decide whether the Public Service Corporation shall receive a forty-year franchise for trolley extension in the city.

EDITORS WILL BANQUET.

State Association to Commemorate Anniversary.

Trenton, Feb. 7.—It is proposed by the New Jersey Editorial Association, which was organized in Trenton on January 25, 1857, to celebrate its fiftieth anniversary with a dinner, to be held in Trenton on February 25. Governor Stokes is among the invited guests.

One of the subjects that will probably be discussed at the affair is the moement for the publication in some form of the new laws of the State as they are made by the egislature. Jacob L. Bunnell, of Orange, secretary of the organization, is a member of the committee, as are H. B. Hollingson, of Rahway; W. B. R. Mason, of Bound Brook, and J. W. Clifht, of Summit.

Baby Alive After Avalanche.

Salida, Col., Feb. 7.—Bodies of seven victims of the snowslide on Monarch Mountain have been recovered, the victims being Fred Mason and wife, Joseph Boyle, John Emerson and John Gillert and George Griffith, miners, and Stephen Skinner, a saloon keeper. A little baby of the Masons was buried under many feet of snow and broken house timber fourteen hours, but was found lying in his bed unharmed. Nearby were the dead bodies of his parents.

Millinery Presentation!

Will These Prices Pay For Delivery?

We might almost as well tell you to come and take this stuff for nothing and not ask us to wrap or deliver it, for what we ask you to pay will barely cover the cost of the service required in disposing of it. It is your chance to get hats and trimmings for a mere fraction of their worth.

HATS—Plain and Fancy Untrimmed Hats of Felt, Velvet and Novelty Braid; priced at these ridiculous figures:

50c to $1.00 Untrimmed Hats to go for 10c
$1.00 to $1.50 Untrimmed Hats to go for 25c
$1.65 to $2.25 Untrimmed Hats to go at 45c

TRIMMED HATS—Many of the most up-to-date shapes and effects, trimmed with flowers, feathers, wings, ornaments, ribbons, malines, etc., priced like this:

$2.50 to $4.00 Trimmed Hats marked down to 95c
$4.75 to $7.00 Trimmed Hats cut to $1.95
$7.75 to $10.00 Trimmed Hats now priced at $3.95

Flowers, Feathers, Wings, Fancy Feathers, Breasts, etc., in very large variety, priced as follows:

25c to 39c Flowers and Feathers to go for 5c
45c to 69c Flowers and Feathers to go for 10c

PERSONAL.

Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies, of Road Ending, is visiting in Bridgeport Conn.

Miss Minnie G. Morse, of Franklin place, is improved from an attack of the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Miner, of Oriskany Falls, N. Y., are visiting relatives in town.

Letter-carrier William Demarest, of the borough, is slowly improving from a severe illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson VanWinkle will soon move from West End avenue to Essex street.

E. E. Iremonger, of Netherwood, left yesterday for Stratford, Conn., to attend the funeral of a relative.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, editor of The Sabbath Recorder, is detained at home with an attack of the grip.

Mrs. William Newcorn, of West Front street, is improved from an illness that has detained her at home for several days.

Henry Wood, of Cincinnati, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Frost, of Watchung avenue. A year ago he accompanied F. W. Frost on a trip around the world.

Fred Armstrong, of Duer street, who has been detained at home by illness, which threatened typhoid fever, is much improved and is able to be about his room.

N. Douglas Drake, of Duer street, who has been living at Saranac Lake since last fall, writes home that he has fully recovered his health and has gained over twenty pounds in weight. He says that the thermometer remains about thirty degrees below zero all the time. Mr. Drake will not return home until spring.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Miss Mary Giles will lead the Christian Endeavor Society meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church tomorrow night.

Rev. George B. Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, is spending a month among the denominational churches in Rhode Island.

Special interest is attached to the fifteenth anniversary services to be held at Grace M. E. church on Sunday, because of the presence of Rev. Herbert F. Randolph, a former pastor, who will preach in the morning. Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll will occupy the pulpit at night.

The McAll Auxiliary met at the Public Library, yesterday, and received encouraging letters from its missionaries who are in charge of the McAll work in Limoges, France. There is increasing interest in this work and the Plainfield Auxiliary is constantly growing in membership.

GOTHAM'S AMUSEMENTS

During the week of February 11th, with a Lincoln's Birthday extra matinee, the Grand Opera House will have for its attraction Lew Dockstader in his annual Carnival of Minstrelsy. The advent of the genial Lew and his merry singing and dancing men is always an event of importance at the Grand, and as this year's Big Fun Show is said to be Dockstader's very best, an immense welcome is awaiting the arrival of the King of Black-face Artists. Neil O'Brien still continues as Dockstader's chief lieutenant, and his new ditty, "Brotherly Love," and his afterpiece "Rapid Transit Up-to-Date" bring out his abilities to their laughing limit. The contingent of sweet voiced tenors, robust baritones and sturdy basses in the Dockstader organization will render the latest popular and classical ballads as only the minstrels can, while Dockstader's dancing cohorts challenge the world for nimbleness, agility and grace. Among the new vocal numbers to be offered will be, "I Know I'm Not Your First Sweetheart, But Let Me Be Your Last," "Won't You Come Over to My House," "Shovelin' Coal," "Good Morning, Ezra," "Anybody But You," and the big spectacular effect, "Moon Love."

TRIMMER FACES CHARGES.

Roselle Council Accuses Former Collector of Negligence in Office.

Roselle, Feb. 7.—The Borough Council, at a special meeting this week, preferred seven charges against Charles B. Trimmer, who has been deposed as borough collector and treasurer. The Council set Saturday night as the time for Trimmer to answer the charges.

He is accused by the body of failing to produce a tax duplicate for 1906, and of being negligent in several other respects, including his failure to furnish a bond within the time specified by law.

The finances of the borough are tied up, the only person to receive their pay last week being the teachers.

Killed By His Injuries.

Phillipsburg, Feb. 7.—Dan Keating, thirty-seven years old, died at the Easton (Pa.) Hospital today from injuries sustained in the Phillipsburg yard of the Lehigh Valley Railroad a few days ago. Keating was an employee of the Bethlehem Steel Works, and was a life-long resident of Washington, this county. The accident happened while Keating was walking on the railroad between Phillipsburg and Easton. He was struck by a train, and both of his legs were crushed under the cars. He was unmarried, and the body will be taken to his home at Washington.

ACKERMAN AND COLBY.

With reference to the stand taken by Senators Ackerman and Colby at the last of the Senatorial fight, the Newark News summed the matter up in the following editorial last night:

"Senators Colby and Ackerman were consistent in refusing to go into caucus and vote for Mr. Briggs, as candidate for United States Senator, and they are deserving of praise for standing by the principles that have actuated them throughout the contest just closed. It is easy to say that they should have joined with the rest of the Republican legislators and made their action unanimous, but by so doing they would have abandoned everything they have been working for; they would have subverted their own convictions; they would have eaten their own words.

"Both these Senators have fought manfully against caucus rule. They could not honorably submit to it in the end. They sought to defeat Mr. Dryden because of his overpowering corporation affiliations, and how then could they support the man whom Mr. Dryden named as his own successor? They have represented, as they honestly believe, the independent, intelligent views of their constituents throughout the whole Senatorial struggle; and how, therefore, could they abandon the position they had thus far successfully maintained at great odds?

"There is a stigma attached, but not deserved, to a 'bolter' or to any one who conscientiously obeys the demands of his constituents as he understands them, but there should be praise instead when such refusal to abide by caucus dictation is the consistent culmination of a course approved by the people. Senators Colby and Ackerman had no other honorable way open to them than to do as they did. They deserve credit for consistency and for having the courage of their convictions to the very last."

Dead Man at Throttle.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 7.—For about one mile, the Pennsylvania Railroad's Congressional limited, due at North Philadelphia at 7 o'clock this evening, was piloted through the night over the switches and past sidings by a dead man. The engine driver, Joseph Toms, had been killed at Diamond street bridge, and his battered head was hanging out of the cab window, although the left hand still held the throttle firmly. This train is one of the finest on the road. There were seven sleeping cars attached to the big locomotive last night, and, in spite of the snow, the express was being whirled through on time. Between the Schuylkill river and the North Philadelphia station is a stretch of almost level track where engineers are in the habit of running at high speed. George Mitchener, the fireman, says that he spoke to Toms just before reaching the Diamond street bridge, and it is certain that the accident must have taken place there, for there are no other bridges farther on which have abutments close enough to the tracks to do any damage. Mitchener, getting no answer, sprang over to the engine driver's side of the cab and saw what had happened. He closed the throttle and brought the train to a stop somewhat more suddenly than usual, perhaps, but the passengers did not know what had occurred.

Detective Found In Pieces.

York, Pa., Feb. 7.—Fragments of the body of John Newborough, detective of the Northern Central Railway, were found along the track near the Rockville Bridge yesterday, and it is believed he was murdered by a Harrisburg gang of thieves whom he was pursuing. Newborough had received threatening letters and it is thought he was waylaid. His supposed assailants are being sought.

NEW ENVOY IS RICH

ENRIQUE CREEL WILL SOON BE WEALTHIEST MEXICAN.

Will Represent His Country at Washington—Practically Owns Chihuahua—Has American Blood in His Veins.

Chihuahua, Mexico. — Enrique C. Creel, acting governor of the State of Chihuahua, and who has been appointed ambassador to the United States, will be one of the richest men in the world when he comes into possession of his share of the fortune of Gen. Luis Terrazas, his father-in-law, and adds it to his own wealth.

Governor Creel is an American in his parentage but a native of Mexico. He was born in this city August 31, 1854. He is one of the ablest financiers in Mexico.

He took a leading part in establishing the new monetary system for the Mexican government. He is interested with Gen. Terrazas in many big enterprises and has practically had the control of his father-in-law's vast holdings for many years. This has brought him into close contact with men of finance of all lands, particularly Mexico and the United States.

Governor Creel's wealth is now estimated to be not less than $25,000,000. The fortune of Gen. Terrazas is upward of $200,000,000. It has been said that he practically owns the state and city of Chihuahua.

His mines, ranches, farms, banks, manufacturing plants, houses and business blocks bring him in a great annual revenue. He was governor of Chihuahua for many years, but on account of his advanced age he relinquished active duties of the office about three years ago, and his son-in-law, Mr. Creel, was appointed acting governor by President Diaz.

Although Mr. Creel was born in Mexico, his Americanism is plainly shown in his personality. His father was Reuben W. Creel, who came to Chihuahua from the United States in the late 40's and opened a little store here.

ENRIQUE CREEL.
(New Ambassador from Mexico to the United States.)

Reuben Creel was a graduate of one of the Eastern colleges of the United States. He and his wife lived here until they died. They reared a family of seven children, of which Enrique was the oldest.

The little business which the elder Creel started did not prosper and the family had a hard struggle to live. Enrique forged ahead and got a place as teacher in a private school in Chihuahua. His earnings all went to support his parents and his brothers and sisters.

His brightness attracted the attention of some Mexican citizens of the place and they put him in the way of starting a small mercantile business. His business ability soon brought him success.

He branched out into other lines of business and added to his fortune until he became one of the wealthy men of the state. He married the daughter of Gen. Terrazas, the richest man in Mexico.

In 1884 he became manager of the Banco Mineral, one of the largest financial institutions in northern Mexico. He is also president of the Banco Central, a leading bank of this state, and is a director in three other banks. He is interested in scores of industrial enterprises and in many rich mines, and owns large estates.

Governor Creel attributes his success in life to hard and persistent work. Although born in Mexico, he does not follow the usual custom of this country of putting off until tomorrow what could be done to-day. He rises every morning at five o'clock, winter and summer, and is at work an hour later. He puts in twelve to fourteen hours a day at hard work in his office of governor and in attending to his private business affairs.

If Governor Creel has any particular hobby it is that of uplifting the poor and ignorant people of this state. He believes that the progress and development of a nation lies in the education of its people. He is applying this principle to the children throughout the state of Chihuahua. It is his ambition to give the state of Chihuahua the best public school system of any state in Mexico, and to put it on a par with any state in the United States.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Workmen have just begun excavating for a new three-story freight station for the Lehigh Valley at South Bethlehem, Pa. This structure is part of the improvement for which the company contemplates expending $500,000. When all the improvements have been completed—among them a new freight yard—South Bethlehem will have the best facilities for handling freight of any town along the road.

Some of the residents of the village have been annoyed at night by some boys who find pleasure in throwing wet snow balls at the windows and in meddling with personal property. This has been going on for quite some time and if it is continued they will have to suffer the consequences imposed upon them by the residents.

The regular meeting of the P. O. S. of A. will be held in Washington Hall tonight. Routine business will be transacted.

School Superintendent Metz has engaged Miss Smalley, of New Market, as regular teacher in place of Miss Steele.

The recent snow has caused some of the students of the Plainfield High School to remain at home for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Schenck are rejoicing over the birth of a boy.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Springer are visiting friends in Perth Amboy.

Four Queens Cause Divorce.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 7.—Alleging that her husband, Oscar Miller, did not know the commercial value of a pair of deuces in a poker game, Flora E. Miller, of Kokomo, Ind., has filed suit for divorce. She says that her husband abandoned her so long ago that she can't remember when he left. She asserts that during their married life he made a business of swelling the bank accounts of barkeepers. Regarding Miller's gambling proclivities the complainant says: "The defendant was an inveterate bunt unsuccessful gambler. He was not possessed of sufficient judgment to estimate the commercial value of a pair of deuces, and he has been known to hazard heavily and persistently on an 'ace full' when he has been notified that his advisary was in open, notorious and undisputed possession of two pairs of queens."

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, will initiate candidates and make arrangements to visit Court Dunellen, No. 1123, I. O. O. F., at their meeting tomorrow night. In the good and welfare the court glee club will entertain the members.

LIVERYMAN HANGS HIMSELF

had no business worriment. Dr. Herbert said this morning that Franken had been a man of very nervous temperament.

"He often complained of loneliness when I returned to the office after an absence of more than a few minutes," said the veterinary.

Franken was unmarried. He bought the Cab Company's business, with Rudolph G. Toense, of North Plainfield, last summer. He came to this city from New York, where he had been associated in business with Mr. Toense.

The suicide's father and mother and two brothers live in Cologne, Germany, where he was born. His only relatives in this country are cousins in New York. They are members of the big leaf tobacco firm of Lichtenstein Brothers, 117 Maiden Lane.

Mr. Toense took charge of his partner's body this forenoon, after his arrival in response to a telegram sent to his place of business in New York. He notified the Lichtensteins of the suicide immediately. They are expected to assume charge of the remains.

RESENTED WOMAN'S LAUGH.

Donnegan Gets Ninety Days for Attacking Witness.

Hoboken, Feb. 7.—In the storm Monday night Mrs. Minnie Hoburg, of 550 First street, and her two children, were on their way home from the residence of a friend. At Park avenue and First street Mrs. Hoburg saw Ambrose Donnegan fall in the snow.

She passed him as he was regaining his feet. She had not taken many steps, however, when Donnegan seized her and hurled her to the ground. She fell on a pile of snow, and escaped serious injury. Mrs. Hoburg attempted to rise, but Donnegan again threw her to the ground. The woman screamed for help, and the children joined in her cries. Policeman William Leahy heard her screams and came to her and arrested Donnegan.

When arraigned before Recorder Stanton Tuesday, Donnegan's only excuse for assaulting Mrs. Hoburw was that she laughed at him when he fell down. He was sent to the penitentiary for ninety days.

Thirst to See Thaw.

New York, Feb. 7.—Two boys who admitted they had run away from their homes and come to New York to see if they could get a glimpse of Harry Thaw were arraigned in the Tombs Police Court yesterday. Sherman Walrath, of Johnstown, N. Y., was arrested at No. 302 East Sixty-sixth street, in obedience to a telegram from the chief of police of Johnstown, who sought him at the request of his parents. Jacob Levenson, of Chicago, was arrested in the Bowery, where he was trying to get through the fire lines at a small fire. Both boys said in court that they had been reading about Harry Thaw in the newspapers, and had come to New York to see him. They will be sent to their homes.

Jackson Divorce Stopped.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 7.—Attorney General William S. Jackson has apparently effected a reconciliation with his wife as a result of successful negotiations concluded today. The Attorney General stayed at his house on Front street last night. At midnight, at his home, he refused to be interviewed as to his arrangements for the future, but it is admitted by E. E. Coatsworth, attorney for Mrs. Jackson, that his remaining at the house last night condones any alleged offences discovered at Rochester, and debars Mrs. Jackson from instituting proceedings for divorce hereafter on the action that was pending.

—Plainfield Typographical Union, No. 399, met last night and transacted routine business. The election and installation of officers were postponed until next week.

—Special Officer Jerry Cash, who has been house-bound for four months with rheumatism, was able to go outdoors for a walk this morning. He is slowly regaining his health.

FERRYBOAT AFIRE.

Quickly Doused Blaze in the Pilot-house Scares Women Aboard.

The New Jersey Central's ferryboat Wilkesbarre had just left her slip at the foot of West Twenty-third street for Jersey City at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when flames burst from the rear pilot house. The boat was about fifty yards from the ferry slip, and had just turned her bow south for the two-mile trip when Captain Smith, looking back from the forward pilot house, saw smoke and flames pouring out of the windows of the house behind.

There were 200 women shoppers aboard and some men. Captain Smith signaled to the engineer to reverse the engines and to back the boat into the slip, and then gave the signal "All hands to quarters."

He also ordered one of the ferry hands to take charge of a bucket brigade to fight the flames. Patrolman Kirke of the West Twentieth street station saw the fire from West street, and while the boat was putting back to the slip he turned in an alarm.

Many of the women passengers heard the commotion, and some of them screamed when the saw the flames. That created a stir among the others. They crowded out of the cabin one to the deck, where several of the ferryhands and the men passengers assured them that there was no danger. But the women huddled together in a frightened bunch. There was no actual panic.

The ferryboat dashed for her slip under extra speed. The crew had by this time got out the boat's fire hose and were pouring water on the blaze. As soon as the boat bumped into her slip and had been tied up the gates were opened and the passengers allowed to get off.

The fire engines arrived in a few minutes, but by that time the crew had extinguished the flames. The fireboat George McClellan also responded. An examination showed that the fire was caused by defective insulation in the pilot house. The damage was about $200. The boat was able to finish the trip, and then she was laid up for repairs.

WOMAN KILLED IN CARRIAGE.

Two Men Injured, One Mortally, in Vehicle Hit by Freight Train.

Long Branch, Feb. 7.—While crossing the Long Branch Railroad tracks at Chelsea avenue a carriage was struck early yesterday morning by a northbound freight train and the occupants were tossed into the air. The train stopped, and the crew went to the aid of the party in the carriage. They found Bertha Gootheil dead, Stewart Sherman with a broken back, and George Morris, the driver, with a broken leg. The train took the injured men to the Monmouth Memorial Hospital, which is near the tracks. Sherman will die.

Miss Gootheil and Mr. Sherman were returning from the charity ball of the Monmouth Memorial Hospital in the Lyceum. The crossing was dark, and Morris did not see the approaching train until it was upon him. In the daytime there is a watchman at the crossing, but at night it is left unguarded.

Miss Gootheil was 27 years old and the daughter of Emil Gootheil, who lives on Broadway in this place. Mr. Sherman is a contractor and is about 28 years old. He is the son of Hiram Sherman, a well-known resident of Long Branch.

OPERATOR HURLED 200 FEET.

Robert Batson, of Jersey City, Killed at Roselle.

While crossing the tracks of the Central Railroad opposite the station at Roselle, last night, Robert A. Batson, the local night ticket agent and telegraph operator, was struck by a Philadelphia flyer and killed instantly. The body was not mutilated.

Batson was about to deliver a message to the conductor of a westbound train. He became confused on the approach of the two trains, and before he could escape the flyer was upon him. The body was removed to Stiner's morgue at Elizabeth. County Physician Westcott was notified, as were the parents of Batson.

He was 32 years old and resided in Jersey City. When Batson was struck his body was hurled a distance of 200 feet. It landed in a snow bank and thereby escaped mutilation. He had frequently worked as relief man at the North avenue station office of the Western Union.

MRS. STEELE IN NEW YORK

Said To Be Waiting Miss Robson's Benefit Performance.

That Mrs. Jessamy Harte Steele, Bret Harte's daughter, formerly a local resident, is in New York awaiting the benefit Miss Eleanor Robson is to give for her on February 14 at the Liberty theatre, was asserted yesterday by a representative of Liebler & Company, the theatrical firm. But all information as to where she is stopping was refused. All he would say was that she is safe with friends. Miss Robson declined to be seen, referring all inquiries to her manager.

"I cannot understand why people continue to be interested in the unfortunate woman," said J. Aspinwall Hodge, counsel to Mrs. Steele and her husband. "In the first place she is mentally unsound, and for that reason cannot be seen."

BIG SCHOOL MONEY.

Amount on Hand 110 Per Cent. More Than Last Year.

The State Board of Education's apportionment of school moneys for 1907 shows the amount of money available for school purposes for 1907, in addition to what may be raised through local taxes, to be $1,048,943.

This means an increase of about 110 per cent. over what was available last year and will materially reduce the amount of money to be raised by local taxation. In fact, many of the rural districts will be provided with more money than they have ever spent for school purposes in one year.

Senator Briggs' Opportunity.

Mr. Briggs now has the greatest opportunity of his life to prove that Senators Colby and Ackerman made a mistake in failing to vote for him. And the Essex and Union men will be most happy to be convinced of their error by the logic of events that will transpire in Washington in the next six years.—Newark News.

Feb. 10: "The Blessings of Helpfulness." (Southern Educational Work.)

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Isa. lviii, 6-12; Ps. cii, 18-22; Luke x, 25-37.

This fifty-eighth chapter of Isaiah shows in clearest colors the essential and abiding difference between aesthetical and ethical religion. There is a vast difference in sentiments. Our present application of this lesson of righteousness in religion is to the work of southern education.

One of the prime causes of the civil war was the sentiment of the north against the institution of slavery. This had both its moral and economic sides. The emancipation proclamation gave political liberty to the negro. The fifteenth amendment to the constitution gave him the ballot. All this was in the realm of law and could not change in the slightest degree the nature of either negro or white man.

Four million negroes were at once thrust out into life with the necessity upon them to make a livelihood and also to make for themselves a new place in social and political life. They owned not a foot of land, though most of them had no skill for any work but that of cultivating the soil and must ever look forward to that kind of labor for means of subsistence. They owned no shelter over their heads, for the cabins were the property of their masters. They owned no clothes, for these belonged to their masters also. They had no experience in caring for themselves, for they had worked as they had been directed. They had no knowledge of many of the commonest principles of thrift, prudence, economy, health and the thousand and one little and great things which go to make life successful and which are so common among a free people that they never stop to consider that they know them nor whence they derived their knowledge and skill. The negro had everything to get and nothing but his bodily powers and uncultured wit with which to get it.

The white man of the south was almost as poor as he could be. He could give little help except in suggestion and employment to the negro. Yet this same white man, so lately master, was almost the only helper and adviser the negro could have.

Here came in the work of the north in the matter of helping both black and white of the south to help themselves. The Methodist Episcopal church was at once in the front rank of friendly helpers. Schools were a necessity. Schools were at once established. Churches and preachers were as much needed as schools and teachers. This work has from the first aimed to give the assistance most needed. Many need the lower branches. Some can fit for teachers, others as preachers, physicians, lawyers and dentists. But the larger part need to be taught the various trades. So the industrial feature has had prominence in our schools. The boys have been taught the various trades, and the girls have been taught housekeeping, dressmaking, basketry and the work that is most useful to the women.

The results of this work in the forty years since it started have been all that could have been expected, but the negroes have more than doubled in numbers. While many have tried to fit themselves for the duties of free life, many have gone into bad ways, and the result is a mass of vicious men and women, menacing the welfare of the whole nation.

This is not a time for the north to curtail its help. More than ever before it must lend its aid to the solution of the great problem. Something has been done; much more remains to be done. The south alone cannot settle the matter. Mutual confidence and assistance are needed at this time. Our schools must be re-enforced and made more efficient. The north must more adequately understand the situation, and the south, white and black, must find the eternal principles of righteousness and follow them or suffer disaster to which all past evils will be small in comparison.

Resignation to Providence.

Peace of heart lies in perfect resignation to the will of God. What you need is true simplicity, certain calmness of spirit which comes from entire surrender to all that God wills, patience and toleration for your neighbor's faults and a certain candor and childlike docility in acknowledging your own faults. The trouble you feel about so many things comes from your not accepting everything which may happen to you with sufficient resignation to God. Put all things, then, in His hand and offer them beforehand to Him in your heart as a sacrifice. From the moment when you cease to want things to be according to your own judgment and accept unconditionally whatever He sends you will be free from all your uneasy retrospects and anxieties about your own concern.—Francois de la Mothe Fenelon.

To Keep Pledges.

It is easy to make good resolutions, but a great many people break them almost as soon as they make them. One of the problems of our life is how to keep our pledges. The first thing is actually to want to keep them. The secret of the failure of most good resolves is very often the want of real purpose. We want to get more backbone to our good intentions. We need to want to stand like a rock in resisting evil.—Forward.

Friendship.

The most I can do for my friend is simply to be his friend. I have no wealth to bestow upon him. If he knows that I am happy in loving him he will want no other reward. Is not friendship divine in this?—Henry D. Thoreau.

Corporation Notice.

Plainfield, N. J., February 4, 1907.

Notice is hereby given that Michael F. Watson has applied to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield for a Hotel license to sell spirituous and fermented liquors at No. 211 Grant avenue, in the Fourth ward, which application is signed by Michael F. Watson.

All persons knowing of any reason why such license should not be granted are requested to make known the same in writing to the City Clerk on or before the twenty-fifth instant.

Done in accordance with the requirements of the "Ordinance to license inns and taverns, and to regulate and prohibit the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 10.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Lessons from the patriarchs—I. Noah.—Heb. xi, 7; II Pet. ii, 4-9; I Pet. iii, 17-22.

The history of the Old Testament patriarchs contained in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews is a most remarkable record and one that has ever been an inspiration to the Christian people of the world. It is the most comprehensive summary in a most brief space of the prominent virtues of many of the world's great men that is to be found in sacred or secular literature. The most remarkable genius is displayed in the vivid and rapid portrayal of the motives and the achievements of some of the world's great souls. In the fewest possible words the lives of men are made to stand in view before us in such a way that at a glance their character and their whole lives are fully revealed. The study of these lives and the lessons to be drawn from them should be most interesting and inspiring, for—

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

The first one of these heroes to whom our attention is called is Noah, and we may well make this an occasion for studying his entire life, and so with the others, the lessons of whose lives we are to study.

1. The life of Noah teaches us a lesson on faith. Noah lived in an age of unbelief and godlessness. The entire world was steeped in sin. The sins of man were so base and so universal that God determined to destroy the people of the world by a flood. But amid it all Noah preserved his faith and righteousness and with them the favor of God. No man need lack faith because he lives in an age of unbelief. We should control our environments and not allow them to control us. This is what Noah did, and God amply rewarded him. He told him of His intentions and provided for him a way of escape. Noah did not doubt God's word, and, though the flood did not come for 120 years, his faith was so strong that he labored away on the ark, and when it did come he escaped. Faith in God is the first essential in a true life and absolutely necessary if we are to escape punishment for sin.

2. The life of Noah teaches us a lesson on fear. Noah, "moved with fear," prepared the ark. Believing God, he feared to disobey Him. The element of fear is very much minimized in the religion of today. It is given a small place. At one time it was no doubt overemphasized, but today too little emphasis is placed upon it. The mercy of God is given the supreme place, which is eminently proper, and yet mercy even should not be emphasized at the expense of God's justice. God is most merciful to all who come to Christ, but to those who neglect Him "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." Nor need we expect to escape. The angels who sinned did not. The world in the days of Noah did not. We may well fear God and give fear an important place as an incentive to faith and right living.

3. The life of Noah teaches us a lesson on the forbearance of God. God waited 120 years even after His decision to destroy the world, and what for except that man might be given every opportunity to repent and to escape the doom pronounced upon him? And meanwhile Noah preached righteousness to the people, or, as Peter puts it, Christ through Noah preached to them. God is gracious, "slow to anger and plenteous in mercy," but even "His Spirit will not always strive" with us. Let us therefore accept His mercy as offered to us in Christ and find refuge and safety in Him, who is the ark of our salvation.

Two Boy Lay Preachers.

At Camborne, England, the United Methodist Free church has two lads who sometimes occupy the pulpit and will probably enter the ministry. These boys joined the Junior Christian Endeavor society when only seven years old and have but recently been transferred from the Intermediate to the Young People's society. Already two Endeavorers from this church have become ministers, and two beside these lads are on their way through the schools in preparation for the best of callings. What a record for a single society! Christian Endeavor World.

me eyes me in that distaste for my stupidity which I have never suffered from any other man.

"Well, no; to tell the truth, I was thinking of other things during the interview."

"Your grandfather should have provided a guardian for you, lad. You oughtn't to be trusted with money. Is your bottle empty? Well, if that person with the fat neck was your friend Pickering, I'd have a care of what's coming to me. I'd be quite sure that Mr. Pickering hadn't made away with the old gentleman's boodle, or that it didn't get lost on the way from him to you."

"The time's running now, and I'm in for the year. My grandfather was a fine old gentleman, and I treated him like a dog. I'm going to do what he directs in that will, no matter what the size of the reward may be."

"Certainly; that's the eminently proper thing for you to do. But,—but keep your wits about you. If a fellow with that neck can't find money where money has been known to exist, it must be buried pretty deep. Your grandfather was a trifle eccentric, I judge, but not a fool by any manner of means. The situation appeals to my imagination, Jack. I like the idea of it,—the lost treasure and the whole business. Lord, what a salad that is! Cheer up, comrade! You're as grim as an owl!"

Whereupon we fell to talking of people and places we had known in other lands.

We spent the next day together, and in the evening, at my hotel, he criticized my effects while I packed, in his usual ironical vein.

"You're not going to take those things with you, I hope?" He indicated the rifles and several revolvers which I brought from the closet and threw upon the bed. "They make me homesick for the jungle."

He drew from its cover the heavy rifle I had used last on a leopard hunt and tested its weight.

"Precious little use you'll have for this! Better let me take it back to The Sod to use on the landlords. I say, Jack, are we never to seek our fortunes together again? We hit it off pretty well, old man, come to think of it,—I don't like to lose you."

He bent over the straps of the rifle-case with unnecessary care, but there was a quaver in his voice that was not like Larry Donovan.

"Come with me now!" I exclaimed, wheeling upon him.

"I'd rather be with you than with any other living man, Jack Glenarm, but I can't think of it. I have my own troubles, and, moreover, you've got to stick it out there alone. It's part of the game the old gentleman set up for you, as I understand it. Go ahead, collect your fortune, and then, if I haven't been hanged in the meantime, we'll join forces later. There's no chap anywhere with a pleasanter knack at spending money than your old friend L. D."

He grinned, and I smiled ruefully, knowing that we must soon part again, for Larry was one of the few men I had ever called friend, and this meeting had only quickened my old affection for him.

"Yes, I Supposed You Weren't Looking at the Woman," He Said, Dryly.

"I suppose," he continued, "you accept as gospel truth what that fellow tells you about the estate. I should be a little wary if I were you. Now, I've been kicking around here for a couple of weeks, dodging the detectives, and incidentally reading the newspapers. Perhaps you don't understand that this estate of John Marshall Glenarm has been talked about a good bit."

"I didn't know it," I said lamely.

"You couldn't know, when you were coming from the Mediterranean on a steamer. But the house out there and the mysterious disappearance of the property have been duly discussed. You're evidently an object of some public interest,"—and he drew from his pocket a newspaper cutting. "Here's a sample item." He read:

"John Glenarm, the grandson of John Marshall Glenarm, the eccentric millionaire who died suddenly in Vermont last summer, arrived on the Maxinkuckee from Naples yesterday. Under the terms of his grandfather's will, Glenarm is required to reside for a year at a curious house established by John Marshall Glenarm near Lake Annandale, Indiana.

"This provision was made, according to friends of the family, to test young Glenarm's staying qualities, as he has, since his graduation from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology five years ago, distributed a considerable fortune left by his father in contemplating the wonders of the old world. It is reported—"

"That will do! Signs and wonders I have certainly beheld, and if I spent my patrimony I submit that I got my money back."

I paid my bill and took a hansom for the ferry,—Larry with me, chaffing away drolly with his old zest. As the boat drew out into the river a silence fell upon us,—the silence that is possible only between old friends. As I looked back at the lights of the city, something beyond the sorrow at parting from a comrade touched me. A sense of foreboding, of coming danger, crept into my heart. But I was going upon the tamest possible excursion; for the first time in my life I was submitting to the direction of another,—albeit one who lay in the grave. How like my grandfather it was to die leaving this compulsion upon me! My mood changed suddenly and as the boat bumped at the pier I laughed.

"Bah! these men!" ejaculated Larry.

"What men?" I demanded, giving my bags to a porter.

"These men who are in love," he said. "I know the signs,—mooning, silence, sudden inexplicable laughter! I hope I'll not be in jail when you're married."

"You'll be in a long time if they hold you for that. Here's my train."

We talked of old times, and of future meetings, during the few minutes that remained.

"You can write me at my place of rustication," I said, scribbling "Annandale, Wabana county, Indiana," on a card. "Now if you need me at any time I'll come to you wherever you are. You understand that, old man. Good-by."

"Write me, care of my father—he'll have my address, though this last row of mine made him pretty hot."

I passed through the gate and down the long train to my sleeper. Turning with my foot on the step, I waved a farewell to Larry, who stood outside watching me.

In a moment the heavy train was moving slowly out into the night upon its westward journey.

CHAPTER III.

The House of a Thousand Candles.

Annandale derives its chief importance from the fact that two railway lines intersect there. The Chicago express paused only for a moment while the porter deposited my things beside me on the platform. Light streamed from the open door of the station; a few idlers paced the platform, staring into the windows of the cars; the village hackman languidly solicited my business. Suddenly out of the shadows came a tall, curious figure of a man clad in a long ulster. As I write, it is with a quickening of the sensation I received on the occasion of my first meeting with Bates. His lank, gloomy figure rises before me now, and I hear his deep melancholy voice, as, touching his hat respectfully, he said:

"Beg pardon, sir; is this Mr. Glenarm? I am Bates from Glenarm House. Mr. Pickering wired me to meet you, sir."

"Yes; to be sure," I said.

The hackman was already gathering up my traps, and I gave him my trunk checks.

"How far is it?" I asked, my eyes resting, a little regretfully, I must confess, on the rear lights of the vanishing train.

"Two miles, sir," Bates replied. "There's no way over but the hack in winter. In summer the steamer comes right into our dock."

"My legs need stretching; I'll walk," I suggested, drawing the cool air into my lungs. It was a still, starry October night, and its freshness was grateful after the hot sleeper. Bates accepted the suggestion without comment. We walked to the end of the platform, where the hackman was already tumbling my trunks about, and after we had seen them piled upon his nondescript wagon I followed Bates down through the broad, quiet street of the village. There was more of Annandale than I had imagined, and several tall smokestacks loomed here and there in the thin starlight.

"Brickyards, sir," said Bates, waving his hand at the stacks. "It's a considerable center for that kind of business."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"As Told in the Hills," a powerful melodrama of Western life, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. The overworked expression, "Three hours of thrills and laughter," applies to this new play truthfully but it fails to do justice to the true merit of the production in that it gives no idea of the clever originality of the plot of the skill of the dramatist, C. E. Sinn, in its development. Although interesting and extremely thrilling at all times, the play is not one of the kind that depends on cheap sensationalism for its effect and in its strong climaxes there are no absurd situations that in real life would be impossible. Clean and refreshing comedy is a prominent feature in the play and a generous number of good specialties are introduced with effect.

"A Wife's Secret," a melodrama of the better class, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night. It is acted by a splendidly balanced company and is invested with handsome stage settings.

Maclyn Arbuckle supported by a cast of well known players will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. There have been comedy dramas on the American stage, but none have come so near to nature or achieved such instantaneous success as George Ade's comedy-drama, "The County Chairman," which Mr. Arbuckle will present. Mr. Arbuckle in "The County Chairman," it will be remembered, broke all records at Wallack's theatre in New York and the best part of the season before at the Studebaker theatre in Chicago and with equal triumphs in Philadelphia and Boston. While, as may be judged from the title, politics figure in it to some extent, the great interest in "The County Chairman" is in its pretty love story and its faithful reflection of the life in a small village in the Middle West during the early eighties. It is essentially a play of types—and such entertaining types; you will see the county politician, the village postmaster, the flightly milliner, the young lawyer, the gasping old miser, the shiftless, vote-selling darkey, the pretty schoolma'am, the fresh boy, the windmills, the cracker box orator, the village quartette, the two orphans, the rival editors and the oldest inhabitant.

CITY HIGH SCHOOL AFTER THE BASKETBALL TITLE

DEFEATS LEAL'S IN CRUCIAL GAME WRANGLE OVER THE OFFICIALS.

Plainfield High School cinched its grip in the interscholastic basketball championship at the Y. M. C. A., yesterday afternoon, by defeating Leal's. Score, 43 to 22.

As had been remarked several times of late, the game was Leal's last chance to get in line for the championship. Both sides realized the burning importance of the contest, and an hour-long fuss over the choice of a referee and umpire preceded the play. Leal's didn't want Loizeaux to officiate because he was a P. H. S. graduate, and P. H. S. just couldn't think of having Leary in a position of power, because he was a Leal's instructor. Both sides were finally smoothed down to a lovelier state of mind, and Loizeaux and Leary officiated. There were no kicks in decisions.

High School held Leal's all the way. The score was 26 to 11 in High School's favor in the first half, and the second half contained no hope for the private school lads. They were simply outplayed, and had to give way to a better team. There was a lot of rooting.

Line-up and score:

LEAL'S.		P. H. S.
Howard	forwards	Caldwell
Averill	forwards	Doane, Line
Bergen, Brown, Lawrence	center	Gavett
Duke	guards	Freeman Morris
Brokaw, Rushmore	guards	Snyder

Goals from field—Caldwell, 10; Doane, 2; Gavett, 4; Freeman, Snyder, 2; Howard, 4; Averill, 2; Duke, Lawrence. Goals from fouls—Doane, 3; Gavett, Howard, 6. Referees—Loizeaux, Leary.

DEATH OF JAMES M'CLINTON.

Former Plainfielder Passes Away at His Home in Brooklyn.

James McClinton, formerly of this city, died at his home in Brooklyn, early Tuesday morning, following a severe illness of a few weeks. He was a machinist by trade and prior to moving to Brooklyn several years ago, where he was employed by R. H. Hoe & Co., of New York, worked for a number of years at the Potter Press Works and the Campbell Company, in this city.

Mr. McClinton was well-known here and the news of his death has been received with deep regret. He leaves besides a wife, seven children, the youngest being one year old. The funeral and interment were held at Calvary Cemetery, Brooklyn, today.

Minister and Lawyer Will Speak.

The Men's Club, of the First Presbyterian church, in arranging for the dinner to be given in the chapel on Tuesday night, has secured as speakers for the occasion, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, and S. S. Swackhamer, of the borough.

OBITUARY.

Death of Mrs. E. A. Straut.

Mrs Elizabeth Anne Straut, aged 85 years, widow of George Straut, died on Tuesday at her home in New York. She was the sister of the late Mrs. Daniel J. Marshall, of Park avenue, who was the grandmother of H. W. Marshall, and was very well known here. Her husband was president of the Chicago and Alton Railroad for many years during its early history. The funeral services were held from the Church of the Transfiguration, New York, at 11 o'clock this morning and interment will be at Spring Valley, N. Y.

Boy Dies from Meningitis.

George L. Gunther, Jr., the seven-year-old son of the late George Gunther, of Netherwood, died at Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday afternoon, from meningitis, caused by inflammation of the ear. The lad was taken ill two weeks ago and was removed to the hospital, where he was under the care of Dr. F. C. Ard. The trouble did not yield to the treatment and the boy grew rapidly worse.

Marines Quell Mutiny.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 7.—Disaffection among members of the crew of the armored cruiser Tennessee culminated yesterday in an alleged mutinous outbreak in which two petty officers and a seamon were wounded, one of the officers dying from his wound. The vessel is now being guarded by marines. Chief Master-at-Arms James Doughlas, who was shot three times, died late last night. Master-at-Arms William McCool received a flesh wound in the arm and a wound in the face, and Harry Burke, a seamon, was shot through the left wrist. Locked up in the brig on the Tennessee are Burke and Seamen Dean and Lunnus in double irons. Burke is charged with firing all the shots and the other sailors are charged with being accomplices. Burke and his companions had been placed in the brig for a minor offence yesterday. While Master-at-Arms Doughlas was shackling the men, it is said, he struck one of them. The prisoners attacked him and McCool went to Doughlas' assistance. During the disturbance not a sailor on the cruiser offered any assistance to the petty officers. The bugle call for assembly was sounded, but was not obeyed. The crew gathered in little groups and the mutiny call was sounded. This brought out a battalion of marines, who took possession of the ship.

Mystery In Woman's Death.

New York, Feb. 7.—While the District Attorney's office was investigating a charge that poison, in the form of mercury in small quantities, had been administered to her, Mrs. Ida Binge, a widow of sixty-three, died in her home, No. 68 East Eightieth street, just before noon yesterday. Upon receipt of the news of the woman's death, Professor Rudolph A. Witthaus and Dr. Otto H. Schultze, a Coroner's physician, went to the house where the widow had lived with her daughter, Mrs. Leopold Wallau, her husband their son, Alexander, twenty-one years old. There an autopsy was made, but as no superficial indications of poisoning were disclosed the physicians took away with them portions of the stomach, which they will submit to chemical analysis. The result of this may not be known for a week or ten days, but Mrs. Binge will be buried tomorrow.

—Officers will be elected by the Y. M. C. A. directors tonight.

PERSONAL.

Miss Ruth Constance Fredricks, formerly of this city, but now of Brookline, Mass., is visiting Mrs. J. E. Martine, of "Cedar Brook Farm."

Physical Director Charles Listman, of the Y. M. C. A., saw Yale defeat Columbia in a closely contested basketball game at Columbia University gymnasium last night.

TOBIN PLEADED GUILTY.

Westfield's Young Desperado Acknowledges Two Charges.

Thomas Tobin, the young man who was arrested on suspicion of attempting to rob the Westfield station of the New Jersey Central, last week, was arraigned in the Union County Court to plead to two indictments found against him at the January term of court in 1904. One charge was that of highway robbery at Westfield and the other charge was for breaking and entering the home of Mrs. Clark at Cranford and stealing money and jewelry. Tobin entered a plea of guilty to the two charges and was remanded for sentence.

Mary Cushman, of Westfield, who was arrested in New York last November accused of larceny at Westfield, pleaded not guilty. The court did not fix any date for the trial.

Largesse of "Big Tim."

New York, Feb. 7.—Timothy D. Sullivan supplemented the Christmas dinner which he gave to the voters along the Bowery and the lower east side by a midwinter distribution yesterday of shoes and stockings. In helping along the deserving poor men who make their homes in the lodging houses and cheap tenements in the back streets there was no attempt to follow the methods of organized charity. The men whom "Big Tim" chose to give away the footwear, although not graduates of a school of philanthropy, knew a por man when he saw him. The latter was made welcome at the headquarters of the Sullivans, No. 207 Bowery, and after receiving a white paper box containing shoes of the right size and stockings to match, he was wished good luck as he passed out with the gift under his arm. During the process of distribution John J. White, who kept the line, managed to put unnoticed a tiny chalk mark on the left shoulder of each voter presented with a pair of shoes. This precaution was taken to prevent repeating, and it aided in the discovery of one man in the 3,600 who attempted to impose on the generosity of the "Big Fellow."

Fat Men to Wear Corsets.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—Corsets for corpulent men, waistcoat buttons costing from $5 to $50 each for those who can afford them, the long, soft, roll effect in lapels, and straight box coats, whether or not they are friendly to one's physicial conformation, are a few of the rules laid down for the well dressed man of 1907 by the Merchant Tailors' National Protective Association of America in its meeting here yesterday. Spring styles, according to leading members, will show narrow shoulders, with a rather square effect, and shorter sack coats. Pads on the shoulders and the long, loose effect of all coats will will have to go. Vents in the coats will disappear and double breasted coats will also be tabooed. Anything that is bright and expensive will be permitted for waistcoats, and the ultra-fashionable will add to them jewelled buttons, without limit as to price. Trousers may be turned up at the bottom or worn "au naturel." They will be in blue, brown and various shades of green, although mixed godds will be permissible. In overcoats the surtout and paletot will be dropped and a form fitting, straight box coat prevail.

Admiral Kautz Dead.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 7.—News of the death of Rear Admiral Albert Kautz, retired, at Florence, Italy, was received yesterday in a private cablegram to Professor Eugene Wambaugh, of the Harvard Law School, his brother-in-law. The Admiral had seen forty years' service in the navy of the United States, and few officers have had a more brilliant record of achievements. He was born in Ohio January 29, 1839, in the same county as General Grant, with whom he was intimate all his life. He graduated from Annapolis in 1854.

The Christian and Missionary Alliance will meet at the W. C. T. U. rooms tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Miss Smith, of Westfield, will be in charge and speak.

W. G. BESLER WILL HELP.

Offers to Contribute to TenBroeck Memorial Fund.

W. G. Besler, of the borough, who is the vice president and general manager of the New Jersey Central, has interested himself in the erection of a TenBroeck memorial at Asbury Park, it being proposed to erect a memorial pavilion at the beach at Fourth avenue. Mr. TenBroeck, prior to his death was Mayor of Asbury Park.

Mr. Besler has written to R. J. French, chairman of the soliciting committee, stating that in the effort to raise $5,000 for the memorial, he will be willing to be one of any fifty men to subscribe $100 each, or one of any one hundred men each, in order to make up the amount. And in case of his plan not being feasible he will be glad to make a suitable contribution in any event.

GIVE THE EYES DAILY CARE.

"Don't be careless of the eyes during cold weather. Bathe them frequently. Protect them both from wind and dust, particularly the latter, which I believe causes most of the inflamed eyeballs and swollen lids that are now so prevalent," says Dr. George Houston Bell, prominent oculist.

"If the simple preventions that may be employed to guard the eyes against soreness were understood, I feel certain that every one would adopt them, especially women who will stop at nothing to cure inflamation and redness of the eyeballs that is so disfiguring while it lasts.

"To women who are not compelled to go out of doors daily I would suggest that the easiest way for them to avoid any injury from dust would be to stay in the house until whirlwinds of fine dirt do not fill the air. A shopping trip, a call or even theatre engagement had better be postponed unless a carriage can be called to one's door or a car stoped in front of one's home.

"If it is necessary to go out when the air is full of dust—as with so many thousand working women in the city—I want to advise them to take all possible precautions and, for their own comfort, to remember these don'ts:

"Don't keep the eyes open when passing through a cloud of dust. If it is not possible to shut the lids, then turn the back or side of the head so that the particles will not fly directly into the eyes; or, if in a crowd, where there would be danger in closing the eyes, place the hand, a paper or some guard a few inches from the optics to shield them and keep out the dirt.

"Don't rub the eyes after going through a cloud of dust for this action has a tendency to irritate the eyeball by working fine pieces of metal, dirt, etc., into the cornea. If particles in the eyes cause discomfort or pain, close the lid and let the water that constantly bathes the eyeballs have a chance to wash out the foreign matter.

"If after several minutes the substance is not dissolved, have a druggist take ou the dirt with a fine camel's hair brush, or wash out the eye with a saturated solution of boric acid, which is a soothing antiseptic that will help to clear away any redness of the eyeball that usually follows the irritation caused when dirt sticks to the cornea. If boric acid is not to be had, use salt.

"Either the acid or water may be dropped into the eye from a spoon, but the best plan to give the eyeball a thorough washing is to use a regulation eye-glass that fits tightly over the lids and makes possible a complete bath."

JACK DUNN ON TEMPERANCE

Advised Baseball Players to Stay on the Water Wagon.

Jack Dunn, manager of the Baltimore baseball team, who has many friends in this city, is a staunch advocate of total abstinence among ball players. Dunn himself neither drinks liquor nor smokes, and in every way he is considered a model man to guide the affairs of a ball team. In speaking on the habits of ball players recently the Oriole manager declared that he had no use for booze-fighters on any ball team he is running. "Before signing any player," he said, "the first thing I inquire about him is whether he is a boozer or a temperate fellow. If I find out he tampers with John Barleycorn I let him drop, no matter what his playing abilities are. A ball player that drinks too much for his own good is not worth a cent to any club. I have had experience with a lot of them, and know what I'm talking about. A man to hold a job in any of the big leagues now must take care of himself, not only in the playing season, but out of it." In his talk, Dunn emphasized the fact that conditions have changed for the good during the past few years in all of the leagues, and at the present time there is very little intemperance among ball players. Not so long ago, he said, it was not an uncommon sight to see a player come on the field in an intoxicated condition and totally unfit for play, but nowadays such deplorable sights are unknown to fans. Occasionally, he said, a player makes a break, but if given a chance to keep straight he invariably makes good. Over fifty per cent. of the players in the two major leagues today, Dunn declared, are strictly temperate and never use liquor, either in or out of season.

"CHIMES" SCORE A HIT

Rendition by the Plainfield Operatic Association Its Best Achievement.

A SPLENDID CAST

Judge Runyon Adds to His Laurels By the Portrayal of "Gaspard, the Miser."

In the presentation of "The Chimes of Normandy," at the Casino, last night, it can be said that the Plainfield Operatic Association excelled all previous efforts in the amateur production of comic operas. The tuneful and catchy opera by Robert Planquette was given in a way that thoroughly pleased and delighted an audience that almost filled the auditorium at the Casino. It was the subscription performance and the liberal patronage accorded augers well for the next opera, "Pinafore," to be given later in the season.

Last night's production was by far the most ambitious work yet attempted by the association and the members measured up to it exceedingly well. Under the careful and painstaking efforts of William Holmes, the director, the chorus of sixty voices was heard to the best advantage, in fact it was much stronger than on previous occasions. Augmenting the uniform excellence of the singing on the part of the chorus, the orchestra of thirteen pieces assisted largely in making the performance a success.

As for the leading characters too much cannot be said in praise of their work. Each one showed great care in training, not only in the singing, but the speaking parts as well. There was a noticeable absence of the real amateur in the acting, the principals showing that they had learned their parts well. William N. Runyon, as "Gaspard," the miser; Miss Hortense Marie Sheldon, as "Serpolette," the good for nothing; Miss Ethel Moore, as "Germaine," the Lost Marchioness; William J. Tallamy, as "Henri," Marquis of Corneville; Elmer D. Cutting, as "Jean Grenicheux," a fisherman, and Joseph C. Martin, as "The Bailli," divided the honors of the evening, while those taking the less important parts left nothing to be desired in presenting a strong cast.

Mr. Runyon scored heavily in the second act where Henri determines to find out the real characters of the ghostly appearances and discovers that it is all the work of the old miser, who has concealed his treasures in the chateu. The discovery drives "Gaspard" crazy, especially when he hears the bells of the chateau ringing for the first time since the flight of the old Marquis. His impersonation of the character was ideal.

The singing of Miss Sheldon throughout was a decided feature, and she acted her part with a grace and ease that called forth spontaneous applause and much praise. In the final act she sang a solo that was delightful and she was obliged to repeat it. The work of Miss Moore, who made her first appearance here in comic opera, was not disappointing. She has a voice that is pleasing and although much of the solo work fell to her lot she sang well in every number. Much credit is also due Mr. Tallamy and Mr. Cutting and their singing was a delightful feature. Joseph C. Martin also won much favor by his clever acting.

In the chorus work the sixty voices were round and full. Perhaps, the most effective part was the "Ding Dong Bell" chorus, in the first and third acts. The climax is reached in the last act when it is discovered that "Serpolette" is not the real "Marchioness," but that to "Germaine" belongs the title.

The chorus and principals were handsomely costumed for the production, and this gave additional pleasure to the performance. The association can well feel proud of its latest achievement and encouraged to even greater things than were accomplished last night. Clifford A. Braider acted as stage manager and he performed his work faultlessly. The cast:

Henri, Marquis of Corneville, William J. Tallamy; Jean Grenicheux, a fisherman, Elmer D. Cutting; Gaspard, a miser, William N. Runyon; The Bailli, Joseph C. Martin; Notary, John V. Todd; Registrar, Warren French; Assessor, John B. Calder; Serpolette, the good for nothing; Miss Hortense M. Sheldon; Germaine, the lost Marchioness, Miss Ethel Moore; village maidens, Gertrude, Miss Nora B. Schenck; Jeanne, Miss Eliza W. Dufford; Nanette, Miss Elizabeth V. Day; Suzanne, Miss Henrietta J. Winn; villagers and attendants of the Marquis.

MEN'S CLUB IN CHARGE OF MONROE SERVICE

ANNIVERSARY PROGRAMME WILL BE CONCLUDED SUNDAY.

The Men's Association was in charge of the tenth anniversary services held at Monroe Avenue M. E. church, last night. John J. Praed, as president of the association, was in charge of the programme. The principal feature of the evening was an address by Prof. Isaac, of the Plainfield Business College. His subject was "Resistance."

The speaker's chief thought was along the line of helps in the development of character by resisting those things which are a hinderance. He urged that all try to cultivate good habits, which he said was as easy as cultivating bad habits. His talk was very helpful and was appreciated by the large audience present. This was called "ladies' night" and there was a large attendance of women.

Following the programme there was a social hour and refreshments were served. Tonight the Epworth League will be in charge, and Charles Sumner Kemble will give linked readings from James Whitcomb Riley. Miss Martin, of the church choir, will render solos and there will be social features. No services will be held tomorrow night, but on Sunday morning Rev. Dr. John Hamilton Howard, of Staten Island, will preach the anniversary sermon, and in the evening N. Mansfield Smith will present the historical sketch, followed with an address by Rev. Frank Fletcher, formerly of Dunellen, but now of this city.

ENLARGING CAMERA CLUB MEMBERSHIP

CLASS IN FENCING A NEW FEATURE OF CLUB LIFE.

Plans to enlarge the membership of the Camera Club have been made by the organization. Popular features of a special nature are bing considered, and it has already been decided to add fencing to the amusements available to the club members.

Under the impulse of the new spirit, the membership has already started to grow. A dozen or more applications are expected within a day or so.

The interest in fencing will be fostered by the organization of a class. Louis A. Clement, who has law offices in the Babcock building handy to the club rooms, has agreed to take charge of the class and start its members on the road to expertness. He is an experienced fencer, and enthusiastic at the sport.

When the class grows more skilful, an instructor from New York will be brought out one or two evenings a week to teach the members some of the finer points of the game.

WATCHUNG HUNT CLUB ASKS FOR STEEPLECHASE DATES.

The Annual Event to Be Held at the Driving Park on Two Days.

The Watchung Hunt Club has made application to the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association for dates for the annual steeplechase events at the Plainfield Driving Park, and the same dates as last year, Decoration Day, and the Saturday following, have been granted the local club. Arrangements are now underway for the local event and it is proposed to make it the best in the history of the club.

Assurances have been received from those who have had entries in previous shows, that they will bring their horses to Plainfield this year, and besides a number of new entries have been promised, which will make it possible for the club to offer strong attractions for both days. Dr. M. O'Malley Knott, who is in charge of many of the details, is now in communication with owners of thoroughbred jumpers and hunters and judging by the responses the entry lists will even exceed that of last year.

Engrossed Resolutions Received.

The Republican City Executive Committee has received a set of handsomely bound engrossed resolutions which were passed at the death of Dr. O. L. Jenkins. The work was done by J. Willard Urmston, of Rahway, and is a splendid specimen of the penman's art. The set will be presented to Mrs. Jenkins at her return from Atlantic City.

Horse Hangs Itself.

Louis A. Hummer, the Somerset street butcher, lost a valuable horse last night. The animal, an extra large one, tried to lay down in the stall, and in doing so wrapped the halter about his neck and strangled to death. Mr. Hummer found the horse dead in the stall this morning.

FRENCHY IS SANS BARN

Police Take the Little Old Frenchman From His Shelter.

BUT PEOPLE WERE BON

Battered Old Waif Was Getting Along Somehow, But Now He Must Go to the City Home.

Frenchy has left Liberty street. Frenchy, whose real name is Jean Grethier, lived in a barn on Liberty street, for more than a year. All the children know him and most of the grown-ups.

Frenchy is sixty-eight years old. As a young man he was as blithe a carpenter as one could find in Saint-Germain, or in the whole department of Seine-et-Oise, which, as Frenchy will tell you, is as far from Paris as New York is from Plainfield. Frenchy left Saint-Germain to make the fortune he had heard was waiting for one who had the courage to go to America. Frenchy found plenty of work, but not the fortune.

He was an old man when he drifted to Plainfied, but managed to shift for himself until about a year ago. He couldn't work any more, but the barn sheltered him, and he managed to get along somehow. The people, he says, were very good—"tres bon peuple, yes."

Patrolman Meyers saw Frenchy hobble into his barn last night, and he began to wonder how the old man would get through the winter. The policeman decided that the Industrial Farm was Frenchy's only insurance against cold and hunger. So he told the old man, gently, to come with him. Frenchy, courteous and meek as ever, obeyed without protest. He knew what the official intervention meant, but he had learned to be resigned to everything, and what could one do?—the poor they have no choice, no. He had gotten along, and no one complained—of a certainty, the people were tres bon—but when a garde de ville steps into a matter argument is foolish.

So Frenchy went, and this morning monsieur le juge de ville made out the papers that will immure the little old man in the city home, where one must do as one is told, and wait patiently for the one end.

As he sat in the police station waiting for his transfer to the Home, Frenchy's thoughts were over the seas. He confessed to a newspaper man that he wished to see Paris and the Parisian crowds once more. It was a foolish wish, surely, and only to be pardoned because one was old and in second childhood. But, eh, the boulevardes were fine—and the Louvre, and the Arc de Triomphe; and the sight of the Hotel des Invalides and of Notre Dame would do one good.

Frenchy sighed softly as he thought of them all; the young man must go to Paris if he could by any possibility make the journey; he could never say he had lived rightly if he did not. Then Frenchy said "Bon jour," and dropped his head on his breast.

Sesame Club Entertained.

The members of the Sesame Club, which has been following a course of study of Northern Italy this winter, including Florence in particular, met at the Plainfield Camera Club rooms, last night, with their husbands, and enjoyed an exhibition of seventy-five beautiful lantern slides, views of Florence and including points of interest in the city. Many beautiful pictures of buildings and copies of fine sculpture and paintings of the old masters were shown. The slides were obtained and shown by J. Hervey Doane, assisted by Walter Freeman, and accompanied by an interesting description of the views by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, who has visited the scenes pictured many times. Mr. Doane, Mr. Freeman and Mr. Nickerson are husbands of club members and their efforts to entertain the club were greatly appreciated.

Business Will Not Be Affected.

It was announced by the Plainfield Cab Company this morning that the suicide of Louis Franken, yesterday, would not affect the business in any way. The company will continue as heretofore, with its regular operating staff, and hopes for a continuance of the patronage that has enabled it to take high rank in the livery work of the city. The service, as always, will be the best that can be furnished.

Will Meet in W. C. T. U. Rooms.

The members of the Rescue Mission who have been meeting in the Christian church on Grove street have completed arrangements for meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms in the future. The first meeting will be held there Sunday night and Tuesdays and Thursdays regularly in addition. After the change is made it is proposed to call the organization the Plainfield Rescue Mission.

TRINITY TURKEY SUPPER IS A GREAT SUCCESS

HANDSOME DECORATIONS AND EXCELLENT COOKERY MARK ANNUAL AFFAIR.

Charming decorations, excellent cuisine, perfect service and delightful music combined to make the annual turkey supper of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity church, last night, one of the most successful affairs in the long list of memorable Trinity social events. Between 6 and 9 o'clock, 215 suppers were served, and that many people accounted themselves delighted.

The lecture room, where the supper is being held—it will be continued tonight—is hung profusely with green and white streamers of crepe paper. All the pillars and chandeliers are strung with them, and a fluttering curtain of the streamers hangs between the auditorium and the platform. The tables, last night, were most attractive, with brightly burning candelabra and cut flowers for decorations. Six tables were set on the floor, and two on the platform.

The wants of the guests were met at the various tables by Mrs. Garret VanWinkle, assisted by Mrs. Edgar Sheppard, Miss Margaret Leggett, Miss Helen Smith, Miss Leitheusser; Mrs. A. L. Force, assisted by Mrs. W. R. Kriney, Miss Nettie Robinson, Miss Edith Leek; Mrs. Harry W. Marshall, assisted by Mrs. Mary Disbrough, Miss Jessie Garthwaite, Miss Alice Pugh, Miss Minnie Nischwitz and Mrs. S. Frazee; Mrs. R. Clark, Jr., assisted by Mrs. Winfield Schomp, Miss Kate Gray, and the Misses Bodine; Mrs. Horace J. Martin, Mrs. Butts, Miss Butts, Mrs. Huff, Miss Hazel Martin; Mrs. Templin, assisted by Miss Alice Vroom, Miss Cora Gano, Miss Emily Templin; Mrs. Fred S. Cutter, assisted by Mrs. Charles Beckman, the Misses Kling, Miss Miller; Mrs. Frank Woodruff, assisted by Mrs. Henry Van Name, the Misses Van Zandt, Miss Lunger.

Candy and cake sales were conducted in connection with the supper. The cake table was under the charge of Mrs. Louis Dunavan and Mrs. George Cole. Miss Lillian Force, Miss Mabel Wilson, Miss Cora Laire, Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh and Miss Edith Dilts were in charge of the candy table. Music was rendered during the evening by Kenneth Stuart's orchestra.

The general committee is made up of Mrs. C. P. Leggett, chairman; Mrs. Anna Gillem and Mrs. Winfield Schomp. Mrs. W. C. Leek, Mrs. George Cole and Mrs. Henry Van Name were in charge of the decorations. To the skilful and hard-working kitchen staff a large share of the credit for the success of the supper is due. Those who assisted in the kitchen are Mrs. Charles Ball, Mrs. Edward Van Winkle, Mrs. W. F. Leitheusser, Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver, Mrs. Anna Gillem, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Henry Pugh, Mrs. William Van Deventer, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, Mrs. Storrs, Mrs. W. C. Leek, Mrs. Virginia Chickering, Mrs. Winfield Schomp, Mrs. Romaine Van Zandt.

The reception committee was made up of Mrs. Carman Parse, Mrs. John C. Van Dyke, Mrs. M. F. Gano and Mrs. Bradley. Mrs. B. D. Newell was cashier. W. C. Leek had charge of the check-room, and Bertram Leggett, Fred Smith and Cornelius Schenck, Jr., assisted at the door.

Those who failed to enjoy the supper last night will have an opportunity to taste its pleasures tonight, from 6 o'clock to 9. The music will be a feature.

CAUGHT BETWEEN TRAINS

Local Mail Carrier Trapped at North Ave. Station Barely Saves His Life.

SLIGHTLY INJURED

Benjamin Urquhart, colored, who carries the mail between the post office and the North Avenue Station, narrowly escaped being killed at the station at 7:30 o'clock, last night. He had a truck loaded with mail and attempted to cross from the eastbound to the westbound tracks. At the time he noticed two trains approaching, eastbound, one a freight and the other a passenger, and he believed that the latter train was the one on which he was to put the mail. Instead it was a Royal Blue Line Flyer.

Being caught between the two trains, he quickly reversed his truck, heading it eastbound and as close to the freight tracks as possible. As the flyer went by at full speed, Urquhart threw his right hand back of him and it struck one of the coaches of the train severely spraining it. The flyer hit the truck, slightly damaging it, but the mail bags and contents were undisturbed.

Urquhart suffered a severe nervous shock, which he did not recover from the rest of the night. However, he remained at his post and carried the mail as usual. This morning he went to the hospital where the Xrays were put on the injured wrist. It was discovered that no bones were broken. His escape from fatal injury or instant death was remarkable.

Urquhart is the sub-contractor for carrying the mail, his brother, Edward Urquhart, holding the contract. The latter carries one of the mail routes to Warrenville and vicinity. He receives $800 a year for carrying the mail between the post offices and the railroad station, and has arrangements with his brother for doing the work.

In explaining the accident to Postmaster Bird, this morning, Urquhart said that his eyesight being poor, he was unable to tell at first that it was a flyer that was approaching instead of the train which carries the mail and he believed that he had plenty of time to cross the tracks. Fortunately, he was standing back of the truck of mail, for if he had been at the other end, it is believed that nothing could have saved him for it was that end that was struck by the flyer.

Freight Blocked Traffic.

The breaking of a truck on an engine drawing an eastbound freight at 6 o'clock, this morning, stalled the train for two hours at Westfield. The freight occupied the main eastbound tracks, and during the time of delay all eastbound passenger trains had to be shifted over to the westbound tracks to pass around the disabled train. The temporary arrangement was one of great inconvenience as the accident happened during the early morning rush hour when the eastbound passenger traffic is very heavy. Finally, the engine was repaired sufficiently to run it to Roselle and another engine was secured to move the freight off the main tracks. There was no damage other than that to the freight engine.

Miss Burt's Narrow Escape.

Miss Ruth A. Burt, niece of Mrs. W. J. R. Hegeman, of Sycamore avenue, with whom she makes her home, was summoned to Palatka, Florida, on Thursday night, on account of the death of her father, James Burt, a prominent citizen of that place, who died on Wednesday of last week. The train on which Miss Burt was going south, was wrecked and the car in which she was riding was the only one of the train not damaged.

Sleigh Ride to Westfield.

Twenty-five pupils from the North Plainfield High School enjoyed a sleighride to Westfield and back last night. The party met at the home of Miss Hazel Walters on Fairview avenue. At Westfield the young people regaled themselves with hot chocolate and refreshments and had a jolly good time.

Spafford Robbins Dead.

Spafford F. Robbins a former well known resident of Somerset county, died a few days ago at the home of his son, William O. Robbins, at Matamaras, Pike county, Pa. He was 68 years old. A widow and four sons and four daughters survive him.

Announce Wedding Date.

Miss Louse Fink Wilbur, daughter of Freeholder and Mrs. S. P. T. Wilbur, of Westervelt avenue, and Blake Broadhead Tatham, of Philadelphia, will be married at the home of the bride's parents, Wednesday night, February 20.

WESTFIELD MAN WEDS MISS CORNELIA SAMPSON

QUIET CEREMONY PERFORMED AT THE BRIDE'S HOME LAST EVENING.

Miss Cornelia Clark Sampson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sampson, of East Fifth street, and John C. Ketcham, of Westfield, were married at 6 o'clock, last night, at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. Dr. John I. Steans, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Westfield. The affair was a quiet one, being attended only by the relatives and a few intimate friends from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Westfield and this city.

The parlor, where the ceremony was performed, was simply decorated with palms and potted plants. The bride and groom were unattended. After the ceremony congratulations were offered. Later in the evening the couple left to enjoy an extended wedding trip. As they departed from the house they were showered with rice and confetti. Upon their return they will reside in Westfield.

The bride is well known here, especially in musical circles. She was formerly a member of the choir at the First Baptist church, and since that time has been the soprano soloist at the Presbyterian church, Westfield, of which Mr. Ketcham is an elder and a prominent worker. He holds a responsible position with the American Exchange Bank, New York, and at Westfield is one of the leading citizens.

The bride received a large collection of costly and useful gifts from relatives and friends, including china, silver and goldware, furniture, linen and many other things.

COMING GREAT COUNCIL OF THE IMP'D O. R. M.

JUDGE NEWCORN TO MAKE REPORT FOR LEGISLATION COMMITTEE.

The great council of the Improved Order of Red Men will meet at Trenton, February 28 and March 1. Plainfield councils will be well represented. District Judge William Newcorn, who is a past great sachem of the order, will attend.

All past sachems have a voice and vote in the meeting. There will be a short session on the evening of February 27, but the real business of the council will not be reached until the meeting on the twenty-eighth.

Judge Newcorn is chairman of the special committee on State legislation. His report on the fate of the two measures advocated by the Red Men at the last session of the Legislature has been sent in. The committee succeeded in having the law making it a misdemeanor to wear the insignia of any secret order without right enacted, but Governor Stokes vetoed the other measure supported by the committee, that making it a misdemeanor for an association to use the name or ritual of a secret order.

In speaking to Judge Newcorn on the bill, the Governor said he did not see the necessity for it, because the courts have the power to stop name- and ritual-stealing. Judge Newcorn pointed out that the committee realized that, but it was the belief of the order that the way to check the use of name and ritual should be made shorter than by suing out an injunction in the Court of Chancery, a proceeding that is necessary in every separate case. The Governor, however, held to his position that the bill was unnecessary, and vetoed it.

SOCIETY PEOPLE ATTEND DELIGHTFUL AFTERNOON TEA.

Affair Held at the Home of Mrs. Leander N. Lovell, on Crescent Avenue, Yesterday.

Society people were present in large numbers at a delightful afternoon tea given yesterday by Mrs. Leander N. Lovell, the Misses Lovell and Mrs. Harry Borden Lovell at the home of Mrs. Leander N. Lovell on Crescent avenue. The hours were from 4 to 7 o'clock and the social features were greatly enjoyed by everyone. The home was attractively decorated for the affair, pink being the prevailing color in the dining room and red was used throughout the other rooms.

Those who presided at the table in the dining room were Mrs. J. S. Zelie, the Misses Anthony, Mrs. Israel C. Pierson, Mrs. Harry Borden, Mrs. George S. Ring, Mrs. Edward Gilbert and Mrs. Lucius Gilbert. Others assisting were the Misses Pierson, Moore, Kirby, Gilbert, Yates, of this city; Miss Wilder, of New York, and Miss Eleanor VanTuyl, of Texas.

—Mr. and Mrs. Leslie M. Coobs, of West Third street, are parents of a boy born to them this morning.

BRIGGS TO SPEAK HERE

Newly Elected Senator Will be at the Board of Trade Banquet.

POLITICAL AFTERMATH

Choice of the Treasurer Has By No Means Clarified the Atmosphere In the State.

United States Senator-elect Frank O. Briggs will be one of the speakers at the Board of Trade banquet to be held at the Casino, Tuesday night. His acceptance of the invitation to be present and speak was received this afternoon by Mayor Charles J. Fisk. In view of the recent contest over the Senatorship, in which Mr. Briggs won out, his presence in this city will have special significance, and it will afford many people an opportunity to meet their new representative.

The election of Frank O. Briggs to the United States Senate has by no means clarified the political atmosphere in this State, according to those who profess to be acquainted with the inner workings of the Republican party, and but opens the way for one of the bitterest struggles ever known in this State when Senator Kean's term expires in 1911.

Then, it is said, there will be three contestants for this honor, in the persons of Kean, Dryden and Stokes, each with a following that will leave no stone unturned to land the plum for their respective leader.

According to rumors that were flying thick and fast around Trenton for the past few days, the action of Governor Stokes in putting a quietus on the boom which threatened to land him in the Senate, despite constitutional barriers, he was acting in accordance with an agreement which he entered into with Mr. Dryden. The understanding was, so rumor has it, that Governor Stokes was to have been groomed for the Senatorial race to succeed Kean. Dryden was to have thrown all his influence to accomplish this end, which, together with the Governor's strong following both in South and North Jersey, his election would be a foregone conclusion.

This plan, it is said, met with the hearty approval of the State Republican Committee, and the general plan was to force Kean into retirement willy nilly. Senator Ackerman, who has ever been opposed to the re-election of Mr. Dryden, however, is a staunch supporter of Senator Kean and just what bearing his influence might have had on this plan is problematical.

But in any event the enforced retirement of Mr. Dryden will upset all previous calculations, for it is not believed for a moment that Mr. Dryden intends to remain la quiescent a state and that he will again loom up as a candidate for Senatorial honors is believed by all.

South Jersey is by no means satisfied with Briggs' election, and not since the retirement of Senator Sewell has it had a representation in the Senate. When Senator Kean's term expires it is safe to predict that this section of the State will clamor for recognition and according to the direction political straws are now blowing, Governor Stokes' crowning ambition will yet be achieved and he will be the next Senator.

"Sugaring-Off" Party.

Twenty-five members of the Christion Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church enjoyed a sleighride, last night, in the country, and while on the trip they stopped at the home of Miss Ida Randolph at Mt. Pleasant, where a "sugaring-off" was the feature. This is a new form of aumsement in this section, but throughout New York State it is one of the delights of the winter season. It consists of gathering snow in a receptacle and pouring warm maple syrup over it. The combination makes a pleasant dish which all enjoyed thoroughly. The Endeavorers reached home before midnight.

McIntyre Concert Tonight.

Mrs. Viola Waterhouse, a talented soprano from New York, will be the assisting artist at the McIntyre Chamber Music Concert at the Casino, tonight. Vladimir Dubinsky, 'cellist, and Mr. McIntyre will also have parts in the programme. This will be the last of the present series of concerts.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Tripping to the strains of Suhr's orchestra, the Suburban A. C., of the borough, and its friends last night enjoyed one of the best dances the club has yet held. From 9 o'clock until the hour of 2 a. m. the members and their friends danced the two-step and waltz with only a short intermission at midnight for refreshments. The club's bowling alleys and parlors were open for the use of those who tired of the dance, but they were few, as dancing seemed to be the main attraction for all. Guests were present from Plainfield and other nearby towns.

The commuter element in town and the borough have been getting home at almost any old time a night since the snow storm of Monday. The C. R. R. has had considerable trouble handling cars in the Jersey City yards on account of the switches being blocked.

Republican Leaders to Be Invited to Attend Demonstration In Trenton.

Trenton, Feb. 8.—The election of State Treasurer Frank O. Briggs to the office of United States Senator is giving universal satisfaction throughout New Jersey. Trenton persons are especially well pleased with the action of the Legislature and are planning to show their appreciation of the honor that has been paid to a fellow citizen. A big reception will be held by the Trenton Republican Club in Mr. Briggs' honor in the near future, and Senators Kean and Dryden, all of the New Jersey Congressmen and all the political leaders of the State will be invited to attend.

Mr. Briggs will resign as State Treasurer, to take effect February 28, and the Legislature will elect his successor some time previous to that date. It is generally believed that Daniel Voorhees, county clerk of Morris, will be elected to the vacancy. The election will be for the balance of the term of Mr. Briggs, which expires in 1908. The regular term of the Treasurer is for three years, and the salary is $6,000 per annum.

MARTIN PASSED AT 100.

Second Regiment Officer in Line for Another Advance.

Major William B. Martin, formerly of Company K, has passed his examination for his new post with 100 per cent., but owing to the illness of the official who draws up the papers, has not yet received his commission. Major Martin made a perfect average in military regulations from the school of the soldier to the evolution of the brigade, when examined by a board composed of Colonel Freeman, First Regiment; Lieutenant-Colonel Andrews, Fifth Regiment, and Lieutenant-Colonel Brinkerhoff, Fourth Regiment.

It seems probable that before the ink is dry on Major Martin's new commission he will have practically received another promotion. Should Colonel Collins be elected brigadier-general to succeed General Gilmore, Major Martin will become second senior major, and will command the Second Battalion.

Wanamassa Dinner.

The Wanamassa Boat Club will hold its fourth annual dinner on February 21, at the Hotel Churchill, Broadway and Fourteenth street, New York. The dinner will begin at 8 o'clock. The committee is made up of G. Harold Whitney, Percy L. Phillips and Frederick A. Martin. The Wanamassa Club members number 150.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

One of the strongest bids for popularity made by the modern melodrama, "As Told in the Hills," which will be given at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, is that there is no objectionable features to the performance. It is true that there are villains, two of them in fact, but their fate is a striking example of what their villainy deserves. In contrast with them the other characters are clearly and forcibly drawn in a manner that will leave a lasting impression.

There are lots of commendable features about "A Wife's Secrets," which will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night and lovers of good, wholesome melodrama should not miss it.

Maclyn Arbuckle (the original County Chairman) and his brilliant company in George Ade's spectacular comedy, "The County Chairman," will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. This announcement should create unusual interest, partly on account of the play's prevailing spirit of jollity and partly also by reason of its wholesome simplicity and fidelity to home life and character. Its types are true to everyday life, its love interest is charming, its drollery is delicious, and its dramatic episodes are intensely stirring. Maclyn Arbuckle in "The County Chairman" returns to Plainfield after a very successful tour through the West and his native State, Texas.

For the most part the average musical comedy is an ill-assorted conglomeration of vaudeville specialties and the latest catchy song hits strung together without semblance of plot, and with a faint attempt towards coherence. "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World," the attraction underlined for the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre on February 28, matinee and night, as the benefit to Treasurer Cunningham, differs materially in this respect as the announcements give absolute assurance of the employment of a comprehensive story, fraught with rollicking humor and unfolding a long list of genuine laugh surprises, while the musical numbers are free from interpolations, all of them having been specially composed for the purpose of fitting the dramatic action of the comedy. Not a few of these compositions have preceded the forthcoming visit of "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World," and have for some time past been whistled, hummed and played hereabouts with keenest delight and therefore to hear them rendered by a conspicuous aggregation of talented actors is anticipated with no little pleasure.

WON'T LET MAYOR QUIT.

Rahway Council Says It Has No Power to Name Furber's Successor.

Rahway, Feb. 8.—The Common Council, at its meeting Tuesday night refused to accept Mayor Furber's resignation, which was presented at the previous meeting and laid over. The council members say that the council has no power to appoint another Mayor in his place. A. J. Westlake, president of the board, is acting Mayor meantime.

Mayor Furber, this morning, said that the resignation is final and must be taken as such. He will start tonight for a far Western trip. He said that even he were here he would refuse to act in an official capacity, sign any papers or assume any duty connected with the Mayorolty. Mr. Furber says his business duties are such as to demand imperatively his whole time. Meantime Mr. Westlake will continue to act as Mayor.

Horsewhips Physician.

New York, Feb. 8.—Entering the private office of Dr. George J. McKelway, at his home, at Jagger and Sanford avenues, Fushing, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. N. J. K. Reilly, of No. 248 Lincoln street, a handsome woman of thirty, struck the physician several blows with a rawhide dog whip. Leaving the office, she went immediately to a police station, and telling of her act asked to be arrested. In the absence of complaint or warrant the police refused to hold her. Beyond admitting that she had struck Dr. McKelway, Mrs. Reilly refused to discuss the whipping. Dr. McKelway referred all questions to his attorney, Harrison S. Moore. Mr. Moore said Mrs. Reilly had struck the physician while laboring under great excitement produced by the belief that medical treatment prescribed for her had been injurious. He said no proceedings had been instituted against Mr. Reilly and was sure she would think better of her attitude upon reflection.

Miss Anna Bader, of South Second street, is detained at home with an attack of the grip.

REMARKABLE DEMAND FOR COOPER MEDICINES

The Phenomenal sale of L. T. Cooper's new preparations proves the many reports of their marvelous curative properties.

MR. H. JORDAN.

The demand for Cooper's New Discovery and Quick Relief, which have effected such remarkable cures of stomach trouble, rheumatism, deafness and catarrh, has become enormous. Newspapers in every city have commented upon the curative powers and on the unprecedented demand of these remedies. Thousands of letters come every day to Mr. Cooper describing some of the most remarkable recoveries from the ravages of disease that have been brought to the attention of the public in recent years. A most remarkable letter was recently received from Mr. H. Jordan, a well known restaurant proprietor of Scranton, who writes Mr. Cooper as follows:

"I have suffered for the past three years with a severe case of stomach trouble. I could eat next to nothing and suffered untold agonies from indigestion. My food would sour after eating and I would have sick headaches and dizzy spells. I lost forty pounds in weight and grew weak and nervous. I doctored with many different physicians and tried a number of so-called remedies, but received no relief. Reading of the remarkable cures of stomach trouble effected by Cooper's New Medicines, I decided to give them a trial. I secured a bottle of the New Discovery and received almost immediate relief. My appetite has returned and I do not experience any difficulty in digesting anything I eat. All pain and nervousness have disappeared and I am rapidly gaining in strength and weight. I desire to thank you for the good these remarkable remedies have done for me." Signed:
MR. HENRY JORDAN, 136 Penn Ave., Scranton, Pa.

Nearly all diseases originate in the stomach. Cooper's New Discovery acts directly on the stomach and digestive organs. It increases the gastric juices, which are an all-important factor in the proper digestion of food.

Cooper's New Discovery and Cooper's Quick Relief are the preparations with which L. T. Cooper effected his remarkable cures in St. Lonis, New Orleans and other large cities, and results have amply proven that they can be used in the home with as much success as though administered personally by Mr. Cooper or his physicians.

Cooper's New Discovery costs $1.00 per bottle; six for $5.00. Cooper's Quick Relief costs 50c. You can get them of

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. Dr. Stout, of Somerville, who recently accepted the call to the pastorate of the South Bound Brook Reformed church, began his duties this week.

The Boys' Athletic League of the First Baptist church will meet at the church tonight at 7:30 o'clock and it is hoped that there will be a full attendance.

The annual offering for the New Jersey Baptist Education Society and the Abed Ministers' Home Society will be received at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning.

Among the games to be enjoyed at the picnic to be held in Vincent chapel Friday night, under the auspices of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church, will be golf and croquet. There will be shady places on the lawn and comfortable hammocks and in fact all the joys of an outdoor picnic will be arranged.

SAYS HE TOOK GUN AWAY FROM WHITE.

"Scotty," the Death Valley Miner, Will Be a Witness For Harry Thaw.

Boston, Feb. 8.—A friend of Walter Scott, better known as "Scotty," the Death Valley miner, has received word here that Scott is now on his way to testify at the Thaw case. Scott is said to have been at Madison Square Garden one night about a year ago and, according to his story, was the means of preventing Stanford White from killing Harry Thaw.

It is said he now has the revolver which White intended to use. He claims that White appeared at the Garden and, meeting "Scotty," said he was going to kill Thaw, who was present with his wife. In telling his story "Scotty" said:

"I asked him if he had a gun and he said yes and that he intended to use it, and he half pulled a business looking piece of artillery from his hip pocket. I grabbed it and we had quite a scrap, for I was determined to get it away before anything happened."

Scott further claims he has two witnesses in New York who were present at the time.

REWARD POLITENESS.

In Drawing His Will Livingston Remembered Accommodating Clerk.

Trenton, Feb. 8.—The will of Alfred M. Livingston, the wealthy bachelor, who committed suicide in this city last week, was made public yesterday. It shows an estate worth between $300,000 and $350,000.

The principal bequest is made to Leon Bebbington, of this city, a young man who accompanied Mr. Livingston on several European trips. Mr. Bebbington is given $20,000 in cash, besides a lot of furniture, books, jewelry and other personal property.

Other bequests are: $5,000 to Union Industrial Association of Trenton; $5,000 to Mercer Hospital, Trenton; $2,500 to Rutherford Coleman, Trenton; $2,000 to Lewis C. McClurg, Mr. Livingston's real estate agent; $1,000 to Charles S. Albertson, an accommodating clerk in a local haberdashery, who waited on Mr. Livingston; $500 to Mercer Cemetery trustees, for keeping the dead man's grave in order.

After all debts of the estate are paid, Mr. Livingston directs conversion of all property into cash, to be divided equally among his cousins.

$32,000,000 Gift.

New York, Feb. 8.—John D. Rockefeller yesterday gave $32,000,000 to the General Education Board for general educational purposes throughout the country. This is the largest individual gift ever made for educational purposes. Mr. Rockefeller had previously given $11,000,000 to the Board for the same work and this second gift makes a total of $43,000,000 he has given for the purpose. The original gift was made for establishing a trust fund, which the trustees of the Board were to administer, and the $32,000,000 will be added to that fund. The control of this vast fund is placed in the hands of prominent men who compose the Board on only one condition, that two-thirds of the gift be applied to specific purposes by the direction of John D. Rockefeller or of his son, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and one-third goes to the permanent endowment fund of the Board.

Hawaii Has a Sea Serpent.

Honolulu, T. H., Feb. 8.—Native fishermen have been driven from their favorite grounds through terror of a sea serpent. The monster is described by them as a serpent, but some of the less terror stricken people think that it is an eel. In any event, the monster is about ten feet in length and is about as big around the body as the neck of an average man. It attacked some natives recently, causing them to drop their spears and lights in terror and flee for the shore. The natives are in the habit of spearing eels at night, but the monster has deprived them of their favorite dish. A reward has been offered for the capture of the big eel. There has been bad weather recently, and it is thought that the eel followed some schools of small fish inside of the reef. Few if any natives can be induced to venture into the water in the neighborhood of where the big serpent or eel was last seen.

RAILWAY MISHAPS. RAPIDLY GROWING.

Nearly 20,000 Casualties Reported in Three Months Ended on September 30 Last.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Railroad accidents in the United States are rapidly increasing, according to a bulitan issued yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission covering the three months ended on September 30, 1906.

The total number of casualties to passengers and employees while on duty was 19,850 in the three months, against 16,937 reported in the preceding three months, making an increase of 2,913. The number of passengers and employees killed in train accidents was 267, against 194, an increase of 73.

The total number of collisions and derailments in the quarter under review was 3,672—1,891 collisions and 1,781 derailments—of which 269 collisions and 201 derailments affected passenger trains. Damages to cars, engines and roadway by these accidents amounted to $2,932,760.

In some few details, the Commissioner says, there are small decreases from the corresponding quarter one year ago, but in general there is no improvement. The number of passengers killed in train accidents—52 in the quarter—is large, though it includes the results of only three particularly notable cases—one collision and two derailments.

The number of employees killed in coupling and uncoupling cars and engines was 81, an increase of 13 over the preceding quarter.

The most disastrous accident reported in the three months was a collision between a passenger train and a freight train, when 17 persons were killed.

CHAIN OF MEN SAVED HIM FROM WATERY GRAVE.

They Pushed Fence Rail Along Cracking Ice, Each Holding Other's Feet.

Henry Senior, of Spruce street, Bloomfield, was in a hurry yesterday to get home from the Oakes Woollen Mills, where he is employed, so he took a short cut across the mill pond, although warned not to do so by fellow-workmen, who told him the ice was no strong.

When Senior reached the channel near the middle of the pond the ice cracked, but still he kept on. A few feet further the ice gave way and he was plunged into ten feet of water. Some of the mill hands, who had been watching him, secured a long fence rail and ran across the ice as near to the spot where Senior was struggling for life as they dared. Frank Bailey lay down on the ice and pushed the rail toward Senior.

Edward Lohr seized Bailey's feet and pushed him along with the rail. Others did a similar act until a chain was formed. The end of the rail got close enough to Senior, who seized it and Bailey gave a signal to the others, who slowly moved backward, pulling Senior to a point of safety, although the ice began to crack beneath the weight of the rescuers.

Senior was unconscious when brought to the shore, and it was with difficulty that his hands were loosened from the rail, as they were frozen fast to it. Senior will recover unless pneumonia follow his icy bath.

Engine Crew Scalded.

Phillipsburg, Feb. 8.—Through the bursting of a flue in a westbound freight train's engine, on the Lehigh Valley Railroad yesterday afternoon, three employes were badly scalded, one so seriously that he died within five minutes after being brought to the Easton, Pa., Hospital. The accident occurred at Woodfern. The injured men were William Messler, aged thirty-two, the brakeman; Samuel Donnelly, the engineer, and Soren Hanson, the firemen, all of Perth Amboy. Messler is the man who died of his injuries. He was scalded all over the body.

FRANK BANUSIK HANGED IN ESSEX COUNTY JAIL

PAID THE PENALTY FOR THE MURDER OF THOMAS HOFF A YEAR AGO.

Frank Banusik was hanged yesterday in the Essex County Jail at Newark. Before his death Banusik confessed the murder of Thomas Hoff at Bloomfield the night of January 6, 1906.

The hanging was successfully carried out so far as is possible under this discredited method of inflicting the death penalty. James Van Hise, who boasts that he has sent eighty murderers into eternity, was the hangman.

Van Hise adjusted the noose and arranged the drop with a view of breaking the neck of Banusik. His calculations went wrong, for although Banusik was shot fifteen feet into the air and then fell back twelve feet, the shock failed to break his neck, and death resulted from the slower and brutal process of strangulation.

Although the arms and legs of the condemned murderer were securely pinioned by leather thongs he struggled convulsively for nearly a full minute, and more than two minutes elapsed before the last twitch of the body was observed.

Four minutes after the drop fell the body was lowered and the physicians in official attendance examined the body. They found the heart beating and a distinct pulse. The body was permitted to dangle until seven minutes more had passed. Then another examination was made by County Physician McKenzie and his assistants. They pronounced life extinct. As a precaution, the body was kept in suspension for a full half hour.

It was reported that one of the physicians composing the sheriff's jury expressed the opinion that if he were given permission he would be able to resuscitate Banusik even after the body had been hanging thirty minutes. None of the medical men present would admit that he expressed such an opinion when inquiry was made later.

Banusik manifested no sign of weakness either in his cell or during the short route to the scaffold. He was not permitted to speak after he was placed in position with the noose around his neck, and Van Hise sprung the trap while Father Ivarnow was still on his knees praying. The priest motioned to the hangman to wait until he finished his prayer, but when Van Hise's assistant seemed willing to grant the brief extension of time, the chief executioner stepped quickly to the side of the scaffold and released the drop. Officially the execution was conducted under the direction of Under Sheriff Charles M. Mason.

Banusik's crime was the result of his infatuation for the wife of Hoff, with whom he boarded in Bloomfield. One Sunday, Banusik induced Hoff to accompany him to a saloon in Newark and there got his victim drunk. On their way home the two men, Hoff helplessly intoxicated, went on the track of the Greenwood Lake branch of the Erie Railroad. Then Banusik knocked Hoff senseless with a blow from a metal mallet. He placed the body of his victim across the railroad tracks and a freight train passed over it. The death was at first officially declared to be the result of an accident, but Banusik couldn't keep his tongue still. He bragged that he had killed Hoff and his arrest followed.

BENEFIT PERFORMANCE FOR SOMERVILLE CLUB.

Dramatic Entertainment to Assist in Getting Funds for Baseball Nine.

Somerville society turned out in great numbers last night to attend the benefit performance for the West End Athletic Association. Local talent held down the boards and gave a very fine entertainment. The great advance demand for seats augured well for the success of the affair. Two short plays were presented, "Noah's Ark, Jr.," and "The Boston Dip." Those who took the various parts were: Miss Bess Lindquist, Miss Eva Terry, H. W. Reusswig, Clarence E. Case, Judson Galpin, Miss Mary Menner, Robert L. Day, Jr., Miss Anna VanderVeer, Miss Jessamine Burd, Louis Noll, Jr., and Philip Gasell. Between the acts Captain "Jack" Norton, of the West Ends, recited with dramatic effect.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the introduction to the public of the Somerville Mandolin Orchestra. This is a new organization and consists of the following talent: Director and pianist, Miss Amelia Porter; violins, Mrs. H. W. Reusswig and Frank Gunston; first mandolins, Miss Wink, Clark Kellam and W. S. Negus; second mandolins, Miss Martha Whitenack and Arthur V. DeHart; guitar, Miss Whitenack.

The West Ends expect to place a very strong nine in the field the coming season and have succeeded in securing Bogart T. Conklin, who was so popular in the management of the team last year, to again take charge of affairs. Very few players have signed as yet, but there is plenty of promising material in sight.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis having recovered from an attack of the grip, will preach at the Seventh-Day Baptist church tomorrow morning.

Girl Burned to Death.

New York, Feb. 8.—Miss Helen Carpenter, twenty years old, of No. 1,290 Nostrand avenue, died last night in the Kings County Hospital from the effects of burns received yesterday morning as she was preparing to go to business. Eefforts to save the young woman's life were made by her mother and younger sister, and before they could smother the flames they wereb urned painfully about the hands and arms. Failing in her efforts to check the flames which quickly enveloped the victim, Mrs. Carpenter, regardless of her own danger, picked her up and carried her to a bathromm near by. Placing the unconscious young woman in the bathtub, the mother finally extinguished the blaze. Miss Carpenter was in her room adjusting her hat when the edge of her skirt came in contact with the flame of a small gas stove. She failed in her attempts to tear off the buring garment, and her body was enveloped in the blaze when the mother and sister answered her cries for help.

TESTIMONIAL DINNER FOR A COUNTY LEADER

HIS NAME NOT DIVULGED BUT ALL THE BIG GUNS WILL BE THERE.

A testimonial dinner, to be given in honor of one of Union County's Republican leaders, whose name has not as yet been divulged, will take place at Gebhardt's place, Elizabeth, tonight. The name of the person, for whom the dinner will be given is being withheld by the committee of arrangements because of the fact that the members of the committee want to "spring a surpise upon their honored guest."

That the affair is one of a political nature may be learned by glacing over the list of the invited guests, which includes nearly every politician of any prominence in Union county. Assemblymen Perkins, Moxon and Tillman will attend as will also County Clerk James C. Calvert, Colonel Dennis F. Collins, former Sheriff Coriell, Judge C. Addison Swife, Director of the Board of Freeholders Benjamin King and Surrogate George Parrott.

There will be some good addresses made. Music for the occasion will be by Harry Wetton. The complete list of the invited guests, most of whom have signified their willingness to attend, is:

E. B. Allen, E. K. Adams, Amos Andrews, John Banker, Edward Bauser, J. L. Bauer, W. A. Bembridge, Alex Boyd, Herbert Buxton, J. F. Buckle, Halsey R. Brant, J. F. ahill, James C. Poison Frightens Woman to Death.

New York, Feb. 8.—Believing she had been fatally poisoned by taking a few drops of a weak solution of carbolic acid by mistake, Mrs. Annie Hennessey, of No. 1,970 Second avenue, died of fright last night. Efforts of a physician to reassure her failed, and she suffered all the symptoms that would have resulted from an actual dose of the drug. When Dr. Schiff arrived from the Harlem Hospital he found that the woman had swallowed only a few drops of the acid and that the solution was so weak that it could have no serious effect. He told her she was in no danger, but she refused to be calmed and lay writing with imagined pain. Antidotes failed to relieve her, and she died in agony.

Beneficent Rarebit Dream.

New York, Feb. 8.—For the rest of his life Policeman Henry Greer, of No. 774 East 163d street, will revere Welsh rarebits, for the dream caused by one last Wednesday night, he thinks, save his life. Some time after eating the rarebit and going to bed he dreamed he was seated in a dentists' chair and the dentist was pulling a refractory tooth. He dreamed that he was taking gas, but that it choked him and did not east the pain. The choking awoke him and he found that gas was pouring from an open jet over the bed.

LECTURE BY PRESIDENT OF BEREA COLLEGE AT G. H. FROST'S HOME.

How the mountaineers of Kentucky live, and what manner of people they are, was told by one who knows them intimately in a lecture at the home of G. H. Frost, Watchung avenue, last night, by Rev. Dr. William Goodell Frost, president of Berea College. Berea College lies in the heart of the Kentucky mountainers' country, and the institution is dedicated to the advancement of the strange, backward people of that section.

The lecture was an invitation affair. It was arranged at the request of President Frost, who knew that Ralph Dalzell Schoonmaker, of this city, was engaged in work among the mountain whites in North Carolina, and inferred that an audience with more than ordinary interest in such work might be gathered here. President Frost is related to G. H. Frost, and asked him to gather an interested group of people. About sixty attended the lecture.

Dr. Frost spoke with entertaining directness and anecdotal charm. He told of the feuds, the moonshining, and the ways of life in the mountain country. The people were of the sixteenth century, he said, and inheritors of undiluted Americanism. Shut off from railroads, telegraph and the other growths of progress, they retained the primitive habits and thoughts—even the speech—of the earliest settlers. They had very little literature, handing down traditions of their kind and of the activities of past years by word of mouth.

They were not, the lecturer declared emphatically, a degraded people; merely ungraded, undeveloped. They were splendid soil for the seed of uplift, and it was the aim and the effort of Berea College to sow and nurture that seed. The possibilities that lay in the mountaineers was shown by the life of Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln, the lecturere said, came from the Kentucky mountain district, and his was the strain that was to be found in the average mountainer.

A social hour followed the lecture. Mr. Frost showed a number of photographs of the mountain folk. Refreshments were served.

HORSES FALL SIXTY FEET DOWN TO SNOW CUSHION.

$500 Team Not Even Bruised By Their Mad Plunge From Hook Mountain.

Aaron Canfield's team of horses, worth $500, plunged down the sixty-foot precipice on the side of Hook Mountain, near Pine Brook, yesterday. They fell in a tremendous snowdrift which the wind had piled full thirty feet deep at the bottom of the bluff. Canfield dug them out after three hours' hard work. Naturally, the horses were stiff and shivering, but Canfield could not find that they were even bruised. The tremendous fleecy pillow that received them prevented injury to them.

Canfield was hauling logs from a wood lot on the mountain. He had unhitched the horses from his wood sled and was about to hitch them to a log to haul it where he could load it. An ice-laden limb snapped, and, falling from the tree, struck the horses' backs.

Scared, they made a leap that tore the reins from Canfield's grasp. Blindly they ran toward the precipice, 100 feet away, its edge swept bare of snow by the winter's blasts. Over the edge they sprang. Canfield, peering down, expected to see their mangled bodies. Instead, he saw them buried in the great drift, which was soon packed hard under them by their weight and their struggles. Canfield got a shovel, went to a place where he could climb down safely and finally extricated the team.

ALLOW CLAIM FOR INJURIES.

Union and Somerset Freeholders Vote to Give William Taylor $35.

The long drawn out contest between William Taylor, of Bound Brook, and the Union and Somerset county Board of Freeholders, in which he sought to recover for injuries to his horse as the result of falling in a hole on the Washington avenue bridge, has been settled. At a meeting of the Union County Board at Elizabeth, yesterday, it was voted to allow Taylor $17.50, the understanding being that Somerset county is to do the same, making a total of $35 for the injuries to the horse.

The board received a report on jail inspection and it was noted that the jail at Elizabeth was reported to be the cleanest and best kept of any in the State. The rest of the meeting was occupied with routine matters.

Jersey City's Lawyers' Pay Increased.

Jersey City, Feb. 8.—Mayor Mark M. Fagan, of this city, has notified the Board of Finance that he has fixed the salary of Corporation Counsel George L. Record at $6,000 a year, an increase of $1,000, and of Corporation Attorney Robert Carey at $4,000, an increase of $500. The Mayor has the p ower, under the statutes, to fix the salaries of these two members of the city's law department.

"MASTERS OF FATE."

Subject of Address Given Before Borough High School Pupils.

Principal I. W. Travell, of the city High School, gave an address before the pupils of the borough High School this moning, on "The Masters of Fate."

It dealt for the most part with a review of men and women who had contended against meagre means and poor health in their struggle for success and had won in the end. He mentioned Julius Caesar, Alfred the Great, Prescott, the historian, Helen Keller, Charles Darwin and Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Travell spoke of the fact that it was a coincidence that Darwin and Lincoln were born on the same day.

$5,000 For Husband's Death.

A jury in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, before Justice Clark Wednesday returned a verdict of $5,000 in favor of Mrs. Allie Anderson in a suit against Edward and Foster Milliken, contractors. Mrs. Anderson's husband, who was employed by the defendants on a building they were erecting at Corlears and South streets, Manhattan, was killed by a fall from a scaffolding. Plaintiff claimed that the scaffolding was improperly protected.

OLDEST PRISON TO GO

SITUATED AT SANTA FE, N. M., AND WILL BE TORN DOWN.

Its History Is Lost in the Dim Past —Walls of Sun-Dried Brick Four Feet Thick—The Adobe Roof.

Kansas City, Mo.—The old Spanish prison in Santa Fe, N. M., one of the most ancient and historic buildings in the City of the Holy Faith, with the exception of San Miguel church, is to be razed and in its place will be erected a modern jail building of vitrified brick, steel cages and steam heat. The county commissioners have let the contract for tearing down and disposing of the old prison, and work has already begun upon the new structure. The half dozen prisoners now in the jail will be guarded elsewhere until the new structure is completed.

It is impossible to secure data on the old prison. It has stood as long as the oldest inhabitant can remember and looked nearly 200 years ago as it does to-day. The building has been remodeled a dozen times, but the cells and massive doors have never been changed. The old prison is of adobe entirely. Its walls are of sun-dried brick four feet in thickness. The roof, which is of adobe, laid over massive pine logs roughly hewn into shape with an ax, is also several feet thick. The cells are dirty, dark and unfurnished except for piles of straw covered with old blankets, or rickety cots upon which prisoners are expected to sleep. Earth, hardened and worn by the tread of many feet, is the only floor. In the walls of the cells are still fastened the great, hand-wrought chains and cuffs with which prisoners at one time were made fast. The cell doors are of iron beaten and welded into bars by hand. They have resisted mob violence in times gone by. The old prison was originally constructed about a placita or little yard, the buildings forming three sides and a high adobe wall the fourth. In recent years, however, the buildings on one side of the placita crumbled into ruins and the remainder on the opposite side were used as stables for the sheriff's horses, leaving only the main cellhouse as a prison. In the center of the placita back of the prison was an old scaffold, which rattled and swayed in the wind. Upon it many an early day "bad man" paid for his crimes with his life. The method of execution was rough. After the knot was placed about the neck, the executioner kicked a prop from beneath the trap on which the prisoner stood.

The books of the prison have been lost, only a few in recent years having been preserved. They are written principally in Spanish and give little information.

The agitation for a new prison began about six months ago when a portion of the roof over one cell fell in. The following night a prisoner made his escape, leaving a note in which he said that he did not want to run away, believing that he would be acquitted when brought to trial, but that he deemed it foolhardy to remain longer in such a death trap. The publication of the letter called the attention of the people to the old prison. They had long forgotten it, considering it only one of the many relics of other days.

LABOR CHEAP IN BELGIUM.

Thirteen Hours of Hard Work Poorly Recompensed.

The hours of labor in Belgium are very long, says Daily Consular and Trade Reports. The laborer begins work at six a. m., and ceases work at seven p. m., with the usual breaks for meals. He is paid on the average of seven cents to nine cents an hour for ten hours, and 25 per cent. more for two additional hours, making his daily wage 84 cents to $1.08 for 12 hours. Children begin their life work as early as 12 years of age, though the law compassionately states that no child under 16 years of age shall be kept at work for more than 12 hours a day. A Belgian statistician estimates the average earnings of an artisan, child labor being included in his calculation, at about $160 a year. Numerous factories have been established there by British firms owing to the very low rate at which labor can be secured.

Japan's Cotton Manufactures.

Japan is making notable progress in the manufacture of cotton goods. New factories are being projected and established mills enlarged. It is predicted that between 50,000 and 100,000 new spindles will be installed during 1907. It appears that there is a prejudice among Japanese mill managers against American textile machinery and that nearly all such machinery is purchased in England. Japan will, in the not remote future, undoubtedly have a very large share of the Asiatic market for cotton goods.

FORTUNES IN SABLE SKINS.

With Skins at $450 Each, Prices Soar Into Thousands.

The two most expensive Sable coats in the world are worn by the empress of Russia and Queen Maud of Norway.

The empress' coat is made from pure sables, the best which could be obtained in Europe, and is valued by an expert in furs at something between $250,000 and $400,000, while that which Queen Maud wears would be worth nearly half as much.

The manager of a London firm said that within the last two years the price of sable had increased by 75 per cent., and was still going up.

"The price is practically prohibitive," he said, "and we have to find a substitute in top Russian sable, smart sets of which cost as much as $1,000. If the same were made in real sable the price would be about $7,500 or more.

"There is as much gambling in sables as there is on the stock exchange. The furriers have all sold out, and the demand is still great. People are now beginning to pass sables down as heirlooms—and valuable they are, too, at $450 a skin."

WAS WILLING TO PAY.

Judge Lawrence Evidently Appreciated His Own Importance.

During his early days as a public speaker, and while he was yet judge of a district court, Congressman George P. Lawrence was invited to make one of his first public addresses before a large body—the board of trade and invited guests. The event was one which brought together all of the principal business and professional men of the section, and plates were $2 each.

On the night of the banquet the judge appeared at the door, and the ticket seller, not noticing who it was that tendered a $2 bill for a ticket, handed Mr. Lawrence one, and pocketed the money. Then he recognized him and said, with an apology, that it was not necessary for him to pay to enter.

The judge threw out his chest and remarked with dignity:

"I will have you understand sir, that I am willing to pay $2 any time to hear Judge Lawrence speak."

And he didn't take back his money.

Sermons by Time.

"I have attended church in a good many different places,' said the southern man, "but I had to come to New York to see a man preach holding his watch in his hand. Down in our part of the country the pulpit orator is usually long-winded. He has a certain subject in mind and has certain things to say concerning it, and he holds forth until he has said them all if it takes till bedtime to do it.

"Up here the time that can be devoted to the delivery of a sermon appears to be limited. In order not to overstep the bounds several clergymen that I have heard talked literally by the watch. They did not lay it down or stick it into a convenient pocket to be consulted occasionally, but held it out face up as a constant reminder that time was fleeting and that other pressing engagements awaited them. That may be an excellent preventive of weariness in the congregation, but I must say it makes me uncomfortable to have spiritual advice measured by the minute and second."—N. Y. Press.

Not the Kind He Wanted.

Professed politicians who have reduced public office to an exact science find the independent voter a sad stumbling block—a fact which is amusingly disclosed by a story found in the recent life of the late George Monro Grant, the eminent Canadian educator and and clergyman, says the Youth's Companion.

Toward the end of Sir John Macdonald's life he and Principal Grant, then the head of Queen's college, met at dinner at the house of the premier's brother-in-law, Prof. Williamson.

"How I wish," the premier said to the principal, "that you would be a steady friend of mine."

"My dear Sir John," the principal replied, "I have always supported you when you were right."

The premier's eyes twinkled, and he laid his hand upon the shoulder of the principal.

"My dear man," said he, "I have no use for that species of friendship!"

Priest Too Studious.

When Rev. Fr. Coyle assumed charge of St. Mary's church in Boston a gentleman of the city, who had an employe, a very devout Catholic, inquired of him how he liked his new pastor.

"Why, sir, I like him pretty well."

"Pretty well! Why, what fault have you to find with him?"

"To tell the truth, sir, I should have preferred a man who had finished his education; for several times when I have waited upon him I have been told that he was at his studies."

Not Enough.

A case was to be tried on the charge of selling impure whisky. The night before the case came off the defendant went round to the judge's house.

To the man at the door he said: "Here's a bottle of whisky, I want your master to try."

"My master never tries anything but a case," pompously replied the butler. —Lippincott's.

THE fulfillment of all smokers' desires has been attained in Mecca Cigarettes. You'll realize this when you consider their price—the lowest at which a good cigarette has ever been offered; when you examine their full oval shape, and their fine workmanship.

MECCA Cigarettes

But the real surprise is their quality. If Mecca Cigarettes haven't the quality of expensive brands they surely have the nearest approach to them ever given in a moderate price cigarette. Their oriental fragrance is pleasantly mild, and exceptionally satisfying — the greatest value ever offered.

A WORD ABOUT VEILS.

Time was when veils were worn for their comfort during the blustery season when King Frost is no respecter of persons, and chisels little furrows into the softest and daintiest complexions, but the veil we see is just a little cloud of beauty, and really serves no purpose other than to give atouch of daintiness to one's appearance. In Paris they are wearing the loudest veils, large blue affairs, yards and yards of pink cobwebs, all fastened with monstrous gold and bejeweled pins. True, they are ruined by the elements, and they are just as expensive as they dare be, but just the same they are too beautiful to cast aside, and women are wearing them with heavy plumaged hats, furs and other winter trappings. Just at present the colored veils (but by no means expensive ones) are being worn by the fashion followers on this side, and it is often one sees a purple veil worn with a blue hat, a blue with a black hat, and some dainty little affairs with large picture hats. The soft crepe scarf comes in line with the veils, and is really the most serviceable one to be seen. It covers the ears, gracefully entwines around the neck, and ties in a neat bow beneath the chin. Some women wear them gracefully; others have yet to learn how they should be artistically arranged to give the best effect.

FOR BROKEN-DOWN HORSES.

Red Acre Farm a Home Founded by a Young Woman.

One of the most notable of the semi-private humane establishments for the rescue of broken-down horses is known as Red Acre Farm, a charitable home for horses opened on May 8, 1903, at Stow, Mass., says Home Magazine. The farm is situated 23 miles from Boston, and consists of 87 acres of land, divided up into pasture land and paddocks, with a portion of it devoted to stables, office and hospital. Red Acre Farm was founded by a young woman, Miss H. C. Bird, who gave up to the use of the horse the home and grounds which she inherited from her father, and who devotes all her time and strength to succoring the horse. She daily oversees the conditions at the home and has the advice and support of well known humanitarians.

The farm is kept up by contributions and the board of pensioners or horses put out to pasture during the summer by owners who want good care taken of them while out of town. Members of Red Acre Farm also pay a small annual fee of $5, and philanthropists can endow a stall in the stables of Red Acre Farm for $100, which the donor can keep filled by horses of his own choosing all the time. None of the active officers accept salaries, and all money coming into the farm is expended for the object of its inception.

ONE POINT HE MISSED.

Lawyer Willing to Admit Error Pointed Out By Judge.

The following amusing incident occurred at the Suffolk probate court at Boston, over which the venerable Judge McKim still presides.

The judge enjoys the reputation of being most careful, precise and exacting, and it is doubtful if ever an error, clerical, or otherwise, escapes his watchful eye.

In a recent matter brought to his attention, the judge perceived that in signing an informal and unimportant paper, the attorney had failed to dot an "i" in signing his name, and addressed him as follows:

"I see, Mr. Wright, that you have not dotted the 'i' in your name, and consequently you have not signed your name right," and the judge genially smiled.

"Your honor," replied the attorney, he, too, smiling, "this is evidently a point which escaped me."

Her Literary Likes.

They had just met; conversation was somewhat fitful. Finally he decided to guide it into literary channels, where he was more at home, and, turning to his companion, asked, "Are you fond of literature?"

"Passionately," she replied. "I love books dearly."

"Then you must admire Sir Walter Scott," he exclaimed with sudden animation. "Is not his 'Lady of the Lake' exquisite in its flowing grace and poetic imagery? Is it not—" "It is perfectly lovely," she assented, clasping her hands in ecstacy. "I suppose I have read it a dozen times."

"And Scott's 'Marmion,'" he continued, "with its rugged simplicity and Scottish characters and his graphic, forceful pictures of feudal times and customs?" "I just dote on them," she replied.

"And Scott's Emulsion," he continued, a faint suspicion beginning to dawn upon him.

"I think," she interrupted rashly, "that it is the best thing he ever wrote."—Montreal Herald.

The Paper Dollar Habit.

The paper dollar habit is making way slowly in the west. For years there were hardly any $1 bills in circulation west of the Mississippi. It was all silver dollars out here, and the paper dollars were circulated "back east." Now the paper dollars are taking the place of the silver dollars out here. And the people like the change.

"Can't you give me paper?" is a question the cashier of a cafe says he hears many times a day. "And I can," he continued, "because so many persons offer paper money in paying their bills. Why, I take in enough during the week to paper a flat. I carry an armful to the bank every day. Persons like paper money because it is easy to carry and doesn't wear holes through pockets."

The Heart Was Secure.

Not long ago a fond and rather romantically inclined father was approached by a young man, whose intention was to ask the parent's consent to the marriage of himself and the other's daughter.

After considerable stammering and confusion, the older man grasped the other's meaning and beamed benevolently upon him. He rose and placed one hand upon the youth's shoulder in a kindly way.

"So, so. Yes, after all, I guess my little girl is grown up, and must have a mate," he said. "Tell me frankly, young man, is it her heart or her money that you are after?"

The young fellow blushed painfully, but with a thrill of pride, threw out his chest and answered, "I already have her heart in my keeping, sir!"

FOR THE GENTLER SEX

THE DAINTY GIRL AND HER SURROUNDINGS.

So delicate and elusive a quality as daintiness cannot be taught with the alphabet and rule of three, yet it should be lived. It is claimed that daintiness is a woman's most dangerous attraction, and that the dainty maiden with ordinary looks wins hearts where careless beauty fails. Why, then, does not girlhood oftener cultivate this altogether desirable charm, instead of sighing over a Roman nose that should be Grecian?

Look around you as you ride in the street cars; is not girl in fifty dainty? Not one in a hundred; not one in fifty is perfectly neat, and but a small number are even clean and wholesome looking. To be clean is not to be dainty; buttons off, placket gaping, skirt and waist divorced—even absolute cleanliness does not atone for these.

Neatness is not daintiness. Then is daintiness equivalent to taste? Hardly; daintiness is none of these, and yet embraces them all—taste—neatness—and cleanliness.

The girl who would be dainty perhaps had better take a peep into her room. Are your shoes peeping from under a carelessly made bed? Are the curtains white and fresh-looking? Is your dresser scarf soiled and littered? Are the drawers partly open, revealing confusion within, and are there any little threads of hair attached to the carpet or floor covering? Perhaps not the whole list, but a few or one.

Don't scurry everything to rights in a sudden resolution. Leave things just as you find them. It will not last—wholesale resolutions never do.

Leave the room alone, then, as a room, but turn your attention to the top of your dresser. Remove the cloth if it be soiled ever so little. If you haven't a dainty one—make it. Make two or three, and watch them as a miser watches over his gold. If a tiny smut appears, send them to the washtub. But leave everything else alone—strictly alone.

You have heard the story of the washerwoman who was given the pot of hyachinth? She set it in the window and immediately noticed that the glass was dirty. She washed the glass and sill looked doubly grimly; the sill washed, the floor was offensive; and so on until the sloven window became a model of neatness.

WINTER PLANTS AND THEIR CARE.

Be sure that plants in hanging pots and baskets get all the water they need. Because they are near the ceiling, where the temperature is much higher than at the window sill, they will dry out much more rapidly than ordinary plants. They are also exposed on all sides, and this accelerates evaporation. I have a method of keeping these plants well watered which works well. I take a small can or cup and punch holes in the bottom of it. Make these small at first, until you know just how much water is needed. Fill these vessels and place them on the surface of the soil. Vines can be so trained as to hide them. Observe the effect carefully. If not enough water passes through to keep the soil moist, you will know that larger holes are necessary. This matter can be regulated to a nicety, with a little experimenting. Fill the cup each morning. A treatment of this kind will enable any one to grow fine hanging plants.

Do not overwater plants at this season of the year. Give just enough to keep the soil moist throughout. Let the surface take on a dry look before more water is applied. Evaparation takes place slowly, and few plants are growing actively enough to make use of a great deal of water. An oversupply has a tendency to sour the soil, thus bringing about a diseased condition of the roots.

And be very careful about the use of fertilizers. If a plant is not growing, it needs no fertilizer, because it is not in a condition to make use of it. Make this a rule and never vary from it: Fertilize only plants which are already in or have begun active growth. To feed a dormant plant strong, rich food is to injure it just as surely as food of that sort will injure a stomach whose digestive organs are not in proper shape to assimilate it.

If a plant has begun to grow, a weak application is in order. Let it increase in strength as the plant develops. Never use enough to force a rapid growth, for that means weakness from which there is almost sure to be a reaction sooner or later.

Do not let the plants in the window-garden become one-sided by being drawn toward the light. Turn them about, at least once a week, that all sides of them may have an equal chance at the sunshine. It is a good plan to arrange the smaller ones at the sides and rear. This enables all of them to get the benefit of the light, as they would not if the larger ones were given places near the glass, with the smaller ones tucked into the shady places between.—Exchange.

TO TRIM THE NEW BLOUSE.

When white blouses are worn with colored skirts, bretelles like the skirt continue in high vogue. With a girlish plaid wool skirt, the bretelles are of the plaid with quite deep and full sleeve caps of the wool falling over the tops of the arms. Two tailory straps ended with buttons connect the bretelles across the front of the waist. The girdle is shaped and has buttons at the front. Plaid ribbons make up similar arrangements.

A black bretelle girdle has three straps of two-and-a-half-inch ribbon, the first two nearest the front being connected at intervals of two inches by narrow velvet straps and tapering in together at the waist line. The third strap comes over the armhole and stops there. There is joined by the same little straps to the band next to it. The girdle closes at the front with a cut steele buckle and ends in short tabs made up of double loops of unequal lengths.

IN CASE OF CROUP.

When a doctor cannot be secured promptly in an emergency it is necessary to have a good remedy always on hand when children are inclined to be croupy.

A mother who will provide herself with half a pint of raw linseed oil can fight the worst case of croup she may meet with.

It is said to be an unfailing remedy, and for quick results it beats anything else which can be given for that dread disease.

Half a teaspoonful is a dose, unless the child is choking very badly; then give a teaspoonful.

It acts two ways. In the first stage of croup, where there is not much mucus, it is loosened and carried off the bowels.

In the second stage is causes vomiting; but, unlike ipecac, it leaves no soreness of the throat as an after difficulty.

It is rarely necessary to give more than one dose, when the child will get relief and go to sleep again.

This simple remedy is one that is within the reach of every mother and one that can be kept on hand at all times, and while it is in the house the dread membranous croup need cause no terrors.

TWO SOUTHERN DISHES.

Creole Sweet Potatoes.

Boil three or four medium-sized sweet potatoes, pare and cut in pieces the size of a nutmeg. Put into a frying pan one-half cup brown sugar and one-quarter cup butter. Cook the potatoes in this mixture on the back of the stove till the whole is soft. Cook very slowly, shaking the spider occasionally to keep from burning. These potatoes are rich, but delicious, especially with game or poultry.

A Toad in a Hole.

Six ounces of flour, one pinnt of milk, three eggs, butter, a few slices of cold mutton, pepper and salt and one-half pound of kidney. Make a smooth batter of flour, milk and eggs in the above proportion. Butter a baking dish and pour in the batter. Into this place a few slices of cold mutton previously well seasoned and the kidney cut into very small pieces. Bake about an hour or rather longer and send it to the table in the dish it was baked in.

TO HOLD LUCK CHARMS.

Among other charming novelties which have found they way to the city as a result of the Christmas selling are little Oriental bags made of red brocade and fastened by ivory bars that are drawn together with silk cords. No, these trifles, light as they are—which incidentally are fit for a Chinese mandarin to give away as souvenirs—are not destined for wicked gamblers at bridge, nor can they be used for innocent candies—they serve the graceful purpose of holding a charm for a lucky new year. It may be a little black pig made of bog oak from Ireland, with jeweled eyes which keep one from going "broke," or it may be a tiny white ivory elephant, a lucky coin or whatever one happens to choose as a mascot.

17,000 DEATHS YEARLY.

"In New York city occur ten violent deaths a day, as a direct result of daily activities," is the statement of Arthur B. Reeve in his article on "Our Industrial Juggernaut" in the February Everybody's. In Chicago the number falls to six a day, according to Dr. Thomas Grant Allen. But the storm-centre of the country is Allegheny County, Pa., in which the city of Pittsburg is situated, combining steel, iron, and coal industries, mills, mines, railroads, and building operations. Over 17,000 deaths and injuries a year in all industries is the record for this single county.

"Conditions are such that the life of a foreigner employed in the mills is given less consideration than is the life of a horse or mule," says the coroner of Allegheny county. "During my first month in office I was astounded to find that within the thirty days twelve men were killed in one plant alone of the United States Steel Corporation." "If even the present laws were enforced," the Hungarian Consul has protested, "conditions would not be so bad."

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, who has been kept at his home during the past week with a severe attack of the grip, is much improved and hopes to be about the house soon.

Mrs. David H. Rowland, of West Seventh street, will give a reception tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock for her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Rufus Story Rowland. The reception will be followed in the evening by a dinner and dance for the young people.

PARKS TAKE A SLUMP; WESTFIELD CLUB GETS TWO.

None of the Boroughites in Exceptional Form in First and Second Games.

The Park Club bowling team took a slump last night at Westfield, where it just managed to win one game out of three from the Westfield Club in the Central Journal Bowling League tournament. Heretofore, the Parks have been bowling well and as a result hold first place.

In the first game the Parks were taken into camp by a score of 866 to 771, the local bowlers rolling far below the average. In the second game they picked up a little, but were defeated by a score of 935 to 809. Two successive defeats aroused their ire and in the last game they did the best work, winning by a score of 889 to 778. Barlow put up the high score for his team, a 205 in the last game, the next best score being rolled by Ball in the first game, when he put up good scores. The Parks still hold the lead in the tournament and are picked as winners of the cup. Last night's scores:

PARKS.

MACK AND MEYER WIN.

Take Two Out of Three in Only Bowling Games Rolled.

Mack and Meyer took two games out of the three from Woolston and Cunningham in the bowling tourney at McLaughlin's last night. Woolston was evidently affected by the cold and failed to warm up at any stage, in one game falling below a century mark.

These were the only games of the evening, illness preventing the appearance of the other contestants.

The scores:

Mack	159	177	188
Meyer	178	214	216
	337	391	404
Cunnningham	199	144	144

WATER INVESTIGATION.

Members of Commission Will Hold a Meeting Tonight.

The water investigation commission, which was appointed by Mayor Fisk several weeks ago, and which has already held one session to complete organization and decide upon a line of action, will meet tonight in the Mayor's office, when it is expected that reports will be received from the different committees. Owing to the illness of Mayor Fisk, he will be unable to attend the meeting, but otherwise it is expected that a majority of the members will be present.

It is understood that the committees have been very active since the organization was perfected and that much valuable information has been obtained through the investigation which has been conducted along specific lines planned by the members.

Village Warbles.

Another successful musical entertainment was held at St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal church parish house last night. The programme in large one, tried to law down in the lage Warblers," who numbered thirty-five, mandolin duets by the Misses Edith and Emily Lacey, recitations by Mrs. Herbert Guinn, Charles Shoemaker, Herbert Dobbs, and readings by Miss Edna Willis. Ice cream and dancing were enjoyed after the entertainment.

Wings and Flies

By Tom Muir.

The reigning Charles Klein drama "The Lion and the Mouse" presented in this city early in the season, is to return to Plainfield next month. The play has been presented in New York over 500 consecutive nights and is still running at the Lyceum theatre.

Blanche Walsh, now acknowledged to be the greatest emotional actress on the American stage, will soon be seen in this city, having made another enormous hit at the Astor theatre in New York, and being forced to close her run, because of previous existing contracts. She is to make a brief tour of the northwest, taking in some of the eastern cities on her way. She will be seen in Clyde Fitch's newest play, "The Straight Road," which metropolitan critics have hailed as a play vivid with goodness rather than intellectual smartness. The company and production will be identical as seen during the Broadway run.

Among the prominent actors supporting Wilton Lackaye in "The Law and the Man" is Melbourne McDowell, who was formerly a resident of South River. Mr. McDowell is well-known as the husband of the late Fanny Davenport and has been for years one of the brightest stars in the theatrical firmanent.

The role he assumes in "The Law and the Man" is that of Javert, the Police Inspector, and gives him opportunity to amply display his wonderful histrionic talent.

Among the supporting company are no less than five other men and women who has won stellar distinction. No expense has been spared to make theis one of the most notable "casts" that ever assembled, both in talent and mounting.

As the production comes to the New Plainfield theatre direct from its long run at the Manhattan theatre, New York, the patrons of the best in drama are assured of a first class production in every way. The critics have united in saying that the play is the best of the present season and the acting of Mr. Lackaye and his associates of such a high character that one who has seen it must remember the mos trivial detail long after.

A particular feature of this play is the interest it has aroused among churchmen, many prominent divines being numbered among its most sincere admirers. Great interest is being taken in the appearance of Mr. Lackaye and company here next Tuesday evening.

LEIGHTON CALKINS PRESIDENT.

Chosen As the Head of the New Jersey State Golf Association.

Leighton Calkins, of this city, has received additional honors in the golf world. Besides being elected an officer of the Plainfield Country Club, on Monday night, he was chosen president of the New Jersey State Golf Association at the annual meeting in New York. He will announce the members of the executive committee later.

June 6, 7 and 8 were the dates selected for the annual championship. The choice of links was left to the new executive committee. The treasurer's report showed a good balance. Mr. Calkins has served on the executive committee of the association since 1904.

Ready For Big Crowd.

The committee in charge of the Eagles' ball to be held in Saengerbund hall tonight, has made plans to entertain one of the largest dancing assemblages ever in the building. The grand march will be held at 10 o'clock and it is believed 200 couple will participate. Mr. and Mrs. William Waglow will lead it.

Joseph O. Osgood Reappointed.

The Borough Board of Health met last night, and adopted the new rules and regulations. Notice was received from Mayor Newton B. Smalley that he had reappointed Joseph O. Osgood as a member of the board for four years. No other business of importance was considered.

Under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Society of St. Joseph's church, of Bound Brook, a sociable will be held in Voorhees Hall, that place, Tuesday night.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS HEAR AN ALASKAN LECTURE

INTERESTING FACTS RELATED BY MEMBER OF GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

An illustrated lecture on Alaska was delivered before the students of the Plainfield High School this morning by Frank W. Stone, of the United States Geological Survey, who has spent the last five years in that territory. He graduated at Hamilton in the class of '99 with Lindsey Best, who is at the head of the scientific department in the High School.

Mr. Stone said that the popular idea of Alaska as a land abounding in snow and ice throughout the year, is a mistaken one. As Alaska is seven times the size of New Jersey, it has a varied climate, affording the production of fruits and flowers in the southern part during the summer months.

Speaking of the industries Mr. Stone dwelt at some length on the various methods of mining, washing dirt from gold being the most important. Basketry, he said, which is the mother of pottery, is also an important industry. The Standard Oil Company does an enormous business there, he declared. Oil is shipped in five gallon tin cans. As building material is scarce these empty cans are filled with shore sand and used as cement block, which serve the purpose almost as well. The roofs are covered with the cans flattened out.

The greatest pests in Alaska, he said, are mosquitoes, the Yukon flats being the greatest breeding place for them in the world. Men wear veils and gloves and cover their horses with suits made of blankets, as a protection against them. The full grown and healthy Jersey mosquito, declared the speaker, can be compared only with the infant mosquito of Alaska.

Mr. Stone said that a bunch of strange horses who are part in a pack train for the first time will invariably arrange themselves in the same order every day. Alaska, he said, is the "doggiest" country in the world. He has counted forty-two on a short and narrow street. They lounge about on the walks at their own sweet will and are never molested because they are the chief beasts of burden in that country.

RELATIVES TAKE CHARGE OF SUICIDE'S BODY

FRANKEN'S DEATH WILL NOT AFFECT THE LIVERY BUSINESS.

The New York relatives of Louis Franken, who committed suicide by hanging in his room at a North avenue boarding house yesterday, took charge of the body yesterday afternoon, and gave orders for the burial. The funeral will be held Sunday morning.

Service will be held at the rooms of Undertaker T. A. Moore, Watchung avenue. It was said at the undertaker's office this morning that a minister from out of town would probably be secured. The burial will be in the Jewish cemetery at Gatesville, near Bound Brook.

Franken's parents in Germany have been notified of the s uicide. It was said at the Cab Company's office this morning that the death would have no affect on the business. It will go on just the same. Franken's estate is said to be only the value of his interest in the livery business. His brothers in Germany are said to be wealthy.

MAKER OF DIAMONDS

M. MOISSAN AWARDED NOBEL PRIZE FOR CHEMISTRY.

Noted French Experimenter Also Invented the Electric Furnace—Was First Man to Discover Calcium Carbide.

London.—The manufacture of diamonds has been successfully performed by M. Henri Moissan, to whom the Nobel prize for chemistry was awarded the other day, but that is not his chief claim to fame. The electric furnace, which nowadays plays so large a part in industrial processes, owes more to him than to any other experimenter.

About the year 1878 M. Moissan was engaged in developing an electric furnace, which consisted in its simplest form of two blocks of lime or limestone, forming the body of the furnace, through which an arc was formed between carbon electrodes. The peculiarity of M. Moissan's furnace was that it was able to produce far greater temperatures than had previously been attained. As much as a hundred horsepower was used to concentrate its energy on a small charge, and in this way a temperature was reached only limited by the boiling point of carbon, which lies between 6,000 and 7,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

At this tremendous temperature, which is probably not far off that which exists in the sun's atmosphere, the most refractory metals are converted into vapor, and chemical changes or combinations are produced which are quite impossible at the comparatively low temperature of ordinary furnaces. The investigations of M. Moissan, which have been placed freely at the disposal of the world, unhampered by patents, have done more than those of any one else to advance the use of the electric furnace in the industries. He was, for instance, the first to discover that calcium carbide so largely used for the production of acetylene, that brilliant and convenient illuminant, could be cheaply produced in the electric furnace by the direct combination of lime and carbon; and the whole department of electro-chemistry, which has revolutionized so many industries and utilized so much water power that was previously running to waste, owes more to him than to any other of the numerous workers who have built it up in the last 20 years.

HENRI MOISSAN.
(French Chemical Investigator Awarded a Nobel Prize.)

The most interesting, though not the most industrially important, of the researches which M. Moissan has carried out in his electrical furnace is the manufacture of artificial diamonds. We have long known that the diamond is only a crystallized carbon. If we could melt carbon and allow it to cool slowly, there is no doubt that it would solidify into the brilliant crystals which we call diamonds. Unfortunately carbon cannot be melted at all under ordinary conditions. It is one of the few elements which pass directly from the solid to the gaseous condition—like iodine.

But there is another way of producing crystals. Instead of melting the substance which we desire to crystallize, it is sufficient to dissolve it and allow it to crystallize out of the solution by evaporating the latter. The crystals of barley sugar which are to be seen in every confectioner's window are thus produced. Molten iron happens to be a good solvent for carbon, which is usually set free when it cools in the form of graphite scales. M. Moissan, however, hit upon the brilliant idea of making the molten iron charged with carbon cool under great pressure. This pressure is easily obtained, by using the property which cast iron shares with water and a few other bodies, that it expands instead of contracting at the moment when it solidifies.

M. Moissan thus melted iron mixed with carbon in his electric furnace, at a temperature of about 7,000 degrees Fahrenheit, and then plunged it into water or molten lead. The sudden cooling solidified the outer skin of the ingot. The expansion of the inner part, still liquid, on solidifying within this hard skin, produced enormous pressure, and it was found that the carbon under this pressure actually crystallized into minute diamonds. The largest yet made is only about one-fiftieth of an inch in diameter, but they are genuine diamonds, and M. Moissan is thus the first and only diamond maker.

"Bricks without straw?" I asked, as we passed a radiant saloon that blazed upon the board walk.

"Beg pardon, sir, but such places are the ruin of men,"—on which remark I based a mental note that Bates wished to impress me with his own rectitude.

He swung beside me, answering questions with dogged brevity. Clearly, here was a man who had reduced human intercourse to a basis of necessity. I was to be shut up with him for a year, and he was not likely to prove a cheerful jailer. My feet struck upon a graveled highway at the end of the village street, and I heard suddenly the lapping of water.

"It's the lake, sir. This road leads right out to the house," Bates explained.

I was doomed to meditate pretty steadily, I imagined, on the beauty of the landscape in these parts, and I was rejoiced to know that it was not all cheerless prairie or gloomy woodland. The wind freshened and blew sharply upon us off the water.

"The fishing's quite good in season. Mr. Glenarm used to take a great pleasure in it. Bass,—yes, sir. Mr. Glenarm held there was nothing quite equal to a black bass."

I liked the way the fellow spoke of my grandfather. He was evidently a loyal retainer. No doubt he could summon from the past many pictures of my grandfather, and I determined to encourage his confidence.

Any resentment I felt on first hearing the terms of my grandfather's will had passed. He had treated me as well as I deserved, and the least I could do was to accept the penalty he had laid upon me in a sane and amiable spirit. This train of thought occupied me as we tramped along the highway. The road now led away from the lake and through a heavy wood. Presently, on the right loomed a dark barrier, and I put out my hand and touched a wall of rough stone that rose to a height of about eight feet.

"What is this, Bates?" I asked.

"This is Glenarm land, sir. The wall was one of your grandfather's ideas. It's a quarter of a mile long and cost him a pretty penny, I warrant you. The road turns off from the lake now, but the Glenarm property is all lake front."

So there was a wall about my prison house! I grinned cheerfully to myself. When, a few moments later, my guide paused at an arched gateway in the long wall, drew from his overcoat a bunch of keys and fumbled at the lock of an iron gate, I felt the spirit of adventure quicken within me.

The gate clicked behind us and Bates found a lantern and lighted it with the ease of custom.

"I use this gate because it's nearer. The regular entrance is farther down the road. Keep close, sir, as the timber isn't much cleared."

The undergrowth was indeed heavy, and I followed the lantern of my guide with difficulty. In darkness the place seemed as wild and rough as a tropical wilderness.

"Only a little farther," rose Bates' voice ahead of me; and then: "There's the light, sir,"—and, lifting my eyes, as I stumbled over the roots of a great tree, I saw for the first time the dark outlines of Glenarm House.

"Here we are, sir!" exclaimed Bates, stamping his feet upon a walk. I followed him to what I assumed to be the front door of the house, where a lamp shone brightly at either side of a massive entrance. Bates flung it open without ado, and I stepped quickly into a great hall that was lighted dimly by candles fastened into brackets on the walls.

"I hope you've not expected too much, Mr. Glenarm," said Bates, with a tone of mild apology. "It's very incomplete for living purposes."

"Well, we've got to make the best of it," I answered, though without much cheer. The sound of our steps echoed in the well of a great staircase. There was not, as far as I could see, a single article of furniture in the place.

"Here's something you'll like better, sir,"—and Bates paused far down the hall and opened a door.

A single candle made a little pool of light in what I felt to be a large room. I was prepared for a disclosure of barren ugliness, and waited, in heartsick foreboding, for the silent guide to reveal a dreary prison.

"Please sit here, sir," said Bates, "while I make a better light."

He moved through the dark room with perfect ease, struck a match, lighted a taper and went swiftly and softly about. He touched the taper to one candle after another,—they seemed to be everywhere,—and won from the dark a faint twilight that yielded slowly to a growing mellow splendor of light. I have often watched the acolytes in dim cathedrals of the Old World set countless candles ablaze on magnificent altars,—always with awe for the beauty of the spectacle; but in this unknown house the austere serving man summoned from the shadows a lovlier and more bewildering enchantment. Youth alone, of beautiful things, is loveller than light.

The lines of the wall receded as the light increased, and the rafters of the ceiling drew away, luring the eyes upward. I rose with a smothered exclamation on my lips and stared about, watching off my hat in reverence as the spirit of the place wove its spell about me. Everywhere there were books; they covered the walls to the ceiling, with only long French windows and an enormous fireplace breaking the line. Above the fireplace a massive dark oak chimney-breast further emphasized the grand scale of the room. From every conceivable place—from shelves built for the purpose, from brackets that thrust out long arms among the books, from a great crystal chandelier suspended from the ceiling, and from the breast of the chimney—innumerable candles blazed with dazzling brilliancy. I exclaimed in wonder and pleasure as Bates paused, his sorcerer's wand in hand.

"Mr. Glenarm was very fond of candle-light; he liked to gather up candlesticks, and his collection is very fine. He often called this 'The House of a Thousand Candles.' There's only about a hundred here; but it was one of his conceits that when the house was finished there would be a thousand lights. He had quite a joking way, your grandfather. It suited his humor to call it a thousand. He enjoyed his own pleasantries, sir."

"I fancy he did," I replied, staring in bewilderment.

"Oil lamps might be more suited to your own taste, sir. But your grandfather would not have them. Old brass and copper were specialties with him, and he had a particular taste, Mr. Glenarm had, in glass candle-sticks. He held that the crystal was most effective of all. I'll go and let in the baggageman and then serve you some supper."

He went somberly out and I examined the room with amazed and delighted eyes. It was 50 feet long and half as wide. The hard-wood floor was covered with handsome rugs; every piece of furniture was quaint or interesting. Carved in the heavy oak paneling above the fireplace, in large Old English letters, was the inscription:

The Spirit of Man is the Candle of the Lord and on either side great candelabra sent long arms across the hearth. All the books seemed related to architecture; German and French works stood side by side among those by English and American authorities. I found archaeology represented in a division where all the titles were Latin or Italian. I opened several cabinets that contained sketches and drawings, all in careful order; and in another I found an elaborate card catalogue, evidently the work of a practiced hand. The minute examination was too much for me; I threw myself into a great chair that might have been spoil from a cathedral, satisfied to enjoy the general effect. To find an apartment so handsome and so marked by good taste in the midst of an Indiana wood staggered me. I was so lost in contemplation that I did not hear a door open behind me. The respectful, mournful voice of Bates announced:

"There's a bite ready for you, sir."

I followed him through the hall to a small high-wainscoted room where a table was simply set.

"This is what Mr. Glenarm called the refectory. He took his own meals here. The library was the main thing with him. He never lived to finish the house,—more's the pity, sir. He would have made something very handsome of it if he'd had a few years more. But he hoped, sir, that you'd see it completed. The work was near his heart, sir."

"Yes, to be sure," I replied.

He brought cold fowl and a salad, and produced a bit of Stilton of unmistakable authenticity.

"I trust the ale is cooled to your liking. It's your grandfather's favorite, if I may say it, sir."

I liked the fellow's humility. He served me with a grave deference and an accustomed hand. Candles in crystal holders shed an agreeable light upon the table; the room was snug and comfortable, and hickory logs in a small fireplace crackled cheerily. If my grandfather had designed to punish me, with loneliness as his weapon, his shade, if it lurked near me, must have been grievously disappointed. I had often eaten my bread alone, and I found a pleasure in the quiet of the strange, unknown house. There stole over me, too, the satisfaction that I was at last obeying a wish of my grandfather's; that I was doing something he would have me do. I was touched by the traces everywhere of his interest in what was to him the art of arts; there was something quite fine in his devotion to it. The little refectory had its air of distinction, though it was without decoration. There had been, we always said in the family, something whimsical or even morbid in my grandsire's devotion to architecture; but I felt that it had really appealed to something dignified and noble in his own mind and character, and a gentler mood than I had known in years possessed my heart. He had asked little of me, and I determined that in that little I would not fail.

I Liked the Fellow's Humility. He Served With Great Deference.

Bates gave me my coffee, put matches within reach and left the room. I drew out my cigarette case and held it half-opened in my hand, when the glass in the window back of me cracked sharply, a bullet whistled over my head, struck the opposite wall and fell, flattened and marred on the table under my hand.

CHAPTER IV.

A Voice from the Lake.

I ran to the window and peered out into the night. The wood through which we had approached the house seemed to encompass it. The branches of a great tree brushed the panes. I was tugging at the fastening of the window when I became aware of Bates at my elbow.

"Did something happen, sir?"

His unbroken calm angered me. Some one had fired at me through a window and I had narrowly escaped being shot. I resented the unconcern with which this servant accepted the situation.

"Nothing worth mentioning. Somebody tried to assassinate me, that's all," I said, in a voice that failed to be calmly ironical. I was still fumbling at the catch of the window.

"Allow me, sir,"—and he threw up the sash with an ease that increased my irritation.

I leaned out and tried to find some clue to my assailant. Bates opened another window and surveyed the dark landscape with me.

"It was a shot from without, was it, sir?"

"Of course it was; you didn't suppose I shot at myself, did you?"

He examined the broken pane and picked up the bullet from the table.

"It's a rifle ball, I should say."

The bullet was half-flattened by its contact with the wall. It was a cartridge ball of large caliber that might have been fired from either rifle or pistol.

"It's very unusual, sir!" I wheeled upon him angrily and found him fumbling with the bit of metal, a troubled look on his face. He at once continued, as though anxious to allay my fears. "Quite accidental, most likely. Probably boys on the lake are shooting at ducks."

I laughed out so suddenly that Bates started back in alarm.

"You idiot!" I roared, seizing him by the collar with both hands and shaking him fiercely. "You fool, do the people around here shoot ducks at night? Do they shoot water-fowl with elephant guns and fire at people through windows just for fun?"

I threw him back against the table so that it leaped away from him, and he fell prone on the floor.

"Get up!" I commanded, "and fetch a lantern."

He said nothing but did as I bade him. We traversed the long, cheerless hall to the front door, and I sent him before me into the woodland. My notions of the geography of the region were the vaguest, but I wished to examine for myself the premises, that evidently contained a dangerous prowler. I was very angry and my rage increased as I followed Bates, who had suddenly retired within himself. We stood soon beneath the lights of the refectory window.

The ground was covered with leaves which broke crisply under our feet.

"What lies beyond here?" I demanded.

"About a quarter of mile of woods, sir, and then the lake."

"Go ahead," I ordered, "straight to the lake."

I was soon stumbling through rough underbrush similar to that through which we had approached the house. Bates swung along confidently enough ahead of me, pausing occasionally to hold back the branches. I began to feel, as my rage abated, that I had set out on a foolish undertaking. I was utterly at sea as to the character of the grounds; I was following a man whom I had not seen until two hours before, and whom I began to suspect of all manner of designs upon me. It was wholly unlikely that the person who had fired into the windows would lurk about, and, moreover, the light of the lantern, the crackle of the leaves and the breaking of the boughs advertised our approach loudly.

A bush slapped me sharply and I stopped to rub the sting from my face.

"Are you hurt, sir?" asked Bates solicitously, turning with the lantern.

"Of course not," I snapped. "I'm having the time of my life. Are there no paths in this jungle?"

"Not just here, sir. It was Mr. Glenarm's idea not to disturb the wood at all. He was very fond of walking through the timber."

"Not at night, I hope! Where are we now?"

"Quite near the lake, sir."

"Then go on."

I was out of patience with Bates, with the pathless woodland, and, I must confess, with the spirit of John Marshall Glenarm, my grandfather.

YOUNG GIRL FOUND POSING AS A BOY

DONS KNICKERBOCKERS AND GOES SHOPPING AT CHICAGO.

HAD STAGE ASPIRATIONS

Eleven-Year-Old Truant Causes Excitement by Her Mysterious Disappearance—Is Detected by Amateur Sleuths.

Chicago.—Dorothy Eastman the 11-year-old child whose mysterious disappearance from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Eastman, 6117 Kimbark avenue, aroused the society section of woodlawn and caused a flutter in the Hyde Park police department, was found under circumstances as dramatic as were ever penned by fiction writers or portrayed upon the stage.

Attired in a natty knickerbocker suit of gray and wearing a scarlet flannel sweater and a gray cap pushed back jauntily upon her shorn locks, the little blonde runaway walked airily into the Hampden restaurant, on State street, at 5:30 o'clock and ordered dinner with all the nonchalance of a fin de siecle youth. Sitting at an adjoining table to the one to which the masquerader was shown were two men who had been tracing her for hours. They were Harrison Van Schaick and F. D. Kenyon, friends of the father of the girl and of her uncle, John Drake, who had been making frantic efforts to discover a trace of the truant since shortly after the hour that she had dropped out of sight.

Kenyon and Van Shaick, the latter knowing little Dorothty Eastman by sight, turned amateur detective to aid their friend Drake, and they beat out the police. But so completely changed was the appearance of the girl by her adoption of male garb and the cutting of her hair that Mr. Van Schaick was not altogether certain for half an hour as he watched her at her meal that she was in fact Dorothy.

As the boy arose from the table and approached the cashier's desk with a check presented by the waiter Mr. Van Schaick stepped forward and blocked the door leading to the street. The apparent lad, with a smile and a pleasant remark to the young woman at the cashier's desk paid the sum demanded and then started to leave the restaurant. Then 'Detective" Van Schaick reached down, and taking the surprised child in his arms said: "Dorothy, wait a moment. Uncle John will soon be here."

With a shriek which startled the diners who thronged the cafe, the child struggled to free herself, crying out: "Let me go! Release me at once! I don't know you!"

"But you are Dorothy Eastman, and I am your friend," assured Mr. Van

She Had a Barber Cut Her Hair Boy-Style.

Schaick as he gently restrained the frantic girl.

"I am not Dorothy Eastman. Let me go; oh, let me go!" wailed the little girl, as she tried vainly to reach the door.

"Dorothy, I know you, and I want you to wait until your Uncle John Drake gets here, and he will take you home. Your little sister has been crying for you all day," said Mr. Van Schaick.

At the mention of her little sister the child ceased to struggle. Her head sank upon the shoulder of her captor and she gave way to hysterical weeping. Sympathizers gathered about her, and after awhile she became calm. Telephonic communication was had with her relatives, and while awaiting the arrival of the girl's uncle efforts were made to get the youthful truant and masquerader to tell something about her experience since she left home.

"I first cut my hair shorter myself—it was not long to begin with—Wednesday afternoon in a room of the home of a girl friend in Woodlawn. I do not know the number just now," said the girl. "To-day I got a barber to 'slick it up' a little better. I bought the knickerbockers, the sweater and the cap in a State street department store. I slept at the home of my girl friend in Woodlawn Wednesday night. I came back up town in the morning. I had about ten dollars when I left home—it was my Christmas money—and I wanted to come up town and see what was displayed in the windows and I wanted to buy some things for the folks. I had a good time. I thought if I put on boy's clothes nobody would know me."

"And was that the only reason you left home, Dorothy?" some one in the party asked.

The eyes of the little girl filled with tears and she shaded her face with her hands, refusing to answer.

"I understand that Dorothy is of a most romantic nature and a great reader of fiction," said Mr. Kenyon, one of the amateur sleuths. "It is said that the child has a penchant for acting, and has expressed the intention of going upon the stage. Relatives say that she has been in the habit of amusing herself by donning her father's clothes and disguising herself for the purpose of surprising her little friends."

YOUNG WOMAN BATHES IN THE CHILLY SURF

Pretty Girl Startles Promenaders at Atlantic City by Plunge in Icy Ocean.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Board-walk promenaders in the vicinity of Connecticut avenue the other morning when it was frigid and there was a flurry of snow, were given the cold shivers as they saw a pretty young woman make a dash out of a bathhouse, dressed in a bathing suit, and make for the ocean on a run. She plunged into the icy water and remained there 15 or 20 minutes.

She Dashed Into the Icy Water.

An effort was made to ascertain the bathers' identity, but she evidently had expected there might be some curious enough to want to know who she was and therefore she had "fixed" the keeper of the bathhouse. She was about 25 years old, dark, well built and well dressed.

The girl started off on a brisk walk down the esplanade when she emerged from the bathhouse, and finally disappeared in an auction shop just below New York avenue.

Drops on Deer; Kills It.

Camp Bailey, Pa.—Peter Rindernecht is still talking of his narrow escape from an infuriated deer, which he finally killed in an unusual manner.

While the other members of the camp were away on a long drive, Pete, finding things slow in camp, decided to do a little hunting on his own hook.

Back of the Hinkle farm he jumped a large buck and fired a shot which made a flesh wound. The angry deer, lowering its prongs, made for Pete, who dropped his rifle and climbed the nearest tree.

The deer pawed at the tree, snorting with rage, and Pete thought it a fine joke until night began to draw near with the buck still on guard.

Pete yelled for help, but his cries only echoed through the ravines. It was very cold, and the hunter found that it would not be long until he would have to release his hold on the branches and fall to the ground.

A desperate plan was determined upon. Pete weighs close to 280 pounds, and when the buck, walking around the tree, was directly beneath him, the hunter doubled himself up like a ball and dropped.

He landed right on the buck's back, breaking its spinal column and crippling it so that the work of killing it with his hunting knife was easy.

Hunt Bear; Find a Pig.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—Led by Mustard Hardy and Charlie Kasoureck, mighty hunters, all the male inhabitants of Sadott and vicinity started out to exterminate all the wolves and bears in the neighborhood. The women, in their gayest dresses, turned out to cheer them on. For six hours the hunters hunted in vain. Then scouts reported tracks. They led to a clump of brush, into which the hunters were about to fire, when Farmer Charles Green rushed up, yelling:

"Hold on, them's my old pig Fanny's tracks!"

That ended the hunt.

Girl Is Hazed Into a Fit.

Central Village, Conn.—Miss Annie Collins, daughter of the cotton-wick manufacturer here, was brought home from Providence, R. I., suffering from hysterical fright. Some of her chums at a Providence business college for girls did a little hazing and they put two dummies in Miss Collins' bed. They so closely resembled dead bodies that she screamed and fell in a fit from fright.

CHANGE TO DISTRICTS

Both Parties Said to Favor New Way of Electing Assemblymen.

WANT UNITED ACTION

Suggestion that State Convention Condemn in Their Platform Representation By Counties.

As the people of New Jersey are becoming enlightened as to the purpose of the proposed amendment to Section 3 of Article 4 of the State Constitution, the movement to wipe out the present method of electing members of the General Assembly is attracting supporters in all parts of the State and in all political parties.

Prominent leaders in both the Democratic and Republican ranks expressed yesterday the belief—as another resolution similar to that now in the Legislature will have to be passed next year in order that the final test of the referendum may be made—that in the platforms of the respective State conventions which will meet to nominate candidates for Governor this spring there should be planks committing the parties to the policy of restoring Assembly districts and of electing the members of the lower branch of the Legislature directly by their respective constituents, instead of massing the candidates on the several county tickets.

"I believe all the Democratic members of the Legislature will vote for the proposed constitutional amendment, and I am also of the opinion that the coming State convention will declare emphatically for a return to the Assembly district method," said yesterday Assemblyman Simon Hahn, leader of the Essex county delegation in the lower house.

"We already are committed to this method. A constitutional convention does not seem possible under present conditions, and as the great majority of the voters of the State are undoubtedly in favor of doing away with the obnoxious system of election by counties, the means proposed, that of passing an amendment to the Constitution, is the only way left by which the people may obtain what they are clamoring for. The Democratic members will vote for the amendment because our platforms have continually declared for it. The Republicans seem to have come over to our way of thinking on this question, and they are strongly advocating the same thing under the leadership of Governor Stokes. These being the conditions, I cannot see any other result than that the fight will be successful.

"There has never been a real, worthy argument to sustain the overthrow of the system of electing members of the Assembly by districts, except that it was in violation of the Constitution. Many able lawyers have held that the third section of the fourth article of our fundamental law is capable of a construction that permits of Assembly Districts. The courts have ruled otherwise, however, and we hold our judiciary too sacred to question its rulings. But the courts have pointed the way to reform the obnoxious system, the people are ready, I believe, to indorse that reform, and it is the duty of the law-making body to adopt it.

"The district plan is in accord with the principles of government by the people. The whole scheme of dividing the Legislature into two branches is in line with the thought of representative government. The popular branch is the House of Assembly and the closer and nearer we bring that branch to the electorate the safer we shall be."

SUCCESS OF THE SUPPER.

Trinity Church Affair Will Net About $200.

More than 200 guests were served by the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity church last night, when the annual turkey supper closed. The supper proved to be a complete success; practically all the good things were disposed of and the net profit will be about $200.

The social atmosphere last night was as delightful as on the opening night. The service was as perfect, and the comment of the guests was rich in praise for the committees in charge. The musical features were repeated.

Mrs. A. N. Selter Entertains.

Mrs. Andrew N. Selter ,of Rockview Terrace, gave a tea at her home, yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6, which was attended by over one hundred guests. The home was decorated throughout, pink being the prevailing color. Those who assisted rs. Selter in receiving were Miss Kingman, of Trenton; Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. Augustus V. Heely, Mrs. Max Munger and Mrs. Walter M. McGee. The young women assisting were the Misses Shreve, Thompson and Van Deventer.

GRACE M.E. CHURCH PLANS ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

WILL BE HELD TOMORROW TO CELEBRATE COMPLETION OF 15TH YEAR.

The congregation of Grace M. E. church will celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of its organization tomorrow and has prepared a programme that will continue through the day.

In the morning at the usual hour of service, Rev. Herbert Randolph, of Hoboken, who was the first conference pastor of the church, will be in charge and will preach a special sermon. Dr. H. K. Carroll, who was in reality the first past and who remained in charge until Mr. Randolph was appointed, will also be present and make an address.

In the afternoon, a special Sunday-school service will be held, beginning at 2:30. For this occasion, Superintendent W. J. Conroy has prepared an historical address to be read and a similar contribution will be made by Miss Nettie Beeching.

The day's programme will close with a platform meeting in the evening when addresses will be made by the Rev. Dr. Whitney, Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll and former Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer. Special music will be a feature at each of the gatherings and indications are that the attendances will be large.

The Grace church congregation is an outgrowth of the First M. E. church as is also the Monroe Avenue church, which has been holding special services during the past week in celebration of the tenth anniversary of its organization.

MONROE M. E. ANNIVERSARY EXERCISES CLOSE TOMORROW.

Rev. J. H. Howard to Preach Anniversary Sermon at West End M. E. Church Tomorrow.

The tenth anniversary services which have been in progress this week at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church were continued last night, when the Epworth League was in charge. N. Mansfield Smith, as president of the league, directed the programme, the chief feature of which were linked readings from James Whitcomb Riley by Charles Sumner Kemble. The poems given were so connected as to portray life from childhood to manhood. Mr. Kemble gave several of Riley's best poems from child life and then some of the more pathetic writings, representing advanced age. He closed his programme by reciting Riley's poem describing Christ and the Crucifixion. During the evening there were vocal selections by Miss Martin and Miss Grant, the latter also giving a piano solo. There were not social features last night.

Tomorrow the special services will close. In the morning Rev. Dr. John Hamilton Howard, of Staten Island, will preach the anniversary sermon. In the evening N. Mansfield Smith will deliver a historical sketch and Rev. Frank Fletcher will make an address.

MUSICALE AND VAUDEVILLE.

Comedy Club of St. Stephen's Church Will Entertain.

The Comedy Club of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, will hold a musical and vaudeville entertainment at the parish house Monday night at 8 o'clock. The proceeds will be applied to the parish house maintenance fund.

The programme will include songs, instrumental solos, character studies and monologues. Those who will take part in it are: L. J. Geary, Dr. George H. Dupuy, Miss Marion Rummler, R. H. McCready, Miss Martha MacMurray, F. J. Pope, J. Campbell Haywood.

Handsome Waiters.

From present indications the dinner to be given Monday night at the Holy Cross parish house, Washington and Mercer avenues, will be one of the most interesting things ever set before the people of Plainfield. The men of the church who are to do the cooking and serving feel quite flattered to find that the women are showing so much curiosity over the undertaking. There will be several courses cooked by the "pick of the parish" and served by handsome waiters who have been in training for the occasion at a famous Park Row beanery. There will be other features of entertainment which will aid in making the affair very attractive. It isn't often that the people of this city have an opportunity to secure a good dinner and hear grand opera stars for the price.

Organ Recital Numbers.

William E. MacClymont, organist and choirmaster of Grace church, will render these numbers at the organ recital tomorrow afternoon at 4:15 o'clock: Fantasia Sonata, Rheinberger; Suite Gothique, Boellman and Vorspiel from "Tristan and Rsolde," by Wagner.

ADVICE FOR COMMISSION

Corporation Counsel to Be Asked to Enlighten Bi-Municipal Water Probers.

ENCOUNTER OBSTACLES

Mr. Dumont Says That Big Bond Houses Do Not Care to Handle Securities Needed—Mr. Frost's Opinion.

Rights and remedies were the chief topics of discussion at the meeting of the water commission which held its first session since organization, in the Mayor's office, last night. John B. Dumont presided and other members present were George H. Frost, Joseph O. Osgood, William S. Tyler, Mayor N. B. Smalley, William A. Coddington, Harry L. Hall, Secretary Leon R. Thurlow, and Stenographer George B. Wean. Mayor Fisk was detained by illness.

After considerable discussion of several matters, the suggestion of Mr. Coddington that the legal committee of the commission confer with Corporation Counsel Marsh and decide upon a plan of action was put in the form of a motion by Mr. Tyler and adopted. The committee will report the result of its conference to the next general meeting of the commission Friday night, March 8.

By way of information Mr. Dumont stated early in the meeting that upon inquiry among large bond houses in New York he learned that they do not care to negotiate bonds for the maintenance of water supplies in small cities—say of less than 25,000 population.

Then the question was raised by Mr. Tyler as to what rights the Union Water Company has in selling water outside of Plainfield. He expessed the opinion that the city would be deprived of water to the extent of having the supply go somewhere else.

Mr. Dumont said that no one knows how much water there is in Plainfield and how long it will last. As to the rates he thought those charged by the local water company were as reasonable as any and lower than in some cases. Mr. Frost agreed with him, as did also Mr. Osgood.

Mr. Dumont raised the question of charging for water at so much per faucet. He cited an instance of a boarding house, where there might be as many faucets as in his house, yet a far greater amount of water would be used in the boarding house than in his own where there might be only two or three in the family.

It seemed to me the opinion that by the merger of the Plainfield Water Supply Company into what is now known as the Union Water Company, the corporation had protected every interest, and the question was raised as to whether the consolidated company has the right to take water from Plainfield and sell it anywhere in the county or places adjacent thereto. It was hinted that the city might have the right to prevent this action.

It was also hinted that if the city should buy the present plant, the water company would sink other wells on land adjoining the city's plant and pump water just the same. An interesting discussion then followed as to the probable exhaustion of the water supply in Plainfield. It is known and was so stated last night that the water company has sunk its wells twice since the plant was put in operation, the present depth being about twenty-five feet.

Mr. Frost stated that such a water supply as Plainfield has would suffer exhaustion by the constant pumping and that the first signs of such exhaustion would be found in the sinking of the wells to a greater depth. He added that no one but the company has the correct information as to the underground supply here, but he had understood that there is a good margin yet. He said that the present supply is good and the pressure satisfactory. He stated further that the constant pumping shows that the water table is lower and in the section of the town in which he lives there is a noticeable absence of water in the brooks, also fewer mosquitoes. It was Mr. Frost's opinion that there is sufficient water here to supply Plainfield forever if the supply is not sent to Elizabeth and other towns.

The members realized the importance of prompt action if anything is to be done in determining rights and remedies and Legislative action as well as the right of injunction were suggested.

Then followed a discussion as to the rights of the company under its original charter and its possible relationship to the Union Water Company with which it is now merged, with the result that Mr. Coddington suggested a conference between the legal committee and Mr. Marsh. The commission has had in its possession much valuable information collected from various sources, including data from Mr. Marsh which relates to questions of the past history of the water company.

YOUNG BRAKEMEN KILLED

Stepped From Between Two Cars Near Richmond St. and Was Hit by Fast Freight.

LIVED IN PHILLIPSBURG

Fellow-Members of His Crew Unaware of His Death Until They Failed to Receive a Signal.

Death came in a swift and terrible form to William C. Ruth, of Phillipsburg, a brakeman on the New Jersey Central, in this city at 12:15 this morning. Just after coupling two cars on the siding along Cottage place, near Richmond street, he stepped out to the main west bound track directly in front of a fast B. and O. freight travelling at a fifty-mile-an-hour rate. He was struck by a projection from the locomotive and knocked between the tracks with life extinct. The skull was fractured and part of the face crushed in, otherwise was body was not mangled.

The engineer of the train which struck Ruth never saw him and continued on. It was only when the other members of the crew to which the victim belonged waited in vain for a signal from him that they learned of the accident. The body was taken in charge by Undertaker George Cole and the county authorities were notified.

Ruth was twenty-two years old and unmarried, living with his widowed mother. He had been with the Central but a short time and was considered a careful man. The body will be forwarded to Phillipsburg this afternoon.

JOHN DOUD PASSES AWAY AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

END CAME AT THE HOME OF HIS PARENTS AT NOON TODAY.

Following an illness that has extended at intervals over many weeks, John Doud, the youngest son of former Recorder and Mrs. Thomas Doud, of the borough, died at the home of his parents on Duer street shortly after 12 o'clock this noon. He had been in a serious condition for the past two weeks and his death was not unexpected. The illness began with a rheumatic affection that was followed by pneumonia. The latter trouble spread to the heart and brought about his demise.

The young man was about twenty-two years old and had a host of acquaintances in every part of the city and borough. He was employed at the local A. and P. Tea Company's store, where he had risen to a responsible position for his energy and ability. He was of a most genial and happy disposition and was very popular with all with whom he came in contact.

Beside his parents he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. James R. Blair, of Duer street, and Mrs. Herbert McVoy, of Westfield; also two brothers, Mark and William Doud.

Barbers' Union Passes Resolutions.

At a meeting of the local Barbers' Union, Thursday night, resolutions were passed condemning the action of the Governor of Idaho and the Supreme Court in the matter of arrest and extradition of President Moyer, Secretary William Haywood and George Pettibone, of the Western Federation of Miners. The same action is being taken by unions of all kinds throughout the country. Copies of the resolution will be forwarded by President Donato DiLonardo and Secretary Cantucey to the governor of Idaho and the judges of the S upreme Court.

Crokinole Club's Meeting.

The S. 1. 6. Crokinole Club held its first meeting at the home of the Misses Clark, of Grandview avenue, last night. The prizes were won by Miss Della Voehl and Benjamin Schuck. After the play dancing was enjoyed and refreshments were served. The next meeting of the club will be held on February 25 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Austin, of West Sixth street.

Mrs. James Armstrong.

Mrs. Ellen Armstrong, wife of James Armstrong, died this morning at her home on Prospect place, following a short illness from pneumonia. She resided on West Fifth street for many years and was well known throughout the city. The funeral will be held at her late home and will be private.

The Y. M. C. A. first basketball team will play the Maxwell House five, of Brooklyn, Monday night, at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Maxwell House has a strong team.

BRIGGS TENDERS THANKS

U. S. Senator Elect Writes to Members of Legislature Expressing Gratitude.

THAT DEMOCRATIC PLOT

Little Credence Placed in Report That Minority Will Seek to Involve Senatorial Situation.

Frank O. Briggs, State Treasurer, yesterday forwarded members of the Legislature who voted for him on Tuesday when he was elected to the office of United States Senator. He will resign as State Treasurer at an early date, possibly some time next week, and then it is expected a joint session will be called to elect his successor. It is the desire of the treasurer to retire February 28.

Considerable comment has been created by rumors that the Democratic minority of the Legislature would refuse to meet with the Republican majority in joint session to accept the resignation of the treasurer and to elect his successor, thereby tieing up the treasury department and involving the Senatorship. It is not believed, however, that any move like this will be made, for the uselessness of it is apparent.

While the law of the State requires that the treasurer shall resign to a joint session of the Legislature, because he is elected by this body, there is no law that can compel a man to stay in office when he wants to get out and no law that can override the United States Constitution which prescribes the election of United States Senators. At the same time the oaths taken by the Democratic members of the Legislature requires of them that they fulfill all of their legislative duties, and the meeting in joint session in this matter is as clearly a duty as was the meeting in joint session for the election of a Senator.

On the other hand the Democrats could make no material gain this year by blocking the election of a treasurer. The latter could resign to the Governor after the adjournment of the Legislature and the Governor could then appoint an ad interim treasurer. The only result in that case would be to tie up the treasury department during the balance of the Legislature's session and this would inconvenience the Democrats as much as the Republicans.

The only possible reason the Democrats could have in delaying an election of a treasurer would be to compel the Governor to make an ad interim appointment, in which event the next Legislature would elect for the regular term. Some of the Democratic leaders hope to control the Legislature on join ballot next year.

There will probably be enough hold-over Republicans to make the Senate majority of that political faith and if the Democrats refuse this winter to go into joint session the Republicans could do the same next winter and the ad interim appointee of a Republican Governor would continue to serve.

UNION JAIL WELL MANAGED.

State Charities President Sends Letter of Praise.

Elizabeth, Feb. 9.—Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, president of the State Charity Aid Association, in a letter addressed to Benjamin F. King, director of the Union County Board of Freeholders, says that she recently inspected the Union Jounty Jail and found its condition to be satisfactory in every respect.

Mrs. Williamson expressed gratification at the progress being made in the construction of a prison for women. The letter credited the Union County Jail as being the best managed jail in this State.

The committee appointed to investigate the case of David Taylor, who at the last meeting of the board asked that the latter recompense him for an injuiry which his horse sustained because of a loose plank in the Washington avenue bridge at Plainfield, reported that an agreement had been reached between the freeholders of Somerset county and themselves, for each of the counties to pay Mr. Taylor $54.50.

Celebrated Thirtieth Anniversary.

NEARLY 1,000 ATTEND F. O. E.'S ANNUAL BALL

PLAINFIELD AERIE HAS A BIG NIGHT AT SAENGERBUND HALL.

Unusual success attended the second annual reception and ball of Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E., held in Saengerbund Hall, last night. The affair was attended by over 900 people, including delegations of Eagles from Newark, New Brunswick, Bound Brook, while the Plainfield Aerie and its friends were largely represented.

The grand march took place at 11 o'clock and was led by Mr. and Mrs. William Waglow. This was unique and in the attractive formations there was represented a star and the letters "F. O. E." The programme of dances was one of the best ever presented, and the music by Charles Suhr's orchestra was a feature. The dances included all of the popular selections of the day.

The hall was elaborately decorated by Laggren, of Elizabeth, there being a fine display of the order's insignia. The arrangement on the stage was attractive, consisting of palms and flowers, while in the centre was an eagle surrounded by a number of small incandescent lights.

The Eagles will net approximately $400 from the reception and ball. R. P. Kampf was general manager of the affair. William Waglow was floor manager and his assistant was S. P. Abieniste. The committee of arrangements consisted of R. P. Kampf, chairman; J. Vardon, secretary; H. Reilly, treasurer; S. P. Abieniste, Edward C. Searing and William Waglow.

ANOTHER LECTURE BY PEARY HERE, AT THEATRE.

Y. M. C. A. Secretary Gets His Promise to Return, at Midnight Meeting.

Peary, the Arctic explorer, will deliver a second lecture in this city. He will appear at the New Plainfield Theatre, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A.

The date of the lecture has not been decided. Secretary Robbie, of the Y. M. C. A., secured Commodore Peary's promise to return to this city at a midnight meeting in Peary's rooms at the Grand Union Hotel, New York. Mr. Robbie was unable to see the explorer-lecturer until the latter returned from a dinner at 12:30 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Robbie had an interesting talk with Commander Peary. The explorer said he was at a harder grind than ever attended a near-discovery of the pole. He spends his nights lecturing or roaring gently for tufthunters and gets up at six o'clock every morning to edit his manuscripts on the expedition.

The lecture will be different from the one delivered at the First M. E. church. Peary has material for a dozen different lectures, and illustrations to go with them.

WORKS OF ART FOR P. H. S.

Class of 1905 Present Panels in High Relief Sculpture.

The plaster casts of Luca della Robbia's panels in high relief sculpture have been purchased for the Plainfield High School by the class of 1905 and set in the wall of the lower hall on either side of the main entrance. According to custom each class presents the school with a work of art, and with this in view the graduating class of 1905 left $60 to be spent in the most advisable way when the new building was completed.

One panel represents seven choir boys singing from one book; the other, five choir boys singing from one scroll. They are set in frames of dark stained antique oak which makes a striking contrast to the white of the wall and the light color of the plaster casts, and sets them off to their best advantage.

MISSION'S NEW NAME.

To Meet Hereafter at the W. C. T. U. Rooms.

With "Plainfield" instead of "Grove Street" for a distingunishing title, the Rescue Mission will meet hereafter in the W. C. T. U. rooms, 100 Duer street. The first meeting under the new name and in the new place will be held tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock.

Charles H. Fountain will speak. All the Sunday meetings of the Mission will be held in the evening hereafter. The meetings were h eld in the afternoon at the Christian church, but the W. C. T. U. has afternoon meetings of its own on Sundays.

"SILENT" SMITH HONORED

County Chairman and "Bob" Kirkland Receive Handsome Masonic Jewels.

GIFT OF POLITICIANS

Plainfield Well Represented at G. O. P. Gathering When Two Leaders Are Areably Surprised.

All the politicians of the county whose names crop up prominently at election time, gathered at Gebhardt's place in Elizabeth, last night, for the purpose of springing a "surprise" on one of their number. At least that's what they were all told and secrecy was maintained to such an extent that no one knew who it was until almost the last moment and then it was announced by County Registrar Frank H. Smith, who was a member of the committee on arrangements, that it was Captain Robert Kirkland, of Elizabeth.

But "Silent" Smith had another guess coming. While he and his committee had been busy in one direction, another committee had been working on parallel lines and he was picked out as a second "victim." He was absolutely in the dark as to the surprise prepared for him, as was Kirkland also, the latter having been led to believe that Smith was the man for whom the event was prepared. The climax came when both men were instructed to stand up and they were presented with thirty-second degrees Masonic jewels, having recently reached that position in the order.

The presentation to Kirkland was made by Abe J. David and to Smith by Judget William Newcorn. The urprised ones were badly rattled for a moment or so but quickly regained their composure and responded fittingly. Other speeches were made by Judge William R. Codingtond and Judge C. Addison Swift. The banquet served in connection with the affair was voted "A1" by the eighty odd men around the tables and it was after midnight before it broke up.

The Plainfielders who were present included Amos Andrews, Councilman Herbert Buxton, former Mayor James F. Buckle, Judge W. R. Codington, former Sheriff B. Frank Corfiell, Charles Dunham, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Judge William Newcorn and Frank H. Smith, Hamilton F. Kean, Assemblyman Tillman, Perkins and Moxon and County Clerk James C. Calvert were among the other attendants.

Thoms Had Local Relative.

Joseph Thoms, the engineer of the Pennsylvania's Congressional Limited express, who was killed at Philadelphia Thursday night, was a brother-in-law to John J. Kline, of Chatham street. His home was in Newark and he was one of the highest paid engine drivers on the road. Thoms was leaning out of the cab when he was struck by a projection from the Diamond street bridge. He fell back lifeless and the train, one of the finest in the world, ran for a mile with no one to guide it. Thoms' death was discovered by the fireman when he noted that the engine did not slow down for the North Philadelphia station.

Will Organize Baseball Team.

The Boys' Athletic Club of the First Baptist church held a short meeting, last night, when it was decided to organize a baseball team for the coming season. There is plenty of excellent material in the club from which to select a strong team, and the prospects are that the organization will have one of the best teams in the Sunday-school Athletic League. Next Friday night the club will hold a business meeting to discuss plans anl perfect the same for the ball team.

Pasteurize Their Milk.

Most Plainfielders have noticed the articles appearing in the metropolitan press about the purity of city milk supplies. The solution of this problem most favored seems to be pasteurization. Pasteurized milk can be obtained here of the Plainfield Milk and Cream Co., 191 North avenue.

What Our Reporter Saw in New York

A recent visit to one of the largest paint factories in the world, disclosed machinery that was producing 10,000 gallons of Paint, and doing it better and in less time than 100 gallons could be made by hand mixing.

This was the celebrated L. & M. Paint.

The L. & M. Zinc hardens L. & M. White Lead and makes L. & M. Paint wear like iron for 10 to 15 years.

4 gallons L. & M. mixed with 3 gallons Linseed Oil makes 7 gallons of paint at a cost of less than $1.20 per gallon.

If any defect exists in L. & M. Paint will repaint house for nothing.

M'ADOO MADE NEW BED FOR THE HUDSON RIVER

TUNNEL-BUILDER HAD TO ADOPT INGENIOUS DEVICE.

Chief Engineer Charles M. Jacobs Thursday made public a summary of the work carried out in the McAdoo system of tunnels and subways during the past year. At one point in the operations in the Hoboken-Christopher street tube under the Hudson it was found the river bottom was imperfect. So a new river bottom had to be specially made, one that would not sag on the tube and spoil it. To do that it was necessary to dump a large quantity of clay in the river, and let it settle upon the bed of the Hudson.

At another point in the work under the Hudson the men driving the huge steel shields struck a bed of clay they could not cut through without the clay oozing back around the edges of the shields. The clay was too soft. It was like trying to bore through water or soft mud. It was a perplexing problem. Chief Engineer Jacobs personally went down into the tunnel and camp there. He sent for a powerful heating apparatus, and directed an intense heat ahead of the shield. In this way he baked the clay into brick, and then bored ahead through the solid mass of brick.

At still another point under the river, instead of the hard clay expected, the bottom rose in a succession of rocky peaks, which had to be blasted off, one by one, before the shield could get past them.

The two tubes between Hoboken and Morton street are completed under the river, and on the Hoboken side 834 feet of one approach and 923 feet of the other approach are dug. On the New York side the land tunnel, west bound, has been completed 1,400 feet, almost to a point under Jefferson Market, and the east bound subway is dug, also through Christopher street, 2,100 feet, to and up Sixth avenue as far as Tenth street.

Of the two downtown tunnels, extending from Cortlandt street, New York, to a point under the Pennsylvania terminal, Jersey City, both are about three-fifths completed under the river, the north or west bound tube having come out 3,120 feet from the Jersey shore, and the south tube having been driven 3,218 feet toward New York. Over 104,000 cubic yards of material have been excavated and removed and 35,000 tons of cast-iron plates placed in the tubes as a lining.

At Jersey City the two tubes that are to connect the McAdoo terminal under the Pennsylvania station with the Erie and Lackawanna terminals have been dug from the Pennsylvania terminal about half way up to the Erie terminal; from the Hoboken end of the Christopher-Morton tubes terminal shaft at Fifteenth street about half way down to the Erie terminal, and from the Fifteenth street shaft up to within two blocks of the Lackawanna terminal. West of the Pennsylvania terminal the four main line connecting tunnels that go to Newark have been dug to Grove street. Nearly 5,000 feet of the tunnels on the Jersey side are dug.

The terminal stations are well under way.

The tunnels under the Hudson are to be in operation, it is promised, by September, 1907.

WANTED "IRISH TURKEY."

Jersey City, Feb. 9.—Too much steak caused all the trouble, for Matthew Hoy's kick, as he told Justice Higgins in the First Criminal Court, was that he didn't get corned beef and cabbage often enough at home, and then the fight started. His wife, May, a demure little lady, claims he hit her in the face with a plate, and Matthew states that she retaliated by knocking him down a long flight of stairs. The husband took the full count and then came back good and strong. What happened after that landed Matthew in the court.

"Judge, it's this way," said Hoy, as he rubbed his right hand across his eyes and squinted at Judge Higgins. "May, you know, does all the buying for the house, with my money, of course, and you know, judge, she's stuck on steak, beefsteak, judge, and I got sick of it."

"You don't like beefsteak?" asked the court, as a flicker of a smile passed over his countenance.

"Sure," said Hoy, "but enough's enough, and when it was beef, beef, beef every day, besides the beefing my wife did, I tell you I got sore."

He said that when supper was spread Thursday night he looked for his favorite dish. Instead of corned beef there was a big piece of steak upon his plate. He picked up the meat platter and gently pushed it into May's face. She let out a scream, and Matthew followed up his attack with the sugar bowl and a couple of salt cellars.

Then the long-suffering May got busy. She walked back of Matthew's chair and took a good strong hold on his collar and another grip further down. With one tug she got him out of the chair and marched him to the top of the stairway.

"You're on your way, boy," she said, and then she gave a push. There was an officer at the bottom of the stairs to catch Matthew, and he landed the husband at the police station.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"A Wife's Secret" is the announced attraction for the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight. It is a play abounding in heart interest and one that permits of choice dramatic work by a competent company.

Maclyn Arbuckle announces his big production and original brilliant company in George Ade's spectacular company, "The County Chairman," at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. This announcement should create unusual interest, partly on account of the play's prevailing spirit of jollity and partly also by reason of its wholesome simplicity and fidelity to home life and character. Its love interest is charmingly; its drollery is delicious and its dramatic episodes are intensely stirring. Maclyn Arbuckle in "The County Chairman" comes here endorsed by long engagements in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Boston, where it delighted thousands.

Joe Welch, the clever comedian and character actor, will be seen in a new play entitled "The Shoemaker," at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night. Mr. Welch's role is reported to be the best he has ever had and gives him abundant opportunity to display his versatility.

In the announcement that "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World" will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre on February 28, matinee and night, as a benefit to Treasurer Sam Cunningham, the patrons of that house receive assurance that they are to see a standard quality of theatrical entertainment. When one goes to a store to purchase dry goods or groceries there are certain reliable brands which it is always well to insist upon receiving. As it is in the mercantile business, so it is in the theatrical business. There is a standard quality of attractions, and in the line of farce comedy, "Happy Hooligan's Trip Around the World" represents the very highest possible quality.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Wilson Memorial chapel, Watchung, conducted the gospel meeting at the Hunter Avenue Tabernacle Thursday night.

The tenth anniversary services at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will be concluded tomorrow. In the morning Rev. Dr. Howard, of Staten Island, will preach the anniversary sermon and in the evening a historical sketch will be read by Mansfield Smith, followed by an address by Rev. Frank Fletcher.

SPANISH GIRL'S ROMANCE.

Sent Here to Study, She Weds Horace P. Conrad of Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Feb. 9.—An obliging Justice of the Peace and the conveniently situated city of Camden served as a safe combination to veil until today the marriage of Miss Ainta Inez Cochran, a Spanish girl, but a recent resident of New York, and Horace P. Conrad, of this city. The date of the ceremony was January 29 and, except to a few intimate friends, the wedding announcement will come as a surprise. The bride's mother, in particular, will be astonished. She lives at the family house, Castle Carmentinza, a short distance from Madrid, Spaint.

The young couple first met at a Bellevue-Srtatford dinner party a few weeks ago. Miss Cochran, who had been sent by her parents to New York to acquire an English education, her father being a native of this country, came to this city for a brief visit to a school friend. A bevy of young society people, including Mr. Conrad, were asked to meet her at the dinner party.

The father of the bride, a New Yorker, went to Spaint years ago on a commercial mission, and married Anita de Acosta, a celebrated beauty. The daughter lived at 11 West Forty-fifth street, New York, while attending a school in that city. The bridegroom, a son of Dr. T. E. Conrad, of 1855 North Seventeenth street, is a member of the Bachelors' Barge Club and Troop A.

CHURCH TIMES SUPPRESSED.

Profane Printers Used Wicked Jokes to Fill Up Religious Paper.

Milwaukee, Feb. 9.—The Church Times, the official organ of the Episcopal Diocese of Milwaukee, published by Canon C. B. B. Wright, of the cathedral, has been suppressed for a month, all because a facetious or careless printer was not particular as to the class of "filler" used to chink up columns unfilled by notices of church fast days, editorials, and by eulogies of the late Bishop Nicholson.

The number due for February was to be one of tribute to Bishop Nicholson, but when the horrified editors saw pages of church news interspersed with profane jokes, stories of race track betting, and the like, it was decided to condemn the issue, and not a copy was issued to the subscribers.

For example, here is one joke that appears in the same colump with a tribute to Bishop Nicholson:

"Pa," said little Tommy, "my Sunday-school teacher says if I'm good I'll go to heaven."

"Well?" asked pa.

"Well, you said if I was good I'd go to the circus; now I want to know who's lyin'—you or her."

When you send your clothes to H. W. Marshall's laundry on East Front street you know that they will be washed and ironed to your entire satisfaction. Only the most approved methods employed. Prices are right.

COLLECTING "CUSS" WORDS.

Police Corralling Choice Brand Used By Youth.

Atlantic City, Feb. 9.—The police are making a special collection of "cuss" words used by 12-year-old Paul Dell, under an order from Judge Higbee, of the Juvenile Court, before whom the lad was arraigned for contaminating the entire school by language that would make a pirate or mule driver envious. The principal of the school asserted that the boy was too tough for him, but could give no exact examples of the lad's pet profanity, and the boy refused to give the court a sample of his ability.

"The court must have testimony that is entirely legal," declared the Judge, who ordered that the police make a tour of the school and either get affidavits from the boy's teachers concerning his bad language or bring them into court. Some of the teachers visited today blushingly refused to repeat some of the strenuous oaths of the young incorrigible, and others say they will resign before they will go on the stand as witnesses if they are compelled to repeat young Dell's language in public.

KINDNESS WORTH $35,000.

Nephew Rewarded for Attention Paid to Recluse.

Atlantic City, Feb. 9.—Relatives of Daniel F. Hayden, an aged recluse, who died in July last and willed a bundle of $35,000 in gilt edged mortgages, hidden in his cabin, to a favorite nephew in Stroudsburg, Pa., have started a fight to get a share of the money. Hayden lived in a cabin, and when his will, leaving his possessions to Benjamin F. Hayden, the nephew, was found, others in the family looked on the matter as a joke.

When the cabin was searched, however, the fortune was found. Hayden had accumulated the money by careful saving and investment and having no faith in banks, hid the money. The objectors to the will claim that the old man was unduly influenced by the kindness of the favorite nephew.

APPROVE OF BRIDGES OVER THE HUDSON RIVER

COMMISSION SO REPORTS TO STATE LEGISLATURE.

New York, Feb. 9.—The New York Interstate Bridge Commission, consisting of McDougall Hawkes, Emanuel W. Bloomingdale and Alexander Shamberg, which, in conjunction with representatives from New Jersey, have been studying the problem of uniting this city and New Jersey by bridges, has completed its investigations and sent its report to the Legislature. The commission has had frequent conferences with the New Jersey representatives, Messrs. George T. Werts, Victor L. Mason and James F. Minturn.

The report says that there "appears to be no doubt whatever of the practicability of the construction of one or more bridges across the Hudson, so far as the engineering proposition is concerned," and that the cost of constructing a bridge and anchorages within the limits of Fourteenth and Seventy-second streets, Manhattan, would not be less than $25,000,000, and might easily run to $35,000,000.

The commission is of the opinion that a Manhattan terminal between Fourteenth and Seventy-second streets "would best serve the purpose for a bridge which would come within the scope of the organic act of your commission, and that in view of the large space needed for terminals, if they were to include transcontinental trunk line, passenger and freight traffic, the bridge should be primarily for vehicles, foot passengers and trolley lines, rather than for the trunk lines; the trolley lines including, however, a high power line crossing and connecting all the trunk lines in New Jersey at one or more points in the rear of the bluff parallel to the Hudson, where such connections would be the most convenient, providing for such high power trolley line a union passenger station in Manhattan, where tickets could be sold and baggage checked for points on the trunk lines with which this trolley line would connect."

On the ground that the borough of Richmond is a part of the city of New York, the commission says it considers recommendations for bridging the ills within its jurisdiction, and says it finds after study of the question that there are two points at which Staten Island could be, with great advantage both to Staten Island and New Jersey, connected by swing or lift drawbridges, with the New Jersey shore; the first point is from Port Richmond to Bergen Point, which, with a bridge to Manhattan across the Hudson from Hudson county, New Jersey, would furnish land communication from Staten Island to the centre of Greater New York; the second point is from the end of the trans-Staten Island Boulevard, Howland Hook, to Elizabethport, which would furnish at that point, Elizabeth, connections from the Staten Island water front to various trunk lines terminating on the New Jersey shore of the Hudson, opposite Manhattan, as they pass through Elizabeth.

WEST HUDSON ADDS HER KICK.

Will Join Newark Delegation to Protest Kean Bill.

The West Hudson County Board of Trade, at its meeting last night, passed resolutions denouncing the bill introduced by United States Senator Kean to close the drawbridges over the Passaic and Hackensack rivers during certain hours each day, to allow the passing of trains, and a committee was appointed to visit Washington today, in conjunction with the Newark Board of Trade, and attend the hearing to be given the bill.

The proposed legislation was denounced as an attempt on the part of the railroads to strangle the river freight traffic.

The discussion on the resolution developed into a talk on the various phases of the passenger traffic on the several railroads, and a comparison was made by the Rev. Roland S. Dawson, pastor of the Knox Presbyterian church, of Kearny, who, in speaking of the travel on the Lackawanna Railroad during the morning hours, said:

"The 7 o'clock train is used by the 'works,' the 8 o'clock train by the 'clerks' the 9 o'clock train by the 'shirks' and the 10 o'clock train by the 'flirts.'"

ALIVE WITH BROKEN BACK.

Victim of Long Branch Crossing Accident Recovering.

Long Branch, Feb. 9.—Stewart H. Sherman, the companion of Miss Bertha Gootheil, who was killed at the grade crossing accident Wednesday morning, is still alive today, although his back is broken. The case is a puzzling one to the physicians, who say that in spite of the cheerfulness of the injured man, his death is liable to occur at any moment. He does not know of Miss Gootheil's death or of the seriousness of his own injuries.

The funeral of Miss Gootheil will take place at the First Reformed church here tomorrow morning. The Rev. John Froschl will officiate.

Mrs. Winfield S. Angleman, who has been detained at home by illness for nearly three months, has not been so well during the past week.

DELIGHTFUL FINALE TO CONCERT SERIES

LAST OF THE NUMBER PROVES TO BE OF EXCEPTIONALLY ORDER.

The concert at the Casino last evening the last of the McIntyre Chamber music series was a highly enjoyable and altogether brilliant musical and social occasion. The audience was large and unusually enthusiastic. The concert itself was of the high quality established by these affairs, and maintains the record of artistic effort and discrimination in taste as to quality and kind of music performed as heretofore shown in the programmes.

The noble and beautiful trio of Schuberts, the one of two which this master wrote for these instruments and considered by authorities to be one of the masterpieces in this particular class of composition, was the first number. After each part of which the performers were compelled to acknowledge the appreciating plaudits of the audience.

The singer of this occasion was Mrs. Viola Waterhouse, of New York, an artist who enjoys a fine reputation among the prominent artists of the metropolis. She sang in her first number Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," showing her beautiful voice to delightful advantage, and responded to an encore by giving Dr. Arne's "The Lass With the Delicate Air." She also sang a group of songs on the second half of the concert in a charming manner.

Mr. McIntyre was heard at this concert as soloist, giving Mozkowski's Caprice Espagnal with great delicacy and brillance. His reception can leave no doubt as to the place he occupies as a favorite with his hearers. He was recalled several times and forced to respond to an encore. These concerts have been a source of delight to the music lovers of Plainfield and reflect great credit on the city that they are meeting with such unqualified appreciation and hearty support. Much thanks to Mr. McIntyre for his splendid efforts and artistic results. He will continue his concerts next year and we trust with ever growing success.

LENTEN RULES TO BE OBSERVED BY THE DIOCESE

SPECIAL INDULT HAS BEEN EXTENDED BY THE POPE.

In the regulations for the Lenten season to be observed in the Catholic Diocese, which includes Plainfield, this year the special indult granted by the late Pope Leo XIII. for ten years has been extended by Pope Pius X., and bishops are empowered to vary from the common law of abstinence when they judge expedient. Bishop O'Connor, therefore, permits working people who cannot easily abstain from flesh meat to use it once a day on all abstinence days with exceptions as shown in rule eight of the regulations as follows:

"All the week days of Lent from Ash Wednesday to Easter Sunday are fast days of precept on one meal, with the allowance of a moderate collation in the evening.

"The church excuses from the obligation of fasting, but not of abstinence from flesh meat, except in special cases of sickness, the infirm, those who are attaining their growth, those whose duties are of an exhausting or laborious character, women bearing or nursing infants, and those who are enfeebled by old age.

"The following dispensations are granted for this diocese:

"The use of flesh is permitted at eery meal on the Sundays of Lent, and at the principal meal on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, with the exception of Ember Saturday and Holy Saturday.

"The use of eggs and milk, butter, cheese and the like is allowed every day at the principal meal, and at the evening collation.

"A small piece of bread with a cup of coffee, tea, chocolate, or similar drink, may be taken in the morning.

"When it is not convenient to take the principal meal at noon, it is lawful to invert the order, and take the collation in the morning and the dinner in the evening.

"Dripping and lard may be used in the preparation of food.

"On Sunday there is neither fast nor abstinence, but it is not allowed to eat fish and flesh meat at the same meal on any day during Lent.

"Those who are not obliged to fast may partake of flesh meat at every meal on a day when, by special indult, flesh meat is permitted at the principal meal.

"Working people who cannot easily abstain from flesh meat are permitted to use it once a day on all abstinence days throughout the year, with the exception, however, of all Fridays, Ash Wednesday, Wednesday and Saturday of Holy Week, and the vigil of Christmas.

"This dispensation is granted to working people, and the members of their families share in it, but it does not exempt from fasting where such an obligation exists, nor does it permit the use of fish and flesh meat at the same meal.

"When the faithful avail themselves of this indult they should perform some penitential work as a substitute for the dispensation enjoyed. A most useful and commendable custom is that of abstaining, especially during Lent, from stimulants, in honor of the sacred thirst of our Divine Saviour.

"All priests exercising the faculties of this diocese are empowered to grant dispensations from the precept of fast and abstinence in particular cases and for sufficient cause.

"A plenary indulgence has been conceded by the Holy See to all the faithful of this diocese, who, on the feast of St. Patrick, or within the octave, receive with proper dispositions the sacrement of penance and the blessed eucharist, and visiting a church or chapel, offer prayers to God according to the intention of the holy father and for the propagation of the faith.

"The holy oils will be consecrated at the cathedral on Holy Thursday, March 28, at 10 a. m., and distributed at 2 p. m.

"In accordance with the direction of the third plenary council of Baltimore, a collation will be taken up in all the churches of this diocese on the first Sunday in Lent in aid of the propagation of the faith and of the Indian and colored missions.

"With the view to encouraging this salutary work of mercy, and of animating the Christian zeal of the faithful for the salvation of perishing souls, our holy father has benignly granted a plenary indulgence to all who having contritely confessed and worthily received holy communion on that day, devoutly visit a church in which the collection is made, assist at the sermon and the other observances of divine worship that may be celebrated on that occasion, and offer prayers for the propagation of the faith and the intention of the sovereign pontiff."

—The Sagamore Musical Club will hold its second annual entertainment at the Casino on Monday evening, February 18. This organization is composed of young men who have played together for the last four years. Under the leadership of William VanEps the club has met with fine success this season and promise to give an even better entertainment than the one last year. The club will be assisted by Miss Aimee Emmons, reader; Malcolm Shackelford, humorist, and Fred VanEps, banjoist.

Miss Ethel Clarkson, of Orchard place, has recovered from an attack of the grip.

The Girl and the Governor.

The Jefferson De Angelis Opera Company, under Frank McKee's direction, opens at the Manhattan theatre Monday night in "The Girl and the Governor," which has achieved out of town success for the past three months. This house has not offered a musical show since the famous all season run of Anna Held in "Papa's Wife." Julian Edwards is the composer and S. M. Brenner the librettist of "The Girl and the Governor," which is a return to the legitimate and wholesome comic opera style, elbowed aside by flippant musical comedy frivolity. The period is the sixteenth century and the story that of a foppish Spanish governor at a South American port, who is eluded by the clever, quick witted English girl whom he has taken captive and wishes to marry. He employs as her official tamer, her own sweetheart, a dashing sailor of her own country and is fooled by the pair after no end of comic complication. Among the twenty odd song hits are a droll serenade by seven sighing lovers who have assembled quite accidentally; De Angelis' topical songs "In the Land of the Free" and "Did You Ever Hear It Told That Way Before?" "The Amorous Pigeon," and a quaint ditty "The Musical Bullfrog" sung by the Indian medicine man and his tribal followers. The company has been selected with a view to singing strength. There are seventy people, including Estelle Wentworth, Anna Boyd, Lillian Rhoades, Richie Ling, Roland Carter, Arthur Barry, Andrew Bryant and the buffo-basso J. C. Miron, who personates Tamanee, the Indian fakir. The scenes show a part overlooking the harbor of La Guayra, Donna Isabella's garden and a banquet room in the governor's palace.

The Great Divide.

"The Great Divide's" remarkable success at the Princes theatre, New York, with Margaret Anglin and Henry Miller as joint stars, continues unabated. No other drama in years has been hailed with such acclaim as that with which this stirring play by William Vaugh Moody has met. The mere fact that it will last this entire season, and probably all of next, in New York, is not the real proof of its qualities. "The Great Divide" presents that curious phenomenon—a big popular success which is at the same time an artistic success. The two do not usually go together. It not only has all the features of absorbing entertainment, but it also possesses an inherent merit which pronounces it an epoch making play. "A new mark in American drama" is the way in which the New York Sun speaks of it, while the New York Evening Mail declares that it is the "long awaited 'Great American Play.'" The Evening World focussed public and critical opinion when it said, "In 'The Great Divide' the little Princess theatre is holding one of the biggest plays in years." Miss Anglin again proves her right to be ranked as the leading American emotional actress, and Mr. Miller has all the more strongly entrenched himself in the forefront of American actors. Mr. Miller has won a double triumph in "The Great Divide," for, besides acting in the play, he is also its producer and manager. Seats for "The Great Divide" may be reserved by mail eight weeks in advance. Tickets for four weeks are constantly on sale at the box office. An extra matinee is announced for Lincoln's Birthday.

W. W. Springman Buried.

The funeral of W. W. Springman, former owner of the barber shop on Somerset street now conducted by Lafayette Rosenstiehl, was held last night from his late home on East 124th street, New York. A delegation of members from Plainfield Lodge, I. O. O. F., including Noble Grand W. Rudy, Vice Grand William Trembath, Secretary John Williams and Roy Woolley attended the service. The dead man is survived by his wife and a grown daughter.

CHARITIES AID FAVORS CIVIL SERVICE MEASURE.

Approve the Bill Which Is Fathered By Senator Everett Colby.

The members of the States Charities Aid Association of New Jersey are working hard to secure the passage of the civil service bill fathered by State Senator Everett Colby which provides for the appointment of a commission by the Governor for the examination under civil service rules of all State and county employes.

Another civil service bill, introduced by Assemblyman Thompson, of Mercer county, provides for the appointment of a commission by the Chief Justice and removal for cause by the Governor. This transfer of jurisdiction is believed to be one of the principal objections against the Thompson bill by the State Charities Aid Association. In addition to this the bill is held objectionable because it provides for a civil service examination for all officials of State institutions and leaves such an examination open to the choice of the people through a referendum vote in the case of county institutions, where civil service regulations are most needed.

Senator Colby's bill provides for the approval of the appointments by the Senate, and leaves their removal for cause in the hands of the Governor.

The State Charities Aid is looking also for the passage of a bill that will put the supervision of all children placed in this State by societies or individuals from other States into the hands of the Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, and provide for a bond of $1,000 from all such societies for their adherence to all of the laws of the State.

Every One Raised But the Chief.

Montclair, Feb. 9.—The salary of Montclair police officers has bee increased by the Town Council. The one exception is the chief of police, whose salary will remain at $1,500. A peculiar ruling was made by Robert M. Boyd, Jr., the town attorney, in considering a proposition to raise Chief Gallagher's salary to $1,800. He held that the chief was a town officer. Under the provisions of the town charter "no town officer shall have his salary increased during his term of office," the town attorney ruled that the chief's term of office was indefinite and that it would be illegal to give him an increase.

Editor To Preach.

Dr. James M. Whiton, of the editorial staff of "The Outlook," will preach the All Souls' church tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. A. C. Nickerson, who is one of the preachers chosen by the "State Conference of Charities and Corrections" to preach in Paterson tomorrow morning. The conference opens there in the Lyceum theatre tomorrow afternoon. Dr. Whiton's subject is "Self Realization."

GETS SWEETHEART IN OLD ROMAN WAY

LOVER CAPTURES HER IN TUG OF WAR WITH BROTHERS.

KNOT THEN QUICKLY TIED

Irate Father Accepts the Inevitable and Forgives—Story Showing Romance Still Lives in Tennessee Hills.

Dresden, Tenn.—A good story of a lover who captured his sweetheart and carried her off and married her in the good old Roman way came from the Twentieth district of this county and is told as follows in a local newspaper:

It appears that Ed Grief has been much in love with Elia Francis for some time. The courtship, however, was carried on very much against the wishes of the young woman's parents. For some six months they had kept their eyes upon her at church, at school and at home. If they were not watching they had some person always near whose intention was to keep down the match.

In that mysterious way known only to lovers, however, they kept up a correspondence with each other, she assuring him upon every occasion possible that her heart was still true. One recent Sunday morning she conveyed the intelligence to her lover that she was going to visit her uncle in Hyndsver community, and would likely be accompanied only by her two brothers, aged 15 and 17 years. This news was sufficient for the young man, and he made preparations accordingly.

He came to Dresden and procured the necessary license. He then secured the services of Squire W. W. House, a bosom friend of his, and posted him near the roadside where the wagon was to pass. At the hour of ten the wagon came rolling along, and sure enough the young woman was in it, sitting on the front seat between her two brothers. As it passed Grief came out of the bushes, halted it and reached for his sweetheart.

The brothers, seeing what was about to happen, whipped the mules, but Grief had taken the precaution to build a rail fence across the road just in front. He swung on the wagon with all his strength, and the team soon came to a standstill. He seized Miss Francis with both arms around the waist, while the brothers hung on to her feet, but like all lovers in such cases he pulled her loose, and they struck across the open field to find the justice. He was not very far away, and the knot was tied before you could say "Jack Robinson."

After the marriage, the couple, fearing the father, who had just lost a daughter, and gained a son-in-law, might carry out his often-expressed desire to thrash the life out of both of them if ever this important event which had just occurred did occur, got in the justice's buggy and drove to his house for dinner, where they could at the same time have the protection of the law.

Brother and Lover Struggled for Possession of the Girl.

The boys in the meantime had gotten out of their notion to visit their uncle and had struck for home and told the story. Francis, finding his daughter had beaten him, rode one of the mules back, looking for the fleeing couple. He learned that they were at the justice's residence and called with the voice of a roaring lion.

Squire House went out to see him and after much discussion and persuasion he agreed to take his daughter back and receive his new son-in-law into the family. They put the girl on the mule, while the father and son walked homeward together, discussing the weather and crops like old-time friends.

DRESS THAT COST $40,000.

Three Hundred Mexican Women Made the Wonderful Garment.

After nine years of most painstaking toil, Senora E. Leon of Aguas Calientes, living in the City of Mexico, has completed a dress which is valued at the sum of $40,000 gold, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. She was assisted in this arduous toil by 300 expert needlewomen, all of whom were well paid.

The dress was first intended for the Mexican exhibit at the Paris exposition. As it was at that time incomplete it was decided to display it at the St. Louis world's fair, but the close of this exposition still saw the work unfinished.

Aguas Calientes is famous for its drawn-work and needlework, and its embriodery artists, but this dress excels anything ever attempted or completed in that city. The dress is an exquisite and wonderful example of woman's skill, patience and artistic conception.

It consists of a full trained skirt, Eton jacket and bertha, and is made of the sheerest linen, the thread for which was imported from Paris and bore the number 600, the finest manufactured. The design, which was originated by Signora Leon, is a marvel. There are no visible seams in the entire garment, which is drawn in wheels in such a way that the original fabric is changed into a flimsy, web-like lace.

The dress will be put on exhibition in the City of Mexico and offered for sale. No price under $40,000 gold will be considered. During the winter, when the city is filled with American millionaires, it is not thought that finding a purchaser will be difficult.

FOLDING SHEEP BY HAND.

Herder Was Doing His Best to Obey Boss' Instructions.

Ab Wade, a well known character of Ashland, Mass., was in his early days a farmer's boy. One day the farmer, a large cattle owner, said:

"Abner, after yer chores is done you jest put th' sheep in fold."

"Yes, zir," replied Ab, in his soprano drawl. Toward sundown the farmer, going around to see that everything was secure, heard the plaintive bleating of a lamb. He located the sound, and ran caross Ab with a ewe across his knee, doing his best to break it in two.

"Confound yer!" roared the farmer, "what yer doin'?"

Ab dropped the bleating lamb and staggered a few feet away from his irate master.

"Well, zir, y' said t' put 'em sheep in fold, an' I was doin' my best without a foldin' machine."

With Congo Gold.

Where does it go, this blood-stained Congo gold? Into the fairy palaces, the wonderful gardens of enchantment in which this grim old, gray king delights. Into the collections of rare and priceless trees and shrubs and flowers that have made his conservatories at Laeken famous throughout Europe. Into the white hands of the women who, each for her brief hour, have ruled the Congo's lord—the queens of the Congo, whose jewels are bought with human lives. Into the far-reaching schemes of aggrandizement which a most marvelous combination of wiliness, political sagacity, and selfish ambition can devise, and limitless wealth and a diabolic ability in choosing the proper tools can execute. And, lastly, into the huge machine—his gigantic press bureau—which is all that maintains Leopold's good name before the world; a machine grinding tirelessly, night and day, that its owner may pose as the philanthropist, and not be exposed as the vampire.—Robert Park, in Everybody's.

In Old Egypt.

The camel express had come and gone and still Mark Anthony had not arrived.

"Four long months since he was here," sobbed Cleopatra, "and he promised to return in a few weeks. I wonder if anything has happened to him. Can it be possible—"

"Can what be possible, your majesty?" asked one of the court ladies.

The great queen turned deathly pale.

"Can—can it be possible that he smoked some of those Egyptian cigarettes he bought at the pyramids? If so, his doom is sealed."

Calling the swiftest Egyptian runner she dispatched him to Rome to find out the truth.

Awakening Him.

The honeymoon was over and the cupboard was bare.

"Don't worry, darling,' said the romantic husband, as he opened the piano; "remember, music is the food of love."

The practical little wife shook her head.

"But if you really think music is the food of love," she responded, "perhaps you can step around and get the butcher to give you a beefsteak for a mere song."

Then the long-haired genius woke up.

Representation Not Growing.

The first British parliament, consisting of its present number of members (670), was elected in 1885.

Two of Life's Tasks.

It takes us half our lives to learn who our friends are, and the other half to keep them.

We came out presently upon a gravelly beach, and Bates stamped suddenly on planking.

"This is the Glenarm dock, sir; and that's the boat house."

He waved his lantern toward a low structure that rose dark beside us. As we stood silent, peering out into the starlight, I heard distinctly the dip of a paddle and the soft gliding motion of a canoe.

"It's a boat, sir," whispered Bates, hiding the lantern under his coat.

I brushed past him and crept to the end of the dock. The paddle dipped on silently and evenly in the still water but the sound grew fainter. A canoe is the most graceful, the most sensitive, the most inexplicable contrivance of man. With its paddle you may dip up stars along quiet shores or steal into the very harbor of dreams. I knew that furtive splash instantly, and knew that a trained hand wielded the paddle. My boyhood summers in the Maine woods were not, I find, wholly wasted.

The owner of the canoe had evidently stolen close to the Glenarm dock, but had made off when alarmed by the noise of our approach through the wood.

"Have you a boat near here, Bates?" I asked.

"The boat house is locked and I haven't the key with me, sir," he replied, without excitement.

"Of course you haven't it," I rejoined, full of anger at his tone of irreproachable respect, and at my own helpfulness. I had not even seen the place by daylight, and the woodland behind me and the lake at my feet were things of shadow and mystery. In my rage I stamped my foot.

"Lead the way back," I roared.

I had turned toward the woodland when suddenly there stole across the water a voice,—a woman's voice, deep, musical and deliberate.

"Really, I shouldn't be so angry if I were you!" it said, with a lingering note on the word angry.

"Who are you? What are you doing there?" I bawled.

"Just enjoying a little tranquil thought!" was the drawling, mocking reply.

Far out upon the water I heard the dip and glide of the canoe, and saw faintly its outline for a moment; then it was gone. The lake, the surrounding wood, were an unknown world,—the canoe, a boat of dreams. Then again came the voice:

"Good night, merry gentlemen!"

"It was a lady, sir," remarked Bates, after we had waited silently for a full minute.

"How clever you are!" I sneered. "I suppose ladies prowl about here at night, shooting ducks or into people's houses."

"It would seem quite likely, sir."

I should have liked to cast him into the lake, but he was already moving away, the lantern swinging at his side. I followed him, back through the woodland to the house.

My spirits quickly responded to the cheering influence of the great library. I stirred the fire on the hearth into life and sat down before it, tired from my tramp. I was mystified and perplexed by the incident that had already marked my coming. It was possible, to be sure, that the bullet which narrowly missed my head in the little dining room had been a wild shot that carried no evil intent. I dismissed at once the idea that it might have been fired from the lake; it had crashed through the glass with too much force to have come so far; and, moreover, I could hardly imagine even a rifle ball finding an unimpeded right of way through so dense a strip of wood. I found it difficult to get rid of the idea that some one had taken a pot shot at me.

The woman's mocking voice from the lake added to my perplexity. It was not, I reflected, such a voice as one might expect to hear from a country girl; nor could I imagine any errand that would justify a woman's presence abroad on an October night whose cool air inspired first confidences with fire and lamp. There was something haunting in that last cry across the water; it kept repeating itself over and over in my ears. It was a voice of quality, of breeding and charm.

"Good night, merry gentlemen!"

In Indiana, I reflected, rustics, young or old, men or women, were probably not greatly given to salutations of just this temper.

Bates now appeared.

"Beg pardon, sir; but your room's ready whenever you wish to retire."

I looked about in search of a clock.

"There are no timepieces in the house, Mr. Glenarm. Your grandfather was quite opposed to them. He had a theory, sir, that they were conducive, as he said, to idleness. He considered that a man should work by his conscience, sir, and not by the clock,—the one being more exacting than the other."

I smiled as I drew out my watch,—as much at Bates' solemn tone and grim, lean visage as at his quotation from my grandsire. But the fellow puzzled and annoyed me. His unobtrusive black clothes, his smoothly-brushed hair, his shaven face, awakened an antagonism in me.

"Bates, if you didn't fire that shot through the window, who did—will you answer me that?"

"Yes, sir; if I didn't do it, it's quite a large question who did. I'll grant you that, sir."

I stared at him. He met my gaze without flinching; nor was there anything insolent in his tone or attitude. He continued:

"I didn't do it, sir. I was in the pantry when I heard the crash in the refectory window. The bullet came from out of doors, as I should judge, sir."

The facts and conclusions were undoubtedly with Bates, and I felt that I had not acquitted myself creditably in my effort to fix the crime on him. My abuse of him had been tactless, to say the least, and I now tried another line of attack.

"Of course, Bates, I was merely joking. What's your own theory of the matter?"

"I have no theory, sir. Mr. Glenarm always warned me against theories. He said—if you will pardon me—there was great danger in the speculative mind."

The man spoke with a slight Irish accent, which in itself puzzled me. I have always been attentive to the peculiarities of speech, and his was not the brogue of the Irish servant class. Larry Donovan, who was English born, affected at times an exaggerated Irish dialect that was wholly different from the smooth liquid tones of Bates. But more things than his speech were to puzzle me in this man.

"The person in the canoe? How do you account for her?" I asked.

"I haven't accounted for her, sir. There's no women on these grounds, or any sort of person except ourselves."

"But there are neighbors,—farmers, people of some kind must live along the lake."

"A few, sir; and then there's the school quite a bit beyond your own west wall."

His slight reference to my proprietorship, my own wall, as he put it, pleased me.

"Oh, yes; there is a school—girls?—yes: Mr. Pickering mentioned it. But the girls hardly paddle on the lake at night, at this season—hunting ducks—should you say, Bates?"

"I don't believe they do any shooting, Mr. Glenarm. It's a pretty strict school, I judge, sir, from all accounts."

"And the teachers—they are all women?"

"They're the Sisters of St. Agatha, I believe they call them. I sometimes see them walking abroad. They're very quiet neighbors, and they go away in the summer usually, except Sister Theresa. The school's her regular home, sir. And there's the little chapel just beyond the wall; the young minister lives there; and the gardener's the only other man on the grounds."

"Show me my cell," I said, rising, "and I'll go to bed."

He brought from somewhere a great brass candelabrum that held a dozen lights, and explained:

"This was Mr. Glenarm's habit. He always used this one to go to bed with. I'm sure he'd wish you to have it, sir."

He led the way, holding the cluster of lights high for my guidance up the broad stairway.

The hall above shared the generous lines of the whole house, but the walls were white and hard to the eye. Rough planks had been laid down for a floor, and beyond the light of the candles lay a dark region that gave out ghostly echoes as the loose boards rattled under our feet.

"I hope you'll not be too much disappointed, sir," said Bates, pausing a moment before opening a door. "It's all quite unfinished, but comfortable, I should say, quite comfortable."

"Open the door!"

He was not my host and I did not relish his apology. I walked past him into a small sitting-room that was, in a way, a miniature of the great library below. Open shelves filled with books lined the apartment to the ceiling on every hand, save where a small fireplace and a cabinet broke the line of shelving. In the center of the room was a long table with writing materials in nice order. I opened a handsome case and found that it contained a set of draftsman's instruments.

I groaned aloud.

"Mr. Glenarm preferred this room for working. The instruments were his very own, sir!"

"The devil they were!" I exclaimed, irascibly. I snatched a book from the nearest shelf and threw it open on the table. It was "The Tower: Its Early Use for Purposes of Defense. London: 1816."

I closed it with a slam.

"The sleeping-room is beyond, sir. I hope—"

"Don't you hope any more!" I growled; "and it doesn't make any difference whether I'm disappointed or not."

"Certainly not, sir!" he replied in a tone that made me ashamed of my anger.

The adjoining bedroom was small and meagerly furnished. The walls were untinted and were relieved only by prints of the English cathedrals, French chateaux, and like suggestions of the best things known to architecture. The bed was of the commonest iron type; and the other articles of furniture were chosen with a strict regard for utility. My trunks and bags had been carried in, and Bates asked my commands.

"Mr. Glenarm always breakfasted at seven-thirty, sir, as near as he could hit it without a timepiece; and he was quite punctual."

"My grandfather's breakfast hour will suit me exactly, Bates."

"If there's nothing further, sir—"

"That's all;—and Bates—"

"Yes, Mr. Glenarm."

"Of course you understand that I didn't really mean to imply that you had fired that shot at me?"

"I beg you not to mention it, Mr. Glenarm."

"But it was a little queer. If you should gain any light on the subject, let me know."

"Certainly, sir."

"And I believe, Bates, that we'd better keep the blinds down at night. These duck hunters hereabouts are apparently reckless. You might attend to them now,—and every evening hereafter."

He gravely bade me good night and I followed him to the outer door and watched his departing figure, lighted by a single candle that he had produced from his pocket.

I stood for several minutes listening to his step, tracing it through the hall below—as far as my knowledge of the house would permit. Then, in unknown regions, I could hear the closing of doors and drawing of bolts. Verily, my jailer was a person of painstaking habits.

I opened my traveling case and distributed its contents on the dressing table. I had carried through all my adventures a folding leather photograph holder, containing portraits of my father and mother and of John Marshall Glenarm, my grandfather, and this I set up on the mantel in the little sitting-room. It was with a new and curious interest that I peered into my grandfather's shrewd old eyes. He used to come and go fitfully at my father's house; but my father had displeased him in various ways that I need not recite, and my father's death had left me with an estrangement which I had widened by my own acts.

Now that I had reached Glenarm, my mind reverted to Pickering's estimate of the value of my grandfather's estate. Although John Marshall Glenarm was an eccentric man, he had been able to accumulate a large fortune; and yet I had tamely permitted the executor to tell me that he had died comparatively poor. In so readily accepting the terms of the will and burying myself in a region of which I knew nothing, I had cut myself off from the usual channels of counsel. If I left the place to return to New York I should simply disinherit myself. At Glenarm I was, and there I must remain to the end of the year. I grew bitter against Pickering as I reflected upon the ease with which he had got rid of me. I had always satisfied myself that my wits were as keen as his, but I felt now that I had stupidly put myself in his power.

CHAPTER V.
A Red Tam-o'Shanter.

I looked out on the bright October morning with a renewed sense of isolation. Trees crowded about my windows, many of them still wearing their festal colors, scarlet and brown and gold, with the bright green of some stubborn companion standing out here and there with startling vividness. I put on an old corduroy outing suit and heavy shoes, ready for a tramp abroad and went below.

The great library seemed larger than ever when I beheld it in the morning light. I opened one of the French windows and stepped out on a stone terrace, where I gained a fair view of the exterior of the house, which proved to be a modified Tudor, with battlements and two towers. One of the latter was only half-finished, and to it and to other parts of the house the workmen's scaffolding still clung. Heaps of stone and piles of lumber were scattered about in great disorder. The house extended partly along the edge of a ravine, through which a slender creek ran toward the lake. The terrace became a broad balcony immediately outside the library, and beneath it the water bubbled pleasantly around heavy stone pillars. Two pretty rustic bridges spanned the ravine, one near the front entrance, the other at the rear. My grandfather had projected his house on a generous plan, but buried as it was among the trees, it suffered the lack of perspective. However, on one side toward the lake was a fair meadow, broken by a water-tower, and just beyond the west dividing wall I saw a little chapel; and still farther, in the same direction, the outlines of the buildings of St. Agatha's were vaguely perceptible in another strip of woodland.

The thought of gentle nuns and schoolgirls as neighbors amused me. All I asked was that they should keep to their own side of the wall.

I heard behind me the careful step of Bates.

"Good morning, Mr. Glenarm. I trust you rested quite well, sir."

His figure was as austere, his tone as respectful and colorless as by night. The morning light gave him a pallid cast. He suffered my examination coolly enough; his eyes were, indeed, the best thing about him.

"You may breakfast when you like, sir,"—and thus admonished I went into the refectory.

A newspaper lay at my plate; it was the morning's issue of a Chicago daily. I was, then, not wholly out of the world, I reflected, scanning the headlines.

Bates had placed me so that I faced the windows, an attention to my comfort and safety that I appreciated. The broken pane told the tale of the shot that had so narrowly missed me the night before.

"I'll repair that to-day, sir," Bates remarked, seeing my eyes upon the window.

Bowling and General Sports

HAD A TIGHT SQUEEE.

Radin and Ackor Get a Game By a Single Pin.

Radin and Ackor and Skelly and Nash were the only contestants in McLaughlin's bowling tourney last night, and the former team won two games out of three. One of them was by the narrow margin of a single pin but as Nash and Skelly did the same trick to Mullen and Conklin last week the sting was taken out of the loss. All the games were close and the tallies showed a good average for all hands.

The scores:

Radin	199	197	156
Ackor	150	166	174
	349	363	330
vs.
Skelly	159	173	194
Nash	175	189	191
	334	362	385

HOPE BOYS WIN AGAIN.

Take the N. P. H. S. Five Into Camp By Score of 34 to 24.

The Hope chapel Boys' Club basketball team added another victory to its long string, last night, by taking the N. P. H. S. five into camp by a score of 34 to 24. The Hope boys played a snappy game from the instant the start was made and though their opponents were by no means out of form they had too much of an up-hill fight. At the end of the first half the score stood 24 to 16 in favor of Hope. The team lined up as follows:

BOYS' CLUB.		N. P. H. S.
Mortimer	left forward.	Conroy
Hunter	right forward.	Steiner
Snyder	centre.	McClintock
Rimmer	left guard.	Powlison
Meade	right guard.	Day

Goals from the field—Mortimer 3, Snyder 2, Rimmer 2, Conroy 8, Steiner 3; goals from centre (foul) Rimmer 6, Steiner 1, McClintock 1; referee, George McComb; umpire, Smith; scorer, Kenney; timekeeper, Firstbrook.

P. H. S. GIRLS' TEAM WINS.

Bayonne Loses on the Local Court—Score 35 to 3.

The girls' basketball team from the Bayonne High School was defeated yesterday by the girls' team of the Plainfield High School by the score of 35 to 3. The game was played on the Plainfield High School court and was one-sided from start to finish. Although the Bayonne girls played with an effort at team work they were outclassed at every turn and found difficulty in locating the ball until after it had gone through the basket.

With some delay but without serious difficulty P. H. S. kept the ball moving with a variety of original passes. The goal shooting was not up to the teams' standard. Miss Louise Andrews deserves special credit for her clever playing. Fouls were frequent on both sides.

The line-up:

BAYONNE.		P. H. S.
M. Frank	forwards.	B. Fleming
M. Faulkner	forwards.	G. Moody
E. Smith	centre.	L. Andrews
S. Durant	guards.	E. Crampton
F. Beling	guards.	B. Alpaugh

DUAL MEET EVENTS.

Programme of the Contest Between Plainfield and Passaic.

Candidates for the team to meet the Passaic Y. M. C. A. in the dual meet here February 21, will be tried out by Physical Director Listman at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium next Wednesday and Friday nights. The best in the ranks of the association athletes against Passaic, the aim being to pulverize Passaic so thoroughly that none of the visitors will be able to sleep for a week.

The following programme of events has been decided upon: Standing broad jump, running high jump, shot put, running high dive, potato race. First place will count five points, second place three points, third place one point. There will be prizes for individual winners and the winning team will get a shield.

COMPETITION STANDINGS.

Of Y. M. C. A. Seniors, Juniors and High School Boys to Date.

The revised standing of the contestants in the three championship athletic competitions at the Y. M. C. A., up to date, was announced by Physical Director Listman. Banks has a slim lead in the senior competitions, Morris is at the head of the High School boys, and Conroy is setting the pace hotly in the junior contest. The standing of contestants with over 100 points is as follows:

Seniors—Banks, 514; Burgess, 507; Rumsey, 428; Douglass, 398; Viebrock, 387; Lueder, 377; Odell, 326; Collier, 268; Line, 231; Hoagland, 206; Templin, 197; Manning, 186 Spear, 165; Slocum, 160; Wattrous, 142.

High School—Morris, 196; Freeman, 139; D. Wilcox, 126.

Juniors—Conroy, 266; Cowperthwait, 196; Vail, 190; R. Miller, 175; Richardson, 166; Lindzey, 130; Carson, 122.

BOWLING.

The Park Club bowling team will wind up its series in the Central Journal Bowling League tournament on Thursday night, February 14, when it will roll the Cranford Casino at Cranford.

Bayonne Teams Disbands.

Because the basketball team of the Bayonne High School has been disbanded, the management has cancelled the game scheduled with Plainfield High School for next Wednesday in this city. The members of the Bayonne team were back in their studies and the school authorities compelled the disbandment.

Frederick Sears, of North avenue, has been detained at home during the past week with throat trouble.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Communion services will be held at the Christian church on Sunday morning, February 17.

The Holy Cross Club will meet at the parish house at 7:30 o'clock tonight to make preparations for a play to be given in the near future.

There will be a special meeting of the Boys' Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church tomorrow afternoon in the church parlor at four o'clock.

The names of two faithful workers were omitted in yesterday's account of the Trinity Reformed church supper. They are Miss Leonora Miller, waitress, and Miss Sophia Dencklau in the kitchen.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian church will institute a sewing circle at the church on Thursday night. All the women of the church are invited to attend. The entertainment planned for Thursday night by the society has been postponed to Thursday night, February 21.

The Men's Club, of the First Baptist church, invites the women of the church and congregation to attend the illustrated lecture to be given Monday night by Dr. Corbusier, of Watchung, on "China and the Boxer Uprising." He will display a number of fine views. There will also be a musical programme.

CLOSED PORTALS.

Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet Monday night and adopt the new by-laws.

Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, has issued invitations for a "ladies' night" entertainment to be held in the lodge rooms on Thursday night. A fine programme has been prepared.

The Potter Printing Press Mutual Aid Society will hold a special meeting on Thursday night in Columbus Hall, East Front street, to adopt the new by-laws. An entertainment by local talent and a smoker will be enjoyed after the business session.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, at its meeting last night received four applications, accepted five and initiated one candidate. The members will visit Court Dunellen, No. 1123 on Monday night, leaving the Watchung avenue trolley stand at 8 o'clock.

CITY JOTTINGS.

—The Y. M. C. A. automobile school began its sessions last night, with fourteen pupils. The course will last three months.

—Charles H. Lyman, Jr., has given up his position with the Ingersoll-Rand Company, and is now associated with his father in the real estate business.

—Edwin J. Combs, of Bound Brook, was arrested last night on a charge of drunkenness, preferred by an oyster saloon proprietor. The complainant was not in court this morning, and the prisoner was released.

INDICTED FOR LOUD TALKING.

Because his neighbors said his loud voice disturbed them, Louis Prott, of No. 22 Prospect street, Elizabeth, was indicted and his case was tried Thursday before Judge Atwater and a jury in the Court of Quarter Sessions. The jury retired at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and as no agreement had been reached when the court adjourned the jury was locked up for the night. When court opened yesterday the jury reported that it could not agree, and it was discharged. The case will be retried.

About fifteen of Mr. Prott's neighbors said that their sleep had been seriously disturbed by his loud talking in the early hours of the morning. They said he would frequently have a friend or two at his home, and they would be aroused from their slumbers by the host's stentorian tones. This had become such a nuisance that they had been compelled to present a petition to Prosecutor English asking him to stop it.

Harvesting Fine Crop of Ice.

The Natural Ice Company has a full force of men at work at Watchung harvesting a fine crop of ice which now averages ten and twelve inches in thickness. The heavy snow early in the week delayed the cutting, as the men were obliged to stop and clear the pond. Cutting was resumed Wednesday night and has been continued ever since. The force will work all day tomorrow in an effort to fill the ice houses.

Writing Up Mining Tour.

William S. Bullock, of East Second street, is at Ely, Navada, a mining town, gathering material for a write-up on the mines of the district. He reached the place just a bit too late to witness what the White Pine News, of Ely, delicately describes as "a shooting match in the Thirst Parlor." Mr. Bullock has been engaged in mining reporting for some time.

Somerset County Hotel Sold.

Hotel Cawley, Somerville, one of the leading hostelries in Somerset county, which has been owned and operated for a number of years by William H. Cawley, was sold Thursday to G. J. Weinmann, of Denmark, N. J., who, several years ago, was successful as the manager of the business here. Mr. Weinmann will take possession on Monday.

BOMB KILLS JUSTICE AND HURTS HIS SON.

Deadly Machine Sent by Express Ends Life of Robert Cortese, of Paterson.

Robert Cortese, a Justice of the Peace of Paterson, was mortally and shockingly wounded in his office there yesterday evening by a bomb sent to him by express. His seventeen-year-old son, Robert, who was standing beside him when he opened the deadly machine, was injured seriously.

The explosion tore a hole five feet deep and ten feet in circumference through the floor of Cortese's office. The room was shattered and buildings for two blocks around were shaken as by an earthquake.

Cortese, as he lay dying in St. Joseph's Hospital, furnished the Paterson police with clews as to the identity of the possible sender of the bomb. The Justice of late had been the recipient of many threatening letters.

SPANISH PRISONER ONCE MORE.

Writes to Morristown Man to Take His Daughter and $175,000.

Morristown, Feb. 9.—Mrs. Samuel C. Weller, of Jackson Valley, has received a letter alleged to have been written in a Spanish prison last September and addressed to Mr. Weller, who died a few weeks ago. The writer says he is a Spaniard and that he married Mary Weller, a near relative of the Morristown man. The writer says he is serving eighteen years in a Spanish prison because he took up arms against the Spanish government in the late Cuban war.

After the war he learned, says the letter, that his wife had died and that his daughter was friendless. He determined to get her to this country, and in order to do so found it necessary to go to Spain. He was arrested and imprisoned there. He writes that he had a fortune of $175,000, and that he took the precaution, before going to Spain, of putting this money in a bank in England. The writer wants Mr. Weller to act as guardian for his daughter, and in return he says he will turn over to him the documents necessary to get the money.

ATTACKS PUBLIC SCHOOL

In Letter Read in St. Joseph's Bishop Says American System is a Failure.

HE CALLS IT UNFAIR

Bishop James A. McFaul Alleges That Non-Catholics See Danger In Present School System.

The Right Rev. James A. McFaul, Roman Catholic Bishop of Trenton, sent a pastoral letter to Rev. Father Miller, rector of St. Joseph's church, which was read yesterday to the congregation. A similar letter was read in all the churches of the diocese. In it he says that the present public school is a failure because it educates the head alone and not the heart. He denounces the present tax system as unfair and unconstitutional, because it taxes Catholics for maintenance of educational institutions which they cannot use without sacrificing their religious convictions.

The Bishop has been contending for years that the Catholic church was entitled to a division of the State school moneys for the Catholic parochial schools, and the denunciatory letter sent out for reading in Catholic churches means that some one of the legislators has a bill for partition of school moneys. Politicians have been expecting such a measure at this session, and are sorry that the church issue is about to be injected in State politics.

The Bishop says Catholics are beginning to see the evil resulting from not giving their children religious education, and he holds it almost confiscation of property to tax Catholics for the support of a public school system they cannot avail themselves of, he says:

"The State may furnish education providing it does not infringe on the parents. It may not, however, legitimately select a system of public education which many of its citizens are unable conscientiously to patronize. The rule of the majority may be as unjust as that of the greatest despot. The minority, even as a minority, has inalienable rights. It is undeniable that the State breaks its law, for it does not supply sufficient class room, not only for the Catholics now in the parish schools, but for the non-Catholic population.

"There is not room for our children in the public schools, and we could not patronze them if there was. We cannot use a system which bars religious instruction. It is certainly unjust to tax people for what they cannot conscientiously use."

He goes on to show that the maintenance of parochial schools by the Catholics saves the nation $181,099,962.39 per year in its educational outlay, New Jersey's share of this being $9,614,083.03. Then he continues by declaring that the State should be willing to pay for the secular education Catholic children receive in the parochial schools, saying that no pay was expected for the religious part of the training. He adds: "Let our children be examined by the State authorities, and if they are receiving the proper secular education let the State pay for it."

He concludes by deploring the country's evident drift from things religious, says that many parents fail to educate their children in religion, that many children do not go to Sunday school, and that because of this it is necessary that religion be taught in the schools if the country is to remain a Christian nation. He ends by saying:

"Many non-Catholic citizens see danger in the present school system. They perceive clearly that if the head alone is educated and the heart left fallow injury is done both to the individual and to society."

A Heart Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bennett, of the New Madison, gave a party at their home Friday night for their son and daughter, Henry Bennett and Miss May Bennett. The evening was spent in playing hearts and at the conclusion prizes were presented. Miss Ethel Runyon received first prize for the girls, Miss Alice Drake second and Miss Helen George booby prize. Allen Diman received the first prize for the boys, Malcomb Krewson second and Andrew Stiglitz the booby prize. The girls' prizes were a burned wood handkerchief box, a Teddy bear and a pig pin cushion. The prizes for the boys were a penknife, a stickpin of hearts and a peacock. The home was decorated with red and white colors. After the game refreshments were served. Those present were the Misses Ethel Runyon, Lois Diman, Alice Drake, Helen Gorge, Ruth Wean, Edith Lyons, May Bennett, and Ralph Martin, Malcomb Krewson, Andrew Stiglitz, Pierson Bailey, Allen Diman and Henry Bennett.

S. P. C. A. STARTS OFF

Gets Charter and Begins Planning Benefits For Dumb Beasts.

FOUNTAINS SUGGESTED

Dr. Knott Warns Against Old Fashioned Horse Trough and Advocates Bucket Service As More Sanitary.

Active work was outlined by the newly-organized S. P. C. A. at a meeting in Judge W. A. Coddington's office this morning. The society's charter was received in due form, and plans were considered for immediate unlimbering of all the ordinance with which the society is armed for the rescue of suffering beasts. It is hoped to extend the work to North Plainfield, South Plainfield, Dunellen, Fanwood, Scotch Plains and Westfield. Steps have been taken to conduct the crusade in conjunction with the society at Somerville.

President L. V. F. Randolph was in the chair this morning. Dr. M. O'M. Knott, a veterinary well known among the owners of thoroughbred dogs and horses here, attended the meeting and spoke on the necessity of furnishing protection for dogs. Some method of saving dogs from quick condemnation to death, under suspicion of rabies, should be devised, he said. Dogs suffering only from acute indigestion were often called mad and hunted to death.

The subject of a drinking fountain for horses and dogs in the centre of the city was discussed. Dr. Knott warned the members against a fountain, as unsanitary. A bucket stand would be better, he said. The need of a drinking place for dogs was said to be urgent as humane societies look on such things. Dogs are thirsty animals and suffer much from lack of water.

Several letters were received asking if the statutes made no provision for putting dogs or cats to death on request by citizens. The society knew of no such law; the householder was expected to act as his own executioner. As a matter of fact, the police of this city have, for years, gone after and shot any animal condemned to death by its owner, arranging for the removal of the carcass by a knacker after the execution.

The society hopes to reach a membership of 300 shortly. The memberships are of two sorts—life, costing $10; and annual, costing $1 a year. It is hoped to get 100 life members and 200 of the others. Subscriptions may be sent to Mrs. G. W. Bunnell, Berkeley avenue, the treasurer, who will forward membership cards promptly in return.

The executive committee of the society is made up of L. V. F. Randolph, Mrs. Knox Taylor, Mrs. D. Rapalje, Miss Edith Smalley and Dr. T. S. Davis.

Exchanged Pulpits.

Rev. Dr. John H. Raven, of the Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, occupied at the pulpit at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday morning in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, who preached at the opening of the New Jersey Conference of Charities and Corrections at Paterson. In the evening Rev. L. R. Howard, of Hope chapel, preached for him.

Senator Briggs Will Speak.

GRACE M.E. ANNIVERSARY

Congregation Holds Special Services to Celebrate Completion of 15th Year.

CLEARED CHURCH DEBT

Ready Response to Dr. Parsons' Appeal and $1,800 Is Pledged By the Members.

With a long standing debt of $1,700 removed and a substantial amount added to the treasury, the members of Grace M. E. church ended their fifteenth anniversary celebration in a happy frame of mind, last night. It was one of the most eventful days in the history of the congregation and the members displayed an enthusiasm that had in no wise been anticipated. The money needed to free the church from its financial obligation within a few dollars was pledged at the first service held in the morning, and more than enough was secured at night. Dr. Parsons was most agreeably surprised and there is no one connected with the church who appreciated the result to any greatre degree.

The first service of the day was held at the usual hour in the morning and was in charge of the pastor. Rev. Herbert H. Randolph, of Hoboken, who was the first conference pastor of the church, preached the sermon, taking as his subject, "Faith, the Ideal and Real of Life." It was filled with wholesome truths and was enjoyed by his hearers in a double sense. When Mr. Randolph concluded, Dr. Parsons presented the financial statement of the church and made an appeal for the wiping out of the indebtedness. The response came very quickly and almost $1,700 was soon tallied up. Dr. H. K. Carroll, who was really the first pastor of the church, having been appointed by the elder until the conference acted, was an interested spectator.

In the afternoon the Sunday-school held special exercises in connection with the anniversary and the attendance was very large. A feature of the programme was the reading of a historical sketch of the department by Superintendent W. J. Conroy, while Miss Nettie Beeching, who has been prominent in State Sunday-school work, gave an address on "Our Sunday-school." A debt of $100 in the department account was pledged during the session.

The final service of the day was held at night with an attendance larger than was noted either morning or afternoon. There were several speakers announced by Dr. Parsons, the first of whom was Dr. Carroll. He related in a concise manner "The Birth of the Enterprise," telling how the plans to establish the North Plainfield branch of the M. E. church had been formulated and how it had quickly grown into a reality and then became an independent organization. Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer followed with an address, "The Value of the Church of Christ in the Community," and Dr. G. H. Whitney, president emeritus of the Centenary Institute, gave a reminiscent talk. In conclusion Dr. Parsons spoke briefly on "The Outlook and Hope for the Future." An additional $100 was secured for the church fund at this service, putting the total amount for the day well over $1,800.

The music during all three of the services was excellent and formed no small part of the programmes. E. C. Martin was solist morning and evening and rendered several selections.

—The Rasores Club, which was to have met tomorrow morning at the home of Mrs. I. C. Pierson, of Watchung avenue, has postponed the meeting for one week on account of the holiday.

STRICKEN ON SAME DAY; DEATH BUT LITTLE APART

UNUSUAL CIRCUMSTANCES IN DEMISE OF MR. AND MRS. JAMES ARMSTRONG

Surviving his wife by little more than twelve hours, James Armstrong, of Prospect place, passed away at his home Saturday evening. Mrs. Armstrong had died earlier in the day, pneumonia being the cause in both instances.

Husband and wife were out on a shopping trip one week ago Saturday and on returning home were taken ill. Pneumonia developed and both were in a serious condition before they fully realized it. When Mrs. Armstrong died in the morning the fact could not be kept from the husband and he began to sink immediately.

Mr. Armstrong was sixty years of age and had resided in Plainfield for many years. Until a short time ago he lived on West Fifth street near Plainfield avenue and the acquaintance of both himself and wife in that section of the city was very wide. He was a member of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and both he and his wife were members of Grace P. E. church. At the time his illness began Mr. Armstrong was employed by J. W. Gavet, of West Front street. The only surviving relatives are a brother and sister to Mr. Armstrong: Robert Armstrong, of East Fourth street, and Miss Mary Armstrong, of West Seventh street, and a sister of Mrs. Armstrong who lives in New England. The latter is ill at the present time and is unable to come to this city.

The funeral of husband and wife will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon and will be private.

SERVANT FAILS IN A SUIT AGAINST EMPLOYER

OTHER CASES DECIDED IN THE DISTRICT COURT THE MORNING.

Helmuth Lampe, a gardner and man-of-allwork, failed in his suit against Simeon A. Cruikshank for a month's wages and board at $1 a day in the District Court this morning. He contended that he had been illegally discharged. Mr. Cruikshank showed that the man had been insubordinate and rude, and then left of his own volition. Judge Newcorn rendered a verdict of no cause of action. W. A. Coddington appeared for the defendant.

In the suit of Scheerer & Crown, an installment firm, against Ellen Woodson, in replevin, title to the goods was found to the plaintiff, to the value of $12.67, and damages to the amount of six cents was awarded for unlawful detention. W. L. Hetfield, Jr., appeared for the plaintiff.

D. A. de Lima & Co., of New York, received a verdict for $67 against H. Fartonte, on a note. F. J. Blatz appeared for the plaintiff.

The decision in the case of the Sunlight Gas Co. against Jasper Cadmus, in which counsel had submitted lengthy briefs, was rendered. The court found for the plaintiff in the sum of $3.83, for the cost of burners used in the gas machine in dispute. The title of the machine remains in the company and the verdict throws the costs on the defendant. H. C. Runyon was the company's lawyer.

MARTINE FOR GOVERNOR.

Democrats View Him as Logical Candidate.

The Democrats believe that a Democratic Governor may be the outcome of these contentions on the other side, and are looking about carefully for their most available man. The friends of James F. Martine, of Union county, who received the minority caucus nomination for the Senatorship against Briggs, believe that he has thus been put in line for the nomination; and there are others who think that his title of "Farmer-Orator" will go a long way toward making him popular in the rural districts of the State. Charles C. Black and Colonel Edwin A. Stevens, of Hudson, also have hopes in that direction; but both are regarded as impossibilities, as the land lies today. —New York Times.

CHURCH TEN YEARS OLD

Monroe Ave. Methodists Celebrate Decade of United Christian Effort.

A PROSPEROUS FLOCK

Review of Work of Sunday-school and Various Church Auxiliaries —Sermon By the Pastor.

The tenth anniversary services of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church were concluded yesterday, with special meetings in the morning and evening. It was expected that Rev. Dr. John Hamilton Howard, of the Summerfield M. E. church, Staten Island, would preach the anniversary sermon in the morning, but he was unable to do so, and the pastor, Rev. E. E. Roberson, delivered the sermon. It was an interesting and impressive discourse, in which he recited briefly important features of the work performed by the church.

N. Mansfield Smith, secretary to the Board of Trustees, at the evening service presented an extended historical sketch of the church covering the past ten years. The report notes an increase in the membership of the Sunday-school under the direction of Superintendent Walter M. McGee. The total enrollment for the year was 367, with an average attendance of 192, divided as follows: Main school, 183; primary, 65; kindergarten, 59; home department, 40; cradle roll, 20. Largest attendance, Children's Day, June 10, 352; smallest attendance, October 21, 73. Total receipts for the year, $435.26; disbursements, $435.26.

The work of the Ladies' Aid Society shows an increase in membership and much good accomplished. Socials and entertainments have been well attended. The principal item in the disbursements was the donation of $100 to the church. The receipts for the year were $206.83 and disbursements $194.22, leaving a balance of $12.71.

The Epworth League was reported to be in good condition, spiritually and otherwise. The receipts for the year were $106.47, disbursements, $82.71, leaving a balance of $23.76. The work of Epworth House Library continues to progress, having now over 1,700 volumes and during the year a new catalogue was issued. A feature of the work of the Junior Epworth League has been the study of the catechism and regular attendance of children.

The Men's Association, an important factor in the church work, has accomplished much work. Receipts for the year were $58.06, disbursements, $41.69, leaving a balance of $16.37. The Mercy and Help Society reported receipts of $27.06, disbursements of $22.75 and a balance of $4.31.

Considerable space is devoted in the sketch to the work of the missionary societies of the church, consisting of home, foreign and Standard Bearers. The Women's Home Auxiliary reported receipts of membership dues at $18.93, contingent fund $1.60, from entertainment, $18.50; silver offering contributions by members, $42.66, a total of $81.69.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society has sixteen members in good standing and its receipts for the year were $17.50, in addition to paying for the schooling of a girl in India. The Standard Bearers reported receipts of $17.15. The total receipts of the church were reported to be $2,511.46, disbursements $2,471.42, with a balance on December 31, 1906, of $40.04.

The sketch also pays deserving tribute to the earnest work of Rev. E. E. Roberson, the present pastor, who succeeded Rev. George Mooney, and states that under his pastorate many new members have been received during the past year as the result of special efforts.

Following the historical sketch, an excellent address was delivered by Rev. Frank Fletcher, formerly pastor of the Baptist church at New Market. Mr. Fletch congratulated the church on its substantial growth and increasing interest and then made remarks of a general character bearing on Christian work, which were of great help and encouragement. This closed the series of anniversary services held during the week and which were fruitful of many blessings.

John Doud's Funeral.

The funeral of Jomn McBain Doud, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doud, of Duer street, who died Saturday noon, will be held in St. Joseph's church tomorrow morning at 9:30. A solemn mass of requiem will be said by Rev. Father Miller. The interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Will Close at 5:30 o'Clock.

From the present time "The White Store" will close every afternoon, except Saturday, at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Saturday night the store will remain open until 10 o'clock.

GREET MRS. R.S. ROWLAND

Reception and Tea Given in Her Honor by Mrs. D. H. Rowland.

A BRILLIANT FUNCTION

Many Friends From New York, Pittsburg, Brooklyn, Orange, Bergent Point and St. Louis Attend the Affair.

Without doubt the most brilliant society function of the season was the reception and tea given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. David Hill Rowland, of West Seventh street, in honor of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Rufus Story Rowland, for the purpose of introducing her to the society people of Plainfield and North Plainfield. During the hours from four to seven o'clock, more than four hundred guests called and enjoyed the delightful features. There were guests from New York, Pittsburg, Brooklyn, Orange, Bergen Point, St. Louis, and this city, the charming home of Mr. and Mrs. Rowland, presenting an attractive picture thronged with handsomely gowned women.

Mrs. David Hill Rowland and Mrs. Rufus Story Rowland were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Charles C. Marshall, of New York, and Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead, of this city. Mrs. David Hill Rowland was gowned in heliotrope satin, while her daughter-in-law wore her wedding gown of white satin, trimmed with point lace and orange blossoms. Mrs. Marshall's gown was of red velvet and that of Mrs. Mead was black velvet.

Those in the dining room who poured were Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, Mrs. Daniel Runkle, Mrs. DeWitt C. Ivins, Mrs. Thomas Mills Day, Mrs. Edward A. Stevenson, Mrs. William M. Wherry, Jr., Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor and Mrs. Edward Vermelye Cox, all of this city.

The young women who assisted were Miss Matie Wadsworth, Miss Georgianna Smith, Miss Valiant, the Misses Harman, Miss Grace Kaufman, Miss Margaret McCutchen, Miss Margaret Mead, of this city; Miss Painter, of Pittsburg, who was a bridesmaid at Mrs. Rowland's wedding, and Miss Lackland, of St. Louis.

The home was lavishly decorated with palms, ferns, southern smilax and flowers. In the reception room pink roses were used almost exclusively, while in the library yellow jonquils made a most effective arrangement. The decorations in the dining room were all white and there was a profusion of roses of that color to garnish the table. Throughout the smilax combined to make the general decoration a pleasing one.

A feature that added to the brilliancy of the affair was the music by Austin's stringed orchestra. The programme was a delightful one. Following the reception which lasted until 7 o'clock, an informal supper was given for relatives and intimate friends of the young couple. In addition to Miss Painter, of Pittsburg, Miss Dorthy Morgan, of New Haven; Mortimer Adams, of New York, and J. Whitney Baker, of this city, the last two named ushers, members of the bridal party present.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Story Rowland were married in Pittsburg several weeks ago, and recently returned from their honeymoon. Mrs. Rowland and Miss Margarita Frew, daughter of William N. Frew, of Pittsburg, the personal representative of Andrew Carnegie, in that city. She was socially prominent in Pittsburg, being a leader among the younger set. Mr. Rowland is equally prominent in social circles both here and in New York. He is engaged in the banking business in New York with his father. He was graduated from Yale last year.

There is now in course of construction and almost completed a handsome dwelling on Stelle avenue, where Mr. and Mrs. Rowland will reside. They expect to occupy their home about March 1.

Entertained at East Orange.

Society notes of the Oranges recorded a dinner given last Thursday night by Misses Emma, Helen and Susan Dill, daughters of Judge and Mrs. James R. Dill, of East Orange, to Miss Ottalie H. Lohrke, of East Orange, and her fiance, the Rev. George H. Warner, rector of Holy Cross Episcopal church, of this city. The dinner was given at the Essex County Country Club and covers were laid for twenty.

Mrs. B. A. Brown Breaks Her Arm.

Mrs. B. A. Brown, of Orchard place, is detained at home, the result of an accident on Saturday, when she sustained a double break of the left arm, between the wrist and elbow. The accident happened in front of The Plainfield Trust Company building on Park avenue, where Mrs. Brown slipped on some ice. She was assisted to her home and Dr. Lufburrow was called and set the breaks.

ACKERMAN FOR VOORHEES

Union Co.'s Senator Assures "Uncle Dan" He Will Support Him For Treasurership.

OTHERS BOOM MR. REED

Senator Frelinghuysen Said to Be Supporting North Plainfielder—Briggs Has Resigned.

Despite the fact that State Senator Ackerman and other North Jersey leaders in the Legislature have promised to vote for "Uncle Dan" Voorhees for the place, it is said that former State Senator Charles A. Reed still has excellent chances of succeeding Frank O. Briggs as State Treasurer. Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen, of Somerset county, is reported to be working in Mr. Reed's interests and some tall electioneering is being done in a quiet but effective way. In Plainfield, with the exception of City Clark MacMurray, all the Republican leaders are said to be solid for the North Plainfielder, and some arguments are being brought to bear by them on friendly legislators.

United States Senator-elect Frank O. Briggs has sent to President of the Senate Bloomfield H. Minch, as chairman of the joint session, his resignation as State Treasurer, to take effect March 1.

Because of the fact that tomorrow is Lincoln's Birthday, the customary Monday night and Tuesday morning sessions of the Legislature will be dispensed with. Instead, the Legislature will meet Wednesday afternoon. Assemblyman Alfred M. Barber, minority leader of the House, stated last night that while no call had been sent out as yet for a caucus to nominate a State Treasurer, it is likely that the matter will be discussed in a conference sometime this week and possibly Wednesday afternoon, either preceding or after the regular session.

Others who have been mentioned in connection with the treasurership are State Assessor David Baird, the reputed "boss" of Camden, Senator Edmund W. Wakelee, of Bergen, and Assemblyman Elvins, of Atlantic county.

It is possible that the Democratic assemblymen may interefer with the plans of the Republicans by refusing to enter a joint meeting, and inasmuch as the Democrats are in control of the house, their refusal to participate would make a joint meeting impossible. Nothing more potent than talk, however, has been indulged in on this possibility and the indications are that the Democrats will not follow the precedent set by the Republicans some 20 years ago, when the possibilities of direct and immediate gain are rather remote.

Coming as it does almost immediately after a contest which consumed several weeks of the present session, the selection of a state treasurer will tend to further interfere with the real work of the Legislature. While it is not likely that the contest over the treasurership will be so prolonged as was he senatorial fight, it will probably extend over this week and at least a part of next.

SARTORIAL CRITIC PINCHED.

Kruger Smashed Show Case While Kicking on Clothes Fit.

Theodore Kruger, twenty-eight years old, a night watchman living in Westfield, was arrested at a Front street clothing store Saturday night for acting in a disorderly manner. He bought a suit there and didn't like the way it fitted. While emphasizing the sartorial shortcomings of the alleged hand-me-down he banged his fist through a showecase.

The proprietor could bear up under the strictures on the hang of the "nobby," "swell" and "dressy" garments, but he wouldn't stand for a broken case. He gave the police the distress signal and Patrolman McGinley took the clothes critic to the coop. The clothing store man refused to appear in court this morning and Kruger was released.

A Straw Ride.

A straw ride to Westfield was enjoyed Saturday evening by members of St. Faith's Guild and St. Stephen's Juniors and their friends. Refreshments were served at the parish house on their return. Those in the party were the Misses Blanche Miller, Edith Lacey, Emily Lacey, Carrie Mulford, Laura Christiansen, Christine Sorensen, Mamie Erickson, Lizzie Currin, Rachael Currin, Mrs. Herbert Guinn, Misses Sullivan, Breakey, Slorah, Helen Borrup, Eleanor Gudberg, Edna Willis, and Messrs. F. Brooks, Herbert Guinn, George Bowe, Herbert Dobbs, George Dobbs, John King, S. Guttridge, Louis Clark, Lewis Willis, Fred Cook, Evan Peterson and George Bennett.

Robert A. Suffern, of the borough, is registered at the Chalfonte, Atlantic City.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Although convalescent from a severe attack of the grip, the deacons of the Baptist church would not hear of Rev. T. Moore-Smith occupying his pulpit yesterday, as they believed he needed another week before assuming his regular pastoral work. Rev. Frank Fletcher, of New Market, preached the sermon at the morning service. No evening preaching was held, the day's services ending with the B. Y. P. U. meeting at 7:15.

The Farther Lights Society of the Baptist church held a successful cake and apron sale, Saturday night, in the church parlors. Everything in the apron line, from the gingham kitchen to the finest creations, were found on sale and found ready purchasers. Those who had a sweet tooth could indulge in their taste as long as their money lasted. Between the two attractions the society realized a neat little sum.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Maclyn Arbuckle, the Hon. Jim Hackler, of George Ade's best comedy, "The County Chairman," says that all he has to do in this comedy is to be himself. And whosoever knows the big-hearted American actor from Texas, who is starring in George Ade's splendid character drama, knows that he says the truth. It is natural for him to play the big-hearted, good-natured political boss, as he is big-hearted and good-hearted himself, and used to be mixed up in the politics of his county way down in Texas in the early eighties. He knows those interesting types of the small middle-western village just as well as George Ade, who is such a close observer of the human heart. Maclyn Arbuckle will return with his splendid production of "The County Chairman" to the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

Wilton Lackaye in his own dramatization of "Les Miserables" called "The Law and the Man," will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night. The company numbers forty people and includes a dozen of New York's best known and most versatile artists.

What is considered to be the acme of stage production, both from a scenic and dramatic view point, will be the offering at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night. The play to be presented will be "The Shoemaker," with Joe Welch as the star. Few comedians and character actors have risen to the highest pinnacle of their profession in so short a time as has Mr. Welch. As the exponent of a certain type of Hebrew this young Thespian is acknowledged to be without a rival. In his latest play he is provided with a part that gives him rare opportunities to display his peculiar talent and skill. As Morris Goldberg, a poor, misguided mender and maker of shoes, Mr. Welch is invested with a role that reflects his personality, genius and capabilities as an actor and comedian to a remarkable degree of perfection.

In "A Marriage of Reason," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next week, Kyrle Bellew is said to have quite the happiest role in his career. As an English Earl who is the essence of good fellowship and good form, opulent and high spirited, but bankrupt in purse, who marries an American girl, beautiful and of course wealthy, and then falls desperately in love with her, the star has a thousand opportunities to display that finesse and elegance of artistry which caused the terms "matinee idol" and "Apollo of the stage" to be coined in his honor when he first became popular in America. There is an American girl for the heroine who will win the hearts of playgoers quite as completely as she grows to dominate that of her noble husband. Miss Fannie Ward plays this role of Rita Forrest, the Chicago heiress. The company is remarkably strong, including Miss Julia Dean, Miss Margaret Fuller, Miss Maud Ream Stover, Frederic de Belleville, Conway Tearle, J. K. Adams and Master Richard Storey.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

John Winzenreid, the general trucker of Lee place, is always prepared to attend to all orders left in his charge.

Brokaw's creamery is headquarters for milk, cream, butter and eggs, the finest products to the dairy, absolutely pure and at right prices.

Have you inspected the fine line of goods at "The White Store," on West Front street? If not you have no idea of the great bargains to be had there. The store is just filled with new goods in every department from men's furnishings to everything for women. The military department is also a feature not to be overlooked.

FINDS OLD ENEMY IN COURT.

Gypsy Has Man Arrested for Alleged Theft Two Years Ago.

George Nickol, a gypsy, was held as a fugitive from justice Friday by Judge McCarthy in the Second Criminal Court, Jersey City. The complainant, Louis Mitchell, also a gypsy, said that Nickol stole $4,000 from him in Jackson county, Mass., two years ago, and produced papers to show that a warrant had been issued for his arrest in that State.

A hearing is in progress in Jersey City in the case of a gypsy chief who is accused of extorting money from members of other tribes. Mitchell was at the hearing, was surprised to find Nickol one of the spectators, and promptly had him arrested.

Mayor Shakes Up Railroad.

Vineland, Feb. 11.—Mayor Sawyer shook up the Jersey Central Railroad Thursday afternoon by arresting W. H. Warner, conductor, and the crew of his freight train, on the charge of obstructing street crossings longer than the five minutes allowed by the borough ordinance. The hearing was set for this morning, before Justice of the Peace Browne. It is said the railroad will be in court with an array of the best counsel to fight the ordinance.

CLOSED PORTALS.

Plainfield Lodge, Jr. O. U. A. M. will meet tonight and in addition to acting upon the new by-laws will receive several propositions for membership.

Rev. T. E. Davis, formerly of this city, but now of Washington, where he is pastor of a Presbyterian church, was given the third degree in Masonry in Lebanon Lodge, Washington, a few days ago, the work being conducted by Rev. Mr. Skellinger, formerly of Dunellen.

The Newark Lodge of Elks has had prepared for introduction in the Legislature, next week, a bill which is intended to prevent any unauthorized person or persons from using the name or emblem of that or any other incorporated fraternal organization, directly or indirectly, to advertise any public gathering which the public might be led to infer was conducted under the auspices of the organization. Last year a similar law was enacted, making it a misdemeanor for any person to use the insignia or emblem of a fraternal organization to obtain recognition, aid or assistance of members. The reason given for preparing the bill is that individuals not connected with the organization have recently placarded entertainments by means of posters and hangers with the word "elk" in large letters and that of a "club or association" underneath in small type, and used the elk's head, the insignia of the order. The bill, which will be a further supplement to the crimes act, has been prepared and will be introduced by one of the several legislators who are members of the organization.

Louis Klopsch Elopes.

South Norwalk, Conn., Feb. 11.—Louis Klopsch, son of Louis Klopsch, editor of the Christian Herald, and Miss Hattie DeKlyn, one of the prettiest society women of Norwalk, eloped yesterday and were married in Port Chester, N. Y. The bride-room is but seventeen years of age and his bride is considerably older. Young Klopsch was a student at the Harrison School, in Norwalk. He had given up his studies with the intention of entering business and supporting his wife.

Pays $6,000 Anonymously.

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 11.—Some conscience stricken person has paid to the city of New Haven $6,000. Why he did it cannot be ascertained, and the money has been added to the city's sinking fund, making it $119,000. Leonard M. Daggett, Corporation Counsel, today said an intermediary recently handed him the $6,000 in bank notes and declined to tell for whom he was acting.

State's Biggest Towel Sale!

The MOST REMARKABLE OFFERING New Jersey Has Ever Known

We are going to make this a great Towel Week—the greatest Newark or New Jersey has ever known, and during the week we will offer every desirable kind of towel known to the trade at prices that will make the town talk. Mind you, towel prices in general have greatly advanced, but notwithstanding this fact, we are going to sell these towels much under price and the prices we name will be lower than last year's lowest prices.

We will include all linen and cotton towels in every wanted size.

Huck Towels, Damask Towels Linen Crepe Towels, Turkish Towels, Friction Towels, Baby Towels, Famous Rub Dry Towels and Sanitary Towels

Special prices will run from 8c to $1.25 each

TWENTY CASES OF MILL ENDS

TURKISH BATH TOWELS, BATH MATS and WASH CLOTHS

Will be added to this Towel Sale to make Towel Week all the more notable at the usual phenomenally low prices. These are the mill ends which the makers cast aside because of slight imperfections which do not in the least affect the towel for genetal service, the hurts only marring the appearance and making them what are known as manufacturers' seconds. These sales have always been tremendous successes and our patrons understand full well just what this announcement means. The prices on the various lots will run like this:

2c, 5c, 7c, 9c, 12c, 15c, 18c, 20c up

RIDGWAY'S NO MORE.

The Weekly Stops Publication and Its Owner Tells Why.

Ridgway's Weekly is no more. Yesterday's issue contains its valedictory. In it the editor tells frankly why he stops the publication. The substance of the explanation is that he found it impossible to get out fourteen magazines in as many cities on a newspaper basis.

Mr. Ridgway began his venture nineteen weeks ago by publishing a weekly simultaneously in fourteen of the largest cities in the country. After two months he stopped all of them but four. Later he got out only the New York edition.

He says that the people wouldn't buy a poorly printed magazine—and Ridgway's, being printed very quickly to be right up to the minute, didn't have the gloss and brilliance of color that people were accustomed to in magazines.

On the first page of yesterday's issue the announcement is made thus: "Ridgway's stops publication—for the present."

LITERALLY GROUND TO PIECES.

Horrible Mutilated Body of Unidentified Man Found at Rahway.

Rahway, Feb. 11.—The body of an unidentified man, literally ground to pieces, was found at the Pennsylvania Railroad Junction, below Rahway, Thursday night, at about 10 o'clock, and brought to this city, where it now is at Ryno & High's undertaking rooms.

The man, who was well dressed, was apparently about forty years of age, and had light brown hair and mustache. On his right arm was tattooed a five-pointed star, on the left an American eagle, with the national coat of arms. In his possession were found a Lehigh Valley Railroad Duplex ticket, H 64,326, with no name of station, also a duplex ticket, R 95,620, P. R. R., Elizabeth to Rahway. Lying by his side was $126 in cash. No other marks or papers were found to aid identification.

For Peace in Central America.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—If the good offices of the United States and Mexico can prevent war in Central America over boundary troubles there will be no war; for each country has ordered its representatives to exert their influence to that end and to represent to the countries involved that they are expected to observe to the letter the treaties recently signed, which provide for the settlement by arbitration of all such difficulties. Just the exact cause of the difficulty is not known at the State Department, but there is no question that the feeling between Honduras and Nicaragua is very bitter and strong and is likely to result in hostilities. The boundary question is one which has been running for many years and involves the question whether or not any of the countries may mass troops near the line which divides it from another. This measure is regarded as one which is taken as a precaution against activity on the part of one country when its neighbor is in the throes of revolution and the forwarding of filibustering parties across the line.

Press Agent Splits Family.

New York, Feb. 11.—No one can tell how many family quarrels the press agent of a Broadway show has caused by sending out postal cards as if they were personal communications and telling what a good show it is, but he is indirectly responsible for a divorce action which John Fitz, a hotel proprietor in Maspeth, L. I., has brought against Mary Fitz. Mrs. Fitz was away from home on January 17 when a postal card arrived, signed "Frank," saying that he was seeing New York and how he wished she could see this particular show. Mr. Fitz saw this card, and when his wife returned the next day demanded an explanation. The one she gave was not satisfactory, although she denied being in New York, and he started an investigation. This resulted in his divorce action.

Trust Evidence Disappears.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Practically all of the State's evidence in its suit against the American Ice Trust has disappeared from the Attorney General's office. The evidence, in the form of copies of books, contracts, &c., in the office of the trust, was enough to fill a good hized truck. How it ever got out of the Attorney General's office is a mystery, but one supposition is that it was carried away piecemeal. Another theory is that most of the papers never reached the Albany office of the Attorney General, but disappeared either from the New York city office or while in transit between those two offices. The disappearance of the papers occurred during the administration of Julius M. Mayer as Attorney General, according to statements made at Attorney General Jackson's office.

Henpecked Man Lies in a Coop.

Meridan, Conn., Feb. 11.—Ordered by his wife to leave the home of her parents, where they were living, Peter St. Martin, of South Manchester, took up his abode in a chicken coop. There he lived undisturbed for weeks until yesterday, when he was arrested on suspicion of having stolen tableware from his father-in-law.

Five Killed at Crossing.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 11.—Five persons are reported killed and many injured by a train which ran into a crowded East Lake trolley car at seven o'clock last evening.

MARTINE FOR GOVERNOR.

The fair and frank press of New Jersey, regardless of political leanings, is paying handsome tributes these days to James E. Martine in connection with his boom for the the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Martine, himself, says he doesn't want the nomination, declaring that his sole ambition has been to go to the National Legislature, but the "farmer orator" has said those things before and his friends count on again pursuading him to become a candidate. The marvellous run he made against Charles N. Fowler for Congress coupled with the united support given him by the Democrats in the State Legislature for the United States Senatorship brings him to the fore as the most likely one for gubernatorial honors.

Among the countless tributes paid to him during the last week or so, the editorial in yesterday's Newark Call is a good sample. The Call says:

"The nomination of James E. Martine, the 'farmer orator,' for United States Senator by the Democratic caucus last week, is supposed to indicate his candidacy for Governor next fall. Mr. Martine seems to be one of those plain people who often succeed very well in politics and who do very fair service to the public as well. His chances of success would certainly be better than those of any Democratic nominee for the last dozen years. The Republicans have worked pretty hard to throw away their big majority in this State, and they will have to present a candidate who will have support more than local to retain their control. The macrine has been a failure. It is bad enough to be wrong, but even the machinist in politics despises a blunderer."

MR. REED'S CANDIDACY.

The logical candidate for State Treasurer is Charles Arthur Reed, although it is rather doubtful whether the honor will come to him. Politics is a funny thing. Not infrequently the most deserving and best qualified are stood aside to reward those of markedly inferior ability. Were it otherwise, Frank O. Briggs would not have been elected United States Senator for who would think of placing him in the same cl... with such brilliant men as John W. Griggs, Mahlon Pitney and Edward C. Stokes.

In the present contest that Mr. Reed would be a better choice than "Uncle Dan" Voorhees, known to fame as the boss of Morris county, can hardly be gainsaid. The former Senator from Somerset county has had much experience in State affairs. As president of the Senate he showed himself to be a man of exceptional ability. He is a lawyer of high rank and is altogether a broad, level-headed and intellectual personage. Five years ago he came within one vote of being chosen to fill an unexpired term for the treasurership, the honor at that time going to Mr. Briggs. His services to the party have been valuable and today he is still without doubt the strongest figure in the Republican party in Somerset county. Mr. Reed is the man for the place.

FREE HEALTH.

In his address "The Safety, Honor and Welfare of the People," Hugh F. Fox, at the Charities Conference, discussed at length "free health," which he referred to as a new idea. By this is meant the right of every child to nourishment, decency, education, play and the development of the body, mind and soul. The Plainfielder declares that the subject is just as important from a civic standpoint as free education and very rightly says "to insure the physical fitness of these future citizens it requires the careful and constant medical inspection of all school children. It implies the prohibition of child labor, improving housing conditions among the poor; and the abolition of sweatshops; the establishment of public playgrounds and recreation centres, and, of course, pure food, pure milk, pure water and proper drainage."

The subject, "free health" is certainly one that requires careful and mature consideration and action on the part of the State authorities and Mr. Fox is doing a noble work in advocating it in such an intelligent manner.

An exchange says that John F. Dryden will enter the lists with John Kean for the Senatorial plum when the latter's term expires. Little early to discuss the subject; probably neither one will be in the running when the time comes.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Blow to Newspapers.

"The new code prepared by the Postal Commission, which is being pressed to passage as a rider upon the general appropriation bill, is a blow at the newspapers in general and at the most liberal and successful of them in particular. Under the proposed new rules fiction is barred, because it does not involve periodicity. Advertising is restricted to fifty per cent. of the superficial area of the paper. Supplements of publications cannot contain any advertising, and must not be printed on anything but paper. Sections of newspapers must conform in size, form and weight of paper; clubbing arrangements and premium offers are forbidden. Not more than ten per cent. of the actual paid subscriptions can be sent out a specimen copies by mail.

"These are samples of the changes proposed in the new code; others refer to the rates of postage, manner of folding, wrapping, registering, etc. There are fifty-two sections to the code and about 7,000 words, and practically all of them are to the positive disadvantage of the newspapers and their readers. Nearly, if not quite, 30,000 papers, magazines, etc., will be adversely affected by the recommendations of the Postal Commission if they are adopted by Congress.

"The Sunday papers, which publish an immense amount of fiction, will be barred from the mails at the usual newspaper rates, and if no more advertising than fifty per cent. of the superficial area of the periodical is allowed, then all such papers as the Evening News and all the popular magazines and all trade publications will have to pay exorbitant rates or be deprived of mail privileges.

"This latter provision is a blow at successful newspapers everywhere. It is more; it is an unwarranted interference with the rights and privileges of all citizens who may wish to advertise in papers that are valuable to them. If the papers of their choice, the papers that bring them the best returns for their money, have already fifty per cent. of space devoted to advertising, not another line can be taken without increasing the mail rates or abandoning altogether this method of distributing papers.

"Tis is a ban on legitimate newspaper enterprise. If an editor or publisher works hard, makes his paper valuable, secures for it a large circulation, and thus commands a heavy advertising business, he is penalized by having his business restricted within certain limits. It is doubtful if such a rule would stand the test if carried into the United States courts. It is a regulation in restraint of legitimate trade.

"The proposed changes are burdensome, harassing and hostile to the development and extension of newspapers and other periodicals. They undertake to curb newspaper expansion by dictating what and how much shall be printed, and by refusing the privileges of the mails to those that cannot comply with arbitrary terms. That the postal privileges have at times been abused is certainly true, but this is no reason why honest newspapers should suffer or their readers be deprived of the daily news. The proposed new code needs revising more than did the old one, for it is more arbitrary, inquisitorial, dogmatic and unjust."—Newark News.

New York Indians' Rampage.

Malone, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Indians from the St. Regis reservation, crazed with liquor, have kept the residents of Hogansburg, Franklin county, in fear and peril for several days. Conditions became so serious yesterday that scores of families remained indoors for fear of encountering the redskins. The St. Regis reservation is only a few miles from Hogansburg, and when the Indians go to the village and drink firewater it is about as safe to be out on the plains among a tribe of savages as to try to live in safety in Hogansburg. The Franklin county sheriff has exerted himself in behalf of the village folk, but the business of serving papers on the fiery tempered Indians is so dangerous that he finds it absolutely impossible to engage a deputy who has nerve enough for the work. About thirty Indians went to Hogansburg last week for a spree—and they had it. Despite the law which says no liquor shall be sold to Indians they found no difficulty in getting all they were willing to pay for, and by midnight most of them were wildly intoxicated. The smashing of hundreds of windows was the commencement, and it was followed by the caving in of an entire store from and the demolishing of a building in course of erection. In their wanton destruction of property the Indians were wholly undistrubed, as the town has no policemen.

THIRTY-EIGHT YEARS AS A P. H. S. PEDAGOGUE

RECEPTION FOR MISS NILES AT ALUMNI'S ANNUAL GATHERING.

Two features will mark the annual gathering of the Plainfield High School alumni, to be held at the new High School building, Friday evening, February 22. There is no member of the High School faculty more widely known among the gradnates than Miss Ellen E. Niles, who will this year complete her thirty-eighth year in this service. The social end of the gathering will centre about a reception which has been arranged in Miss Niles' honor. Then there will be the usual dance for the members of the alumni and their invited guests.

With the idea of offering something of interest to the general public as well the alumni, it has been decided to precede the annual meeting of the association with an open public meeting which will be addressed by Frank Moss, well known as counsel for Dr. Parkhurst's society for the prevention of crime and a prominent member of the New York bar. His topic has not yet been announced. This meeting will be held in the school hall at 8 o'clock and will be open to the public without further invitation.

Following the address, the public will have an opportunity to depart, after which the business session of the Alumni Association will be held. The reception to Miss Niles will follow in the school library and the floor of the main hall will be cleared for dancing.

President W. D. Murray has appointed the following committee of arrangements: Charles B. Morse, chairman, Miss Ellen L. Osgood, Miss Dorothy Fleming, Franklin S. Smith, Vincent B. Miner and Theodore O. Cavett. The committee has laid out its plan of campaign and the details are being rapidly completed.

S. S. REPORT.

Trinity Has 814 Pupils According to Annual Statement.

Annual reports were presented at the adjourned meeting of the officers and teachers of the Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, yesterday afternoon. The meeting was to have been held last Monday, but the storm prevented. H. E. Gayle, treasurer, reported receipts for the past year of $954.96 and disbursements of $638.09, leaving a balance of $316.87.

The annual report of Secretary Elias H. Bird follows:

The total membership of the school for the year ending December 31, 1905, was 806. The membership December 31, 1906, was 814, divided as follows: Officers and assistants, 14; teachers, 42; home department, 201; Bible classes, 159; main school, 124; junior department, 60; primary department, 140; beginners' department, 74. During the year twenty-four members of the school joined the church. The total average attendance was 331. The largest attendance for the year was on Sunday, September 16, when 437 members of the school were present. The smallest attendance, 119, was on October 21.

"GLYCEROLE OF ARNICA"

For Chapped Hands.

There is no preparation which has given such general satisfaction as Randolph's "Glycerole of Arnica." It has successfully "stood the test" for many years and is a very healing remedy, perfectly absorbed by the skin, without any greasy after effect. Delightfully perfumed with Extract of White Rose.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

RARITAN.

Miss Margaret Farmer has been the guest of friends in Califon during the past week.

Miss Helen Hickey was a recent guest of her sister, Mrs. F. J. Smith, at Bayonne.

Miss Lizzie Frech and Anna Galuska have gone to Bloomfield to reside.

J. J. Bourke has been spending part of this week in Jersey City.

Fred Conklin lead the Epworth League meeting last evening.

CARPENTER'S ABSENCE CAUSES MUCH WORRY.

Still No Clue to Whereabouts of Liberty Corner Man Who Disappeared February 1.

Bernardsville, Feb. 11.—The disappearance of William A. Burd, of Liberty Corner, on Friday, February 1, and his failure to return, has caused much anxiety among his friends of that place. Burd was driven to the railroad station at Millington by two daughters of Lee Thompson, of Liberty Corner, with whom he boarded.

He took the train leaving Millington at 9:37 a. m. to go to Newark to transact some business. He was expected to return on an evening train, but failed to do so, and has not yet put in an appearance. His continued absence, his friends say, is entirely without cause, so far as is known, and it is feared that he may have met with foul play. He had about $60 with him when he left Liberty Corner.

Burd is a carpenter and builder by occupation, and had considerable unfinished work on hand. He had the carpentry contract to make alterations and additions to the house recently purchased by former Assemblyman William J. Kearns, a Newark lawyer, between Liberty Corner and Lyons, and several men were in his employ on this work, which is yet in an incompleted condition.

Burd was born near here about thirty-eight years ago, and is unmarried. He is well known throughout the township, and is a man of steady habits. He is five feet three inches in height, weighs about 125 pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes—the left eye is blind and partly closed. When he disappeared he wore a mixed suit, dark brown overcoat and a black derby hat.

Turned In Alarm To Rob.

New York, Feb. 11.—Burglars turned in a false alarm of fire from the "Bellevue box," at First avenue and Twenty-sixth street, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning so they could rob the fire house of Hook and Ladder Company No. 7, in Twenty-eighth street, near Third avenue. Captain Graham says the company responded to an alarm for fire, and laid hose preparatory to turning on water, when they found no fire anywhere in the vicinity. On his return he went to his locker to get a cigar and found that the docker had been pried open. One of the men found a bundle near the back door of the fire house, and investigation disclosed all missing clothing, a watch and other articles. The burglars had been frightened away before they could get their booty out of the place.

ADVOCATES FREE HEALTH

Hugh F. Fox Addresses State Charities Conference on Standard of Living.

IMMIGRANTS NEEDED

Room For All Foreigners Says Plainfielder Who Talks On "Safety, Honor and Welfare of the People."

An audience that filled the Lyceum theatre at Paterson yesterday afternoon took part in the opening meeting of the State Conference of Charities and Corrections. From all over the State came men and women prominent in the movement to improve the social conditions in this State. Hugh F. Fox, of this city, acted as president of the conference.

Mr. Fox spoke on "The Safety, Honor and Welfare of the People."

"We cannot establish a high standard of citizenship unless we secure to every child the right to nourishment, decency, to education, to play and to develop its body, mind and soul freely and naturally," he said. "If necessary, the State must interfere with an invade the family to secure these rights for the child. This means a clean and healthful standard of living; it means adequate facilities for an all round education and the rigid enforcement of truancy laws.

"To insure the physical fitness of these future citizens it requires the careful and constant medical inspection of all school children. It implies the prohibition of child labor, improving housing conditions among the poor, and the abolition of sweatshops; the establishment of public play-grounds and recreation centres, and, of course, pure food, pure milk, pure water and proper drainage.

"Free health is a new idea to us, though it is just as important from the civic standpoint as free education. The people are beginning to demand that this part of our system of government be taken out of politics."

Referring to the corrective institutions of the State, Mr. Fox contended that all of them should be taken out of politics.

"But what can we say of our common jails?" he continued. "Could any devil's factory for wickedness be more ingeniously contrived than the jails of these United States? We send men there to loaf in idleness, allowing them to gather together during the daytime in the corridors which surround their cells. There is often little or no discipline. The moral atmosphere of the jail is in incitement to crime and a provocation to vice. We have talked about it long enough. Let us see if we cannot find a remedy."

Mr. Fox has introduced the subject of immigration for the first time into the conference. On this subject he remarked: "I have yet to learn of any body of facts which justify the conclusion that any class or race of white men are a menace to our civilization. On the contrary, I believe that practically every able-bodied European immigrant is a national asset, and that the demand is even greater than the supply."

Mrs. Emily E. Williamson discussed the subject of "Probation in New Jersey." She told of the efforts to establish juvenile courts in this State, and declared that the New Jersey Probation Juvenile Court law is the best in the world. She cited the benefits that had come from the law among the people in Union countyy and other counties.

"Child Labor in the Glass Factories of the United States" was discussed by Owen Lovejoy, assistant secretary of the National Child Labor Committee. He advanced the passage of a law prohibiting the employment in factories at night of children under sixteen years old.

The Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of New York, spoke on "Our Social Salvation."

The conference will end tomorrow afternoon.

Back To Boston.

Thomas Osment, of New street, went to Boston, Mass., today to attend the convention of the Painters' and Paperhangers' Union, as the representative of the Plainfield local. Boston is Mr. Osment's old home, but this is the first time he has headed that way in thirty years. He will probably spend the week renewing his acquaintance with the baked bean in its native habitat.

FAIR YOUNG WOMEN AS P. S. C. CANVASSERS

THREE BRIGHT MAIDENS TO SELL ELECTRICAL DEVICES IN PLAINFIELD.

Three pretty young women, blondes and brunettes, will on Thursday morning invade Plainfield and vicinity and will visit almost every resident in the city and borough. The fair ones will make calls for the Public Service Corporation for which concern they will solicit orders for the electrical economical turndown lamps and of course they hope to do a big business. The engagement of women to work for the Public Service is a new idea, but calculated to be advantageous.

Inquiry made known the fact that these young women come from Brooklyn where they did similar work. An official of the Public Service says that their work will cover not only Plainfield and North Plainfield but Scotch Plains and Fanwood as well. The canvassers must put up a convincing 16 to 1 argument. While its same ratio as the silver question arguments conducted unsuccessfully by William J. Bryan, the explanation to this article offered for sale is quite different and more apt to find hearers and listeners.

It might be said that the 16 to 1 comes in by way of candle power. The ordinary house light is a 16 candle power lamp. This particular economical turn-down electric lamp is a patented article making it possible to turn down the light from 16 to 1 candle power. It gives a small yet bright light and saves considerable money. Where a 16 candle power lamp roughly estimated cotss one cent per hour this lamp will cost 1-16 of one cent, a material saving.

The women solicitors will present a bunch of reasons why consumers of electricity should install such lamps. For instance a one candle power lamp is calculated to be quite sufficient for couples occupying the parlor and holding hands after pa and ma have said good night, it is bright enough to locate the bottle of "cholera drops" in case of midnight cramps, and it is plenty bright enough for hubby to take off his shoes downstairs and quietly go to his chamber. Of course there are other reasons too and the ladies ought to do a big business.

"You see we have engaged women," said a Public Service man, "because the women are at home and would rather hear the explanation of a good thing by one of their own sex than a man. In fact a man has not the opportunities to get into houses in the day time, nor can he get the attention that the woman will receive."

The lamp in question is on exhibition in the office of the Public Service Corporation.

Death of Former Plainfielder.

David Nuttall, a former well-known machinist of this city, where for a number of years he was employed at the Potter Press Works, died at the Bayonne City Hospital on Friday night. He was taken with a severe cold early in December, which did not yield to treatment. Mr. Nuttall was born in Manchester, England, and was one of the charter members of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, a delegation of whom attended the funeral held this afternoon from the late home, 379 Avenue C, Bayonne. A wife and daughter, Gertrude, survive him. Mrs. Nuttall is quite ill and her condition is the cause of much anxiety.

His Sorrow Mistaken.

New York, Feb. 11.—Eugene Susstrunk was on his way Saturday night to his home, in No. 670 East 156th street, where he has a wife and children, when he stepped accidentally on the foot of Pauline Wolf, two years old, daughter of Philip Wolf, of No. 204 West Forty-first street. Pauline began to cry and Susstrunk said, "Come, and I'll buy you some candy." Susstrunk was about to enter a candy store with the child when Wolf grabbed him and shouted, "You're stealing my child! Police! Help!" In the West Side Court yesterday Susstrunk was held in $1,000 bail for examination tomorrow. The bail was provided.

SPANISH HEIRESS ROVED AS TRAMP

BEAUTIFUL SENORITA OBJECTS TO DISTASTEFUL MARRIAGE.

RUNS AWAY FROM HOME

For Three Months She Roams Country In Male Attire, Part of Time as Member of Robber Band.

Madrid.—Truly an amazing story is that of Senorita Esperanzi Vasquez, a wealthy merchant's daughter, who, after being missing for three months, was found masquerading as a male tramp, and it now a nun in a convent. She is only 19 and her father is a leading citizen of Santander. The senorita was carefully brought up and educated. She is a tall, good looking and well built girl, who was known as a regular dare-devil, and the heroine of many merry escapades. With men and women alike, she was intensely popular.

One night, three months ago, the Vasquez mansion was ablaze with light, as a great ball was being given to celebrate the betrothal of the Senorita Esperanzi and the Senor Pablo y Cerda of Bilboa. The next morning the senorita was missing. Day after day passed and there was no word of her; no clue by which her whereabouts could be discovered. She had simply vanished.

For several weeks the girl's disappearance was the sensation of the district. Then her discovery caused an even greater sensation. Disguised as a man, she was found in a tramps' "refuge," a type of lodging house run by the municipality of Paula Christina, in a district of Madrid. Clad in rough men's clothes, the girl had been a lodger for three days. On the night before her discovery a dispute arose between her and a burly giant, the bully and terror of the place. The bully struck her, knocking her senseless.

When the police rushed in, a doctor was sent for and thus it was found that the tall, well built, comely lad was in reality a girl. Then it came out that she was the much-sought Esperanzi Garcia Vasquez.

The girl was reconciled to her family, and her lover pleaded for an immediate marriage, but instead the senorita has just taken the veil in the Hermanas de Caridad convent in Madrid, and swears she will spend her life as a sister of mercy, tending the poor and nursing the sick.

She told a remarkable story of her wanderings in the three months. It was because of the distasteful betrothal that she determined to leave home.

The household, in the early morning, tired out with the ball, was soundly asleep. The girl, dressed in her roughest clothes and taking only such money as she had in her purse, quietly walked to the railway station and boarded a milk train bound for Bilboa. From there she took another train to a lonely country station and began a tramp over the highway to Madrid. The first night she slept with the female servants in a cottage back of a big mansion.

On her second day she fell in with a male tramp who suggested that she assume male attire and join an adventurous band of which he was a member. She agreed and he introduced her to the chief, who gave her man's clothes, cut her hair and taught her to walk, swagger, talk from her chest and put her hands properly in her pockets.

She was treated with great consideration and finally a position was secured for her as footman in a nobleman's house. The suggestion was that she furnish plans and information of the house so that the band could rob it. The girl declares that she did not intend to do this, but seemingly agreed in order to enjoy the experience and adventure. But she only stayed the one day, for she found she had to share the sleeping accommodation of one of the other men servants.

The robber band were angered at her behavior, so she escaped and became a wanderer in the land—a tramp. Frankly she says she did not enjoy herself and is glad of the haven of rest and peace which the convent has now given her.

TROUBLE AHEAD FOR JACK.

His Well Meant Advice Evidently Caused All the Trouble.

Recently a lady was seen hurriedly approaching the gate at the Grand Central Depot, in New York. She had a traveling bag in one hand, a hat box and a bunch of flowers in the other and an umbrella and a box of lunch tucked under her arm. There was not a moment to spare, but the gatekeeper stopped her mad rush.

"Let me have your ticket, please," he commanded.

"I can't," she said, turning first red and then white, "but I have one. Please let me pass. I've got to catch that train."

"You will have to show your ticket, madam," repeated the gateman sternly. Tears glistened in the lady's eyes.

"I tell you I can't, it's—it's— Well, I pinned in in my— Oh, I put it where I wouldn't lose it, and I can't get it till I have a chance to— Oh, do please let me through!" She was allowed to pass, and was heard to say as she made a dash for the train:

"The next time Jack worries me into putting things where I can't lose them I guess I'll know it."

CONFIDENCES OF A CODFISH.

Revealed Secret of His Lengthy Absence From Home.

Capt. Collins, a well known fisherman of the banks, was persuaded into buying a large codfish by a fish pedler. After the departure of the pedler he saw it was not fit to be eaten, so it was thrown away.

In a few days the pedler again stopped at Collins' door. The captain went out to his cart and began to examine his fish. Suddenly leaning down, he placed his lips close to a large cod and began whispering to it.

The pedler looker rather astonished at this, and as soon as the captain raised his head he asked what he did that for.

Well," replied Collins, "I was just askin' him how his relatives were, out in the old ocean."

"And what did he say?" asked the pedler.

"He said," replied Collins, "that when he left them they were in good health, but as he hadn't seen them for two weeks, he did not know whether they were alive or dead at the present time."—Boston Herald.

Nor Was His Neck Rubber.

The plaintiff's lawyer in the breach of promise case thought he would make life a burden to the unfortunate young man who was the unwilling defendant.

"Do you mean to say," he asked, after a number of embarrassing questions, "that after you had been absent for an entire month you did not kiss the plaintiff, to whom you were engaged to be married, when you first saw her on your return?"

"I do," responded the defendant, firmly.

"Will you make that statement to the jury?"

"Certainly, if necessary."

"Do you think that they would believe you?"

"One of them would, I know."

"Ah, indeed! And why should he, pray?"

"Because he was present when I first saw her. He was at the gate when I rode up, and she stuck her head out of the second-story window and I said to her, 'How d'ye do?' and called out I'd be back to supper in half an hour. I'm no giraffe," and everybody smiled except the lawyer.

Mistake of a College Girl.

Charles Dana Hazen, head of the history department of Smith college, had excused one of his pupils from recitation on account of sickness. Shortly after the recitation hour the professor had occasion to pass through the main street of Northampton, and, much to his surprise, saw his excused student coming from the opposite direction.

This was a critical moment for the college girl, who took in the situation with a glance. Something must be done at once to escape his notice. The book store nearby was her only resort, and if she could have reached it on time she would have been all right. In her excited state of mind she got into a saloon just one door from her intended hiding place. On discovering her mistake she rushed into the street and into the arms of the professor.

Beats the Story Books.

For about 30 years Joseph Glover Southmay put off what he might have done any day. Consequently he has just reappeared at Middletown, Conn., after an absence of 36 years. Funeral services were held for him a generation ago, when he was believed to have been lost at sea. The amazing part of the story is that Southmay for 30 years has been running a farm a little more than 20 miles from Middletown. There is room enough in this world, it appears, unless a man is really trying to hide.

Terror's Effect on Hair.

It has been repeatedly affirmed that Queen Marie Antoinette's auburn hair turned white in the days of the reign of terror, and an English surgeon named Parry states that just after the Indian mutiny he actually saw the jet black hair of a rebel Sepoy, who was under examination and feared a dreadful death, turn white in the course of an hour. In the time of the commune in Paris, the dark hair of Baron Alphonse de Rothschild was blanched in a few hours.

"You know that I'm to spend a year on this place; I assume that you are acquainted with the circumstances," I said, feeling it wise that we should understand each other.

"Quite so, Mr. Glenarm."

"I'm a student, you know, and all I want is to be let alone."

This I threw in to reassure myself rather than for his information. It was just as well, I reflected, to assert a little authority, even though the fellow undoubtedly represented Pickering and received orders from him.

"In a day or two, or as soon as I have got used to the place, I shall settle down to work in the library. You may give me breakfast at seven-thirty; luncheon at one-thirty and dinner at seven."

"Those were my late master's hours, sir."

"Very well. And I'll eat anything you please, except mutton broth, meat pie and canned strawberries. Strawberries in ths, Bates, are not well calculated to lift the spirit of man."

"I quite agree with you, sir, if you will pardon my opinion."

"And the bills—"

"They are provided for by Mr. Pickering. He sends me an allowance for the household expenses."

"So you are to report to him, are you, as heretofore?"

I blew out a match with which I had lighted a cigar and watched the smoking end intently.

"I believe that's the idea, sir."

It is not pleasant to be under compulsion,—to feel your freedom curtailed, to be conscious of espionage. I arose without a word and went into the hall.

"You may like to have the keys," said Bates, following me. "There's two for the gates in the outer wall and one for the St. Agatha's gate; they're marked, as you see. And here's the hall door key and the boat house key that you asked for last night."

After an hour spent in unpacking I went out into the grounds. I thought it well to wire Pickering of my arrival, and I set out for Annandale to send him a telegram.

I found the gate through which we had entered the grounds the night before without difficulty, and started off in an amiable state of mind. My perplexity over the mysterious shot was passing away under the benign influences of blue sky and warm sunshine. A few farm folk passed me in the highway and saluted me in the fashion of the country, inspecting my knickerbockers at the same time with frank disapproval. When I reached the lake I gazed out upon its quiet waters with satisfaction. At the foot of Annandale's main street was a dock where several small steam craft and a number of catboats were being dismantled for the winter. As I passed a man approached the dock in a skiff, landed and tied his boat. He passed at a quick pace, then turned and eyed me with rustic directness.

"Good morning!" I said. "Any ducks about?"

He paused, nodded and fell into step with me.

"No,—not enough to pay for the trouble."

"I'm sorry for that. I'd hoped to pick up a few."

"I guess you're a stranger in these parts," he remarked, eyeing me again, —my knickerbockers no doubt marking me as an alien.

"Quite so. My name is Glenarm, and I've just come."

"I thought you might be him. We've rather been expecting you here in the village. I'm John Morgan, caretaker of the resorters' houses up the lake."

"I suppose you all knew my grandfather hereabouts."

"Well, yes; you might say as we did, or you might say as we didn't. He wasn't just the sort that you got next to in a hurry. He kept pretty much to himself. He built a wall there to keep us out, but he needn't have troubled himself. We're not the kind around here to meddle, and you may be sure the summer people never bothered him."

There was a tone of resentment in his voice, and I hastened to say:

"I'm sure you're mistaken about the purposes of that wall. My grandfather was a student of architecture. It was a hobby of his. The house and wall were in the line of his experiments, and to please his whims. I hope the people of the village won't hold any hard feelings against his memory or against me. Why, the labor there must have been a good thing for the people hereabouts."

"It ought to have been," said the man gruffly; "but that's where the trouble comes in. He brought a lot of queer fellows here under contract to work for him,—Italians, or Greeks, or some sort of foreigners. They built the wall, and he had 'em at work inside for half a year. He didn't even let 'em out for air; and when they finished his job he loaded 'em on to a train one day and hauled 'em away."

"That was quite like him, I'm sure," I said, remembering with amusement my grandfather's secretive ways.

"I guess he was a crank all right," said the man conclusively.

It was evident that he did not care to establish friendly relations with the resident of Glenarm. He was about 40, tight, with a yellow beard and pale blue eyes. He was dressed roughly and wore a shabby soft hat.

"Well, I suppose I'll have to assume responsibility for him and his acts," I remarked, piqued by the fellow's surliness.

We had reached the center of the village, and he left me abruptly, crossing the street to one of the shops. I continued on to the railway station, where I wrote and paid for my message. The station master inspected me carefully as I searched my pockets for change.

"You want your telegrams delivered at the house?" he asked.

"Yes, please," I answered, and he turned away to his desk of clicking instruments without looking at me again.

It seemed wise to establish relations with the postoffice, so I made myself known to the girl who stood at the delivery window.

"You already have a box," she advised me. "There's a boy carries the mail to your house; Mr. Bates hires him."

Bates had himself given me this information, but the girl seemed to find pleasure in imparting it with a certain severity. I then bought a cake of soap at the principal drug store and purchased a package of smoking tobacco, which I did not need, at a grocery.

News of my arrival had evidently reached the villagers; I was conceited enough to imagine that my presence was probably of interest to them; but the station master, the girl at the postoffice and the clerks in the shops treated me with an unmistakable cold reserve. There was a certain evenness of the chill with which they visited me, as though a particular degree of frigidity had been agreed on in advance.

I shrugged my shoulders and turned toward Glenarm. My grandfather had left me a cheerful legacy of distrust among my neighbors, the result, probably, of importing foreign labor to work on his house. The surly Morgan had intimated as much; but it did not greatly matter. I had not come to Glenarm to cultivate the rustics, but to fulfill certain obligations laid down in my grandfather's will. I was, so to speak, on duty, and I much preferred that the villagers should let me alone. Comforting myself with these reflections I reached the wharf, where I saw Morgan sitting with his feet dangling over the water, smoking a pipe.

I nodded in his direction, but he feigned not to see me. A moment later he jumped into his boat and rowed out upon the lake.

When I returned to the house Bates was at work in the kitchen. This was a large, square room with heavy timbers showing in the walls and low ceiling. There was a great fireplace in an enormous chimney, fitted with a crane and hobs, but for practical purposes a small range was provided.

Bates received me placidly.

"Yes; it's an unusual room, sir. Mr. Glenarm copied it from an old kitchen in England. He took quite a pride in it. It's a pleasant place to sit in the evening, sir."

He showed me the way below, where I found that the cellar extended under every part of the house, and was divided into large chambers. The door of one of them was of heavy oak, bound in iron, with a barred opening at the top. A great iron hasp with a heavy padlock and grilled area windows gave further the impression of a cell, and I fear that at this, as at many other things in the curious house, I swore—if I did not laugh—thinking of the money my grandfather had expended in realizing his whims. The room was used, I noted with pleasure, as a depository for potatoes.

In another of these rooms I found a curious collection of lanterns of every conceivable description, grouped on shelves; and next door to this apartment was another store-room filled with brass candle-sticks of many odd designs.

I returned to the main floor and sought the comforts of the library, where I smoked a pipe over a very tedious chapter in an exceedingly dull book on "Norman Revivals and Influences." Then I went out, assuring myself that I should get steadily to work in a day or two.

Bates was soberly chopping wood at a rough pile of timber at the rear of the house. His industry had already impressed me. He had the quiet ways of an ideal serving man.

"Well, Bates, you don't intend to let me freeze to death, do you? There must be enough wood in the pile there to last all winter."

"Yes, sir; I am just cutting a little more of the hickory, sir. Mr. Glenarm always preferred it to beech or maple."

I turned toward the unfinished tower in the meadow, from which a windmill pumped water to the house. The iron frame was not wholly covered with stone, but material for the remainder of the work lay scattered at the base. I went on through the wood to the lake and inspected the boat house; then I followed the pebbly shore to the stone wall where it marked the line of the school-grounds. The wall, I observed, was of the same solid character here as along the road. I tramped beside it, reflecting that my grandfather's estate, in the heart of the Republic, would some day give the lie to foreign complaints that we have no ruins in America.

The buildings of St. Agatha's were well hidden by the intervening wood, and I climbed upon the wall at the iron gate for an ampler view. The pillars at either side of the gate were of huge dimensions and were higher than I could reach. The little Gothic church near at hand was built of stone similar to that used in Glenarm house. As I surveyed the scene a number of young women appeared, and, forming in twos and fours, walked back and forth before the chapel. A sister clad in a brown habit lingered near or walked first with one and then another group of students. It was all very pretty and interesting and not at all the ugly school for paupers I had expected to find. The students were not the charity children I had carelessly pictured; they were not so young, for one thing, and they seemed to be appareled decently enough.

I smiled to find myself adjusting my scarf and straightening my collar as I beheld my neighbors for the first time.

As I sat thus on the wall I heard the sound of angry voices back of me on the Glenarm side, and a crash of underbrush marked a flight and pursuit. I crouched down on the wall and waited. In a moment a man plunged through the wood and stumbled over a low hanging vine and fell, not 20 feet away from me. To my great surprise it was Morgan, my acquaintance of the morning. He rose, cursed his ill luck and, hugging the wall close, ran toward the lake. Instantly the pursuer broke into view. It was Bates, evidently much excited and with an ugly cut across his forehead. He carried a heavy club, and, after listening for a moment for sounds of the enemy, he hurried after the caretaker.

It was not my row, though I must say it wakened my curiosity. I straightened myself out, threw my legs over the school side of the wall and lighted a cigar, feeling cheered by the opportunity the stone barricade offered for observing the world.

As I looked off toward the little church I found two other actors appearing on the scene. A girl stood in a little opening of the wood, talking to a man. Her hands were thrust into the pockets of her covert coat; she wore a red tam-o'-shanter, that made a bright bit of color in the wood. They were not more than a dozen yards away, but a wild growth of young maples lay between us. Their profiles were toward me, and the tones of the girl's voice reached me clearly as she addressed her companion. He wore a clergyman's high waistcoat, and I assumed that he was the chaplain whom Bates had mentioned. I am not by nature an eavesdropper, but the girl was clearly making a plea of some kind, and the chaplain's stalwart figure awake in me an antagonism that held me to the wall.

"If he comes here I shall go away, so you may as well understand it and tell him. I shan't see him under any circumstances, and I'm not going to Florida or California or anywhere else on a private car, no matter who chaperones it."

"Certainly not, unless you want to —certainly not," said the chaplain. "You understand that I'm only giving you his message. He thought it best—"

"Not to write to me or to Sister Theresa!" broke in the girl contemptuously. "What a clever person he is!"

"And how unclever I am!" said the clergyman, laughing. "Well, at any rate, I thank you for giving me the opportunity to present his message."

She smiled, nodded and turned swiftly toward the school. The chaplain looked after her for a few moments, then walked soberly away toward the lake. He was a young fellow, clean-shaven and dark, and with a pair of shoulders that gave me a twinge of envy. I could not guess how great a factor that vigorous figure was to be in my own affairs. As I swung down from the wall and walked toward Glenarm House, my thoughts were not with the athletic chaplain, but with the girl, whose youth was, I reflected, marked by her short skirt, the unconcern with which her hands were thrust into the pockets of her coat, and the irresponsible tilt of the tam-o'-shanter. There is something jaunty, a suggestion of spirit and independence, in a tam-o'-shanter, particularly a red one. If the red tam-o'-shanter expressed, so to speak, the key-note of St. Agatha's, the proximity of the school was not so bad a thing after all.

In a high good-humor and with a sharp appetite I went in to luncheon.

For the Ideal Automobile.

New York, Feb. 11.—Preferring to go into partnership in the automobile business with his two young sons, George J. Grossman, president of the United States Title Guaranty and Indemnity Company, of No. 160 Broadway, has resigned from that place and will sever his connection with affairs in Wall street. His associates were surprised to hear yesterday that he would leave the company on February 18. Mr. Grossman's resignation brought out a story that to his sons, Mortimer M. and Wallace G. Grossman, he has given $100,000 to carry on experimental and manufacturing work on automobiles. He intends to supervise their work and assist them in expending the money and conducting the business in a profitable way. The sons are eighteen and twenty years old, but are already regarded as experts in automobiles.

Plan for Worn Out Horses.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Assemblyman Robinson has a new way of disposing of the unfit horses in the Fire, Police and Street Cleaning departments of New York city. He has introduced a bill requiring the city authorities to offer them to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. At present these horses are sold at public auction. If the society sells them after they have been transferred the proceeds shall be paid over to the city.

DAAB'S TEAM.

Mike Leonard Will Be Captain Again; Old Field Retained.

Phil Daab, manager and statesman, will show his Hoboken athletes on the St. George Cricket Grounds as of yore next season. Part of the Cricket Grounds will be cut off for a park, but the field, although shortened appreciably, will be long enough for the home-run swatters to show their prowess.

Daab has not allowed his highbrow job in the halls of legislation—why, haven't you heard? He's an assemblyman, yes. Wears a Tuxedo coat all day or words to that effect, and throws a fit every time the trusts are mentioned, just like the rest of the statesmen—he hasn't allowed the glittering front game, as was about to be remarked, to interfere with the canny but unspectacular business of building up a ball team. As a flying start toward a good season, he signed Sergt. Mike Leonard again as captain. Mike will have under him as fast a team as that unbeatable combination that played here two years ago.

For Saturday activities, Daab has something like five fields open. Dover wants the team for one. Asbury Park and Newton are among the towns that yearn for the team that was once Plainfield's pride.

J. McGrath Goes Up.

Jack McGrath, the tumultuous baseball expert whose impetuous temperament has disturbed fans at the Oval on several Saturday and holiday afternoons, has gotten a real managerial berth. He will steer the Atlanta Club of the Southern League next season. Jack is the loving parent of the All-Nationals, and once upon a time did play with Westfield. The All-Nationals may have been a crack team in the metropolis but it was a citrus plant whenever Plainfielders sighted it. Jack may be a good manager—he always managed to get real money for a dub combination, which shows managerial acuteness—but he is pretty much of a rinky-dink at the game itself. Still, Jack was ever an earnest young man, and no one will be grudge him glory and shekels.

On the Speedway.

Owners of fast horses and cutters were out in force on the "speedway" Saturday afternoon. The speedway is Park avenue, from Ninth street to Randolph road. There was a good "bottom" to the snow, and smart brushes were the rule. Among the familiar faces on the course were those of Mayor N. B. Smalley, Edson Martin, Fred Hand, A. I. Smalley, George Conover, George Cathers, Percy Dayton, Charles Hand, Adam Blair, J. W. Johnson, D. C. Smalley, B. R. Waldron. The cutters will be out in force again this afternoon.

Gulick Wants $300 For Damages and Injuries Resulting from Collision.

Trial of an action in tort by Abram Gulick, of Lincoln, against the Public Service Corporation, for $300, was begun in the District Court this morning. The case was still on at 2:30, with the defense just opening.

Gulick's claim is based on a collision between his wagon and a trolley car on November 5, near De Kalb avenue. He contends that the car come on him without warning and at a high rate of speed, and so injured him that the effects of the hurts will be permanent. The wagon and horse, it is claimed, were badly damaged. The defense will endeavor to show that Gulick was negligent. W. L. Hetfield, Jr., is Gulick's lawyer.

HOPE Y. M. A. READY FOR RE-ORGANIZATION

CONSTITUTION ADOPTED AND NOMINATING COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

Over fifty of the young men active in the old Y. M. A. of Hope chapel met Saturday night at the chapel to start the work of reorganization. Substantial progress was made, and the final moves in the reanimation of the Y. M. A. will be accomplished at another meeting on February 26.

A constitution was adopted, and Rev. L. R. Howard, Charles Vincent, James Penny, Wallace Morton and Benjamin Evans were appointed a committee to nominate officers. They will report on the twenty-sixth. City Judge W. N. Runyon, long president of the Y. M. A., was chairman of the meeting and G. E. Firstbrook, secretary.

The plan to bring the Suburban A. C. nine under the wing of the Y. M. A. was broached by Mr. Penny, who manages the Suburbans. The proposed union will be decided at the coming meeting. It was practically decided that the Y. M. A. would have a team in the field, whether the Suburbans came in or not.

Miss Hartshorne Entertains.

Miss Kathryn Hartshorne, formerly of Freehold, but now of Truell Court, gave a dinner at the Park Club Saturday night for Miss Sophia Barlow and Edward Hobbie, whose engagement was announced this winter. The decorations were red and white tulips, and the menu cards were in the form of valentines. The favors were red heart-shaped satin boxes. Covers were laid for eighteen as follows: Miss Sophia Barlow, Miss Helen Hassell, Miss Mary Barlow, Miss Kathryn Hartshorne, Miss Marion McCutchen, Miss Elsie Brokaw, Miss Grace Serrell, Miss May Murray, Miss Adelaide Howard, and Welles Taylor, Edward Hobbie, William Hartshorne, William Barlow, William Smith, Langdon Howard, William Hobbie, Edward Overton and Herbert Rogers.

Told of San Francisco Disaster.

Rev. Dr. Theodore H. Haysham, formerly pastor of the First Baptist church, of Minneapolis, but later in charge of a Baptist church in San Francisco, occupied the pulpit at the First Baptist church, yesterday morning, telling of the wrecked condition of the California churches, especially those of his own denomination. He said that out of twelve Baptist churches in San Francisco, seven were totally destroyed. He is seeking assistance from churches of the east in rebuilding them. Dr. Haysham also gave a graphic description of the earthquake and fire, he being in San Francisco at the time. In his remarks he also spoke of the wickedness of the city on the Pacific Coast, and of the great efforts now being made to rebuild it.

In the Borough Court.

At a session of the borough court this morning, the following cases were disposed of by Recorder Dolliver: George Traynor, drunkenness and disorder, $5 or ten days, took the latter; Thomas Hawkins, colored, drunkenness and disorderly conduct, $5 or ten days, took the latter; Thomas Dupre, disorderly conduct, sentence suspended. The court trials in the borough have always been held in the evening but Recorder Dolliver decided to hold them in the morning hereafter whenever it is possible. In this way prosioners taken during the night will not have to wait until the next evening for a hearing and the borough will be saved the expense of a good many meals.

Balled Up Two Ways.

Peter Deliassi, laden with Chianti or something that worked like it, drew the attention of small boys on Madison avenue yesterday afternoon. The small boys thre wsnowballs, and Peter cussed. Patrolman McGinley found Peter carrying on and fracturing the Sabbath quiet. It cost Peter $5 to square things with the city judge this morning.

"Nansen's Polar Expedition."

Rev. Samuel D. Price, of Camden, will deliver his illustrated lecture, entitled "Nansen's Polar Expedition," at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Thursday night, February 28. The lecture will be given under the auspices of the Sunday-school.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore H. Hardy, of Brooklyn, are visiting at the home of A. L. Force, of Duer street.

Jap Situation Easing.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—The situation regarding a settlement of the Japanese trouble seemed yesterday in every way satisfactory. The positive statement was made last night by one of those who were most opposed to temporizing with the Japanese that a very few more conferences between the San Francisco authorities and President Roosevelt would result in an adjustment of the whole question, leaving a few details to be arranged by the President and Secretary Root. It has been apparent from the time the Mayor and other officials of San Francisco consented to come to Washington for a conference that Mr. Roosevelt had the situation in his own hands. His appeal to the California delegation in Congress, which resulted in the coming of the officials from the coast, deeply stirred the Sate, and, although newspaper opposition continues in San Francisco, it is said the local government is willing to o exactly what the President requests—and Mr. Roosevelt has been very careful to request nothing which cannot be d one without loss of pride or self-respect by the Californians.

Prominent Fenian Dies.

New York, Feb. 11.—Captain John Kirwan, who fought in the Papal army against the troops of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy and was brevetted a Knight of the Order of St. Sylvester, or Golden Spur, for bravery, died in Dublin on January 30. Word of his death reached his wife and children, who live in East 105th street, yesterday. Captain Kirwan, who was one of the leading Irishmen in the United States, spent most of his life as a soldier. He was born in Dublin in 1840, and enlisted when eighteen years old in the service of Pope Pius IX. For gallantry he was promoted to the rank of brigade sergenat major, Irish brigade, under General Lamociere. In the battle of Castle Fidardo, September 18, 1859, he was the first person to cross the River Musone in the face of artillery fire. Although the Papal troops were defeated he was made a Knight of the Order of St. Sylvester, an order confined to less than one hundred and fifty members. Captain Kirwan was also active in the Fenian movement led by James Stephens.

Churches Consider Uniting.

New York, Feb. 11.—At the annual conference of the Pentecostal churches of America, to be held in the Utica Avenue Tabernacle in April, a discussion whether the Pentecostal Church shall be joined with the Church of the Nazarene will be an interesting feature. It is quite certain that delegates will come with instructions as to how they shall vote when the question is brought up. There is lively opposition to the scheme in certain quarters. Those in favor of the union urge that it would give the new church much more power both in the East and West. The Pentecostal Association has most of its churches in the East, while the Church of the Nazarene is strong in the West. Their beliefs are much the same. The main argument against the junction seems to be that the two church bodies are different in form of government. Whether this can be reconciled in the two bodies remains to be seen.

Hurt In Explosion.

New York, Feb. 11.—Seven men were burned, fire so severely that they were taken to St. Vincent's hospital, late yesterday afternoon by an explosion of a can of gasolene on the sixth floor of the building occupied by the Western Electric Company, which occupies the whole block bounded by Washington, West, Bethune and Bank streets. Because of the report of the explosion being heard for some distance and the story that several persons had been killed a large crowd gathered and increased so rapidly that it became necessary to call the reserves of the Charles street station. What caused the explosion could not be learned. In the office of the electrical company all information was refused and the police in making the report said "cause unknown."

Driver Has a Narrow Escape.

High Bridge, Feb. 11.—While driving a horse hitched to a sleigh, loaded with apples, in Centre street, Saturday, former Freeholder Frederick U. Philhower, of Mountainville, narrowly escapsed serious injury. The animal took fright at a passing locomotive, bolted and ran at a rapid clip up Centre street. Mr. Philhower was dragged seventy-five yards through the snow before the animal was caught. Neither sleigh nor animal was injured.

Mr. Dunn's pastorate at the Presbyterian church in Tioga has been signally successful. During the past two years over 400 new members have united with the church. Mr. Dunn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Dunn, of Park avenue.

SMOLDERING BLAZE CAUSES DAMAGE OF $200.

Discovered By Occupants in Time to Prevent a Serious Fire.

Fire headquarters was telephoned at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Jacob Vandeventer, of Woodland avenue, who informed the department that her residence was filled with smoke. Chief Doane went out in advance of a hose wagon and on his arrival discovered what promised to be a healthy blaze. A partition back of a defective chimney in the dining room had caught fire and was eating its way along to a point where it would have made a whole lot of trouble.

The chief 'phoned back for the chemical engine and on its arrival the seat of the trouble was quickly reached. The men had to do some tearing out but the damage in this way was trifling. It is possible, however, that the loss may be as high as $200.

When the fire apparatus reached the house, Mr. Vandeventer's ten-year-old son, Philip, thought there was no hope for the place and set about saving his most cherished possession. It happened to be a small dog and with the animal held fast under his arm he hustled down Woodland avenue so fast he only touched the high places. He ended up at a neighbor's house and remained there until fully convinced that his own home was still standing.

$10 Bills Stopped Bullet.

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 11.—A big wad of ten dollar bills saved the life of John C. Dare, a saloon keeper at No. 127 Willlow avenue yesterday. John Newcomb, employed by him, shot at the saloon keeper, but the bullet struck Dare's wallet and the fat bunch of bills stopped the leaden missle. Newcomb quarrelled with Dare over money matters. While Dare stopped to dig the bullet out of his bunch of money Newcomb was led away to the police station. "Hope these bills are still good," was all the comment Dare would make concerning the shooting.

Cobbler's Bench Over Century Old.

Phillipsburg, Feb. 11.—Howard Creveling, a shoemaker, of this place, learned Saturday that he had a relic in his shop, in a cobbler's bench, owned by John McCann, an employe. The bench is over 100 years old and was owned by the late David Parks, of Changewater, who was a prominent figure in the trial of Joe Carter and Peter Parks, who were hanged at Belvidere almost three-quarters of a century ago for the murder of the Castner family at Changewater. David Parks was the father of Peter Parks.

Rector a Biscuit Maker.

The biscuits to be served tonight at the Holy Cross church men's supper at the parish house were made this afternoon by the rector, Rev. George A. Warner. The bake consists of twelve dozen biscuits. The divine learned the culinary art at Mrs. Rorer's cooking school when he was attending the General Theological Seminary. None of the biscuits weigh more than half a pound, according to E. S. Hooley, who will be one of the ten prominent borough men to act as waiters.

"BIG SHOW" A SUCCESS

Y. M. C. A. Circus Amused a Large Crowd of Visitors Last Night.

SIDE SHOW FEATURES

Champion Gymnastic Team Shows on the Bars and the Horse—Moves of the Amateur "Sawdust" Artists.

With side-shows, barkers, and a "bewildering display of daring and dazzling deeds," the Y. M. C. A. amateur circus started on its two days' career last evening. It scored a great success, and a deserved success, with a large audience. The show will be repeated this afternoon and tonight.

The barkers of the sideshows, all in the small hall at the front of the building, greeted the visitors as soon as they entered. The freaks were played as follows:

Mme. Muchweight, fat woman, weighs 569 lbs., G. F. Hall; Joco—Wonderful monkey; almost as much intelligence as a human being, Bert Tootter; wild man, captured in South Plainfield, eats 'em alive, W. Sampson; fat man, 649 pounds, eats Force, W. H. Odell; bearded lady—Mme. Harryface, from Scotch Plains, W. Spear; giant—from China, W. Lueder; educated bear—Perry, captured in Wall street, Leland Manning; strong man—Prof. Strongdow, lifts anything, R. H. Collins; midget—smallest man in existence, Percy Phillips; lion—captured in wilds of Dunellen, (absolutely irresponsible), Jerry Manning.

Before the "ring" perfomance, which took place in the gymnasium, there was a parade around the floor, and the troupe took part. The "big show" was directed by Physical Director C. L. Listman, "ring master, sole owner and trainer." H. W. Barrows was "chief announcer."

The programme included leaps over "elephants" by the Y. M. C. A. gymnastic team, on which are Walter Sampson, S. Hoagland, A. B. Rumsey, Charles Line, Horace Vail, Henry Viebrock, R. H. Collins; stunts by the bear and the strong man; William Briggs' educated dogs, Trix and Beauty; comic juggling by Tornello, a professional; work on the horizontal bars, parallel bars, and horse by the Newark Y. M. C. A. gymnastic team, champions in their field; ground tumbling by B. J. Hansen; ground and lofty tumbling, by W. E. Ranels and P. Tiere, of Newark; wire-walking by Tornello; grotesque acrobatics by B. J. Hansen; pyramids on horse and mat by the following: Horse, Walter Sampson, S. Hoagland, A. B. Rumsey, Charles Line, Horace Vail, Henry Viebrock, R. H. Collins, Leland Manning, W. H. Odell, Jerry Manning, W. Lueder; mat, S. Hoagland, R. H. Collins, Rumsey, Line, Odele Stutsman, J. Manning, L. Manning, Lueder, F. Doerrer.

There was a plentitude of funmakers. The clowns were Percy Phillips, Jerry Manning, C. N. Sebring. The following character troupe did stunts on the bars and the horse:

Tramp, M. Stutsman; Komical Koon, W. Sampson; farmer, P. Collier; Hebrew comedian, J. Loizeaux; cowboy, D. L. Ferguson; fat German, A. B. Rumsey; boy wonder, Charles Line; Clowns' Sammy Bow Legs, L. Shepard.

The ticket-sellers and barkers were Horace Vail, S. Hoagland, C. Utzinger, Stanley Karner and Charles Line.

The Plainfield gymnastic troupe will take the Newark team's numbers tonight, and Ray Ewry, world's champion kicker, will appear.

CHURCH COMEDY CLUB GIVES VAUDEVILLE SHOW.

St. Stephen's "Players" Score Another Hit in the Art of Entertaining.

The Comedy Club of St. Stephen's church held a successful amateur vaudeville show last night. The programme was much enjoyed by a large audience.

The programme was as follows:

Piano solo, selected, song, "The Wolf," Shield, L. J. Geary; La Vie De Boheme, Dupuy, Dr. George H. Dupuy; song, "Farewell to Summer," Noel Johnson, Miss Marion Rummler; a few illustions, R. H. McCready; trio, "Hail Smiling Morn," Spofford, Miss Marion Rummler, Miss Martha MacMurray, L. J. Geary; songs, "Daddy," A. Behrend, "Sing Me to Sleep," Edwin Greene, F. J. Pope; stories in character, J. Campbell Haywood; songs, "A Little While," Falter, "My Native Land," Hugo Haun, Miss Marion Rummler; song, "The Two Grenadiers," Schumann, L. J. Geary; piano solo, selected.

Mr. McCready's humor was rare and racy. The singing of Mr. Pope and of Miss Rummler and the stories of J. Campbell Haywood were particularly enjoyed.

Mrs. F. W. Iredell, of Madison avenue, has recovered from a recent illness.

COLLINS TO BE GENERAL

Colonel of 2nd Regt. to Be Promoted to Brigadier Generalship Friday Night.

COL. DUNGAN GOES UP

Somerville Man to Succeed to the Colonelcy and Forman to Take His Place.

Colonel D. F. Collins, of Elizabeth, commander of the Second Regiment of the National Guard, will, it is now quite certain, be elected Friday night as Brigadier-General, to succeed Quincy O'M. Gilmore, resigned. The election will take place at the Second Regiment Armory in Trenton.

Colonel Thomas M. S. Chambers, of Trenton, having withdrawn, there will be only two candidates, Colonel Collins and Colonel John A. Mather, of Camden, commander of the Third Regiment. On the second or third ballot the Third Regiment officers, after having given Colonel Mather the customary complimentary vote, will, it is said, go over to Colonel Collins, who, according to the present program, will then be chosen unanimously.

As a result of Colonel Collins' election, all of the officers of the Second Regiment will be promoted. Lieutenant-Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan will succeed to the colonelcy, and Major George L. Forman will become lieutenant-colonel.

LOCAL COP FIRST OVER CHINESE WALL

DR. CORBUSIER REFERS TO PATROLMAN DOBSON IN HIS LECTURE.

Dr. Harold Corbusier, of Watchung avenue, gave an illustrated lecture on "China and the Boxer Uprising," before the Men's Club, of the First Baptist church, last night. The lecturer was a U. S. Army surgeon during the troubles in China, being attached to the 15th Infantry. He gave a brief history of the Boxer troubles from its inception, it being a movement on the part of a certain element of the Chinese against all foreigners. He described the depredations of the Boxes and how they were eventually stopped by the soldiers from other nations, especially those from this country.

Dr. Corbusier's views were taken by himself while in the service. They included pictures of the various troops, the arrival of Count von Waldesee, who was nominally in command of the troops, British-Chinese soldiers, which the speaker said made good fighters; Bengal Lanciers, which made excellent cavalrymen. Pictures were also shown of troops on the march, the walled city, with its wall twenty-five miles long and forty feet high, over which the 14th Infantry scaled in Pekin with the Stars and Stripes. In this connection Dr. Corbusier mentioned the name of George Dobscon, a patrolman in this city, who was a member of the 14th Infantry and was one of the first soldiers over the wall. Mr. Dobson was present at the lecture.

A great tribute was paid by the lecturer to General Chaffee, who was in charge of Uncle Sam's troops in China, and said that in many instances he prevented looting and other depredations on the part of the Chinese and other foreigners. Other pictures shown by Dr. Corbusier included scenes in the forbidden city, the interior of the hospitals, and many public and private buildings of interest. Some of these views were among the first to be taken.

In connection with the lecture, there were a number of musical selections on a Victor talking machine by Elston M. Leonard and Henry C. Brose.

Metropolitan Men Dine.

S. J. Robertson, the new superintendent of the Plainfield office of the Metropolitan Insurance Company, gave a dinner at Truell Inn, last night, to his staff, covers being laid for eight. The dinner was the result of a contest for new business conducted by Frank Stewart and Charles DeWitt, in which the former was the winner. The defeated leader and his men were invited to the feast. Those at the dinner were Superintendent S. J. Robertson, John Manley, F. C. Burner, John Zoll, D. F. Cottel, Edward Nelson, Frank Stewart and Charles DeWitt.

Miss Grant's Recital.

A pleasing programme was rendered at the second piano recital given by the pupils of Miss F. May Grant at her residence, 320 East Seventh street, Saturday evening. Special mention should be given to little Miss Lillian Steuer, of East Sixth street, who played in a skillful manner for one so small.

STOKES PRAISES COLBY

Governor Links His Name With That of Hughes as a Reformer.

AT ALUMNI DINNER

Everett Colby and His Cousin, Gardner Colby, Also Speak at Brown Graduates' Dinner.

Governor Stokes gave high praise to Senator Colby, and linked his name with that of Governor Hughes, of New York, as a leader in political reform in a speech delivered last night at the annual dinner of the Brown University Alumni Association of New York. New Jersey was well represented at the dinner, which was held at the Hotel Astor, Manhattan.

Besides Governor Edward C. Stokes, State Senator Everett Colby, of Essex; Senator Boyd Avis, of Gloucester; Senator William J. Bradley, of Camden; Senator Oliver Brown, of Monmouth; Senator Edward S. Lee, of Atlantic; Senator Bloomfield H. Minch, of Cumberland, president of the Senate; William Cloke, State Riparian Commissioner; Walter Edge, of Atlantic City; the Rev. Dr. B. W. Borrow, of the class of '51, the oldest graduate present, and the Rev. Dr. Edward H. McGill were among the New Jersey alumni present.

It was notable that three of the six set speeches were delivered by New Jersey alumni—Gov. Stokes, Senator Colby, and the latter's brother, Gardner Colby, '87, president of the New York Alumni Association and toastmaster of the dinner.

Governor Stokes said:

I bring you greetings from New Jersey. New Jersey's reputation is well known. She needs no encomiums. She is the mother of reformers, and like the Roman matron of old, she says of Governor Hughes and former Governor Higgins and Senator Colby. "These are my jewels." Years ago she laid the foundations that made possible the intellectual development of these apostles; one to redeem Rhode Island, another to elevate the political and business ethics of New York and the other to start a movement in my own State that has become known throughout the country and that is unfortunate only in the suggestion that there could be anything wrong in New Jersey.

Brown University, like the Standard Oil, is a Jersey product. One hundred and fifty years ago the Baptists founded at Hopewell, across the Hudson, a school for the education of pious young men—a race that had run out before most of us got in college—not for politics, but for the ministry. In this school were trained, among others, the pastor of the First Baptist church in New York, James Warren, a predecessor of President Faunce, and Benjamin Howell, United States Senator from Rhode Island, before the deadlocks became fashionable.

New Jersey was not granting charters in those days, and her refusal in this case lost her this famous school that Rhode Island welcomed and that developed into Brown University, our beloved Ala Mater. New Jersey then learned the lesson that has since stood her in good stead and has never ceased to issue charters from that hour.

It was in Hopewell, the site of this famous institution of learning, that there lived a prototype of Mr. Rockefeller in Elizabeth Hobbs, who gave $1,750, at that time the largest sum ever given for the education of young men, and out of this fund aid was given to Charles Thompson, the valedictorian of the first graduating class of Rhode Island College. And so I come from a commonwealth that is the birthplace of Brown, another badge of distinction to my State.

The consistuency of today is better trained than that of half a century ago. As soon as the babe can walk it has the kindergarten. The printing press toils day and night for the diffusion of knowledge, and although it gives most of its columns to murder trials, it does chronicle the events of the day. Art makes pictures so that men without travel or expense can see distant countries and look upon the faces of the world's greatest men.

In 1860 there were only forty secondary schools in this country; today we have over seventy-five hundred high schools. The number of high school students has increased two and a half times within a decade and the number of college students doubled within a few years. In the last thirty years the number of women engaged in higher education has increased three hundred per cent.

Such a constituency is demanding a leadership other than mere political boss, and it is this intellectual spirit that has caused the awakening for which Governor Hughes and Governor Higgins and Senator Colby

UNION CO. FOR VOORHEES

Not Only Ackerman But the Three Assemblymen as Well Favor Morris Man.

"UNCLE DAN" CERTAIN

Receives 29 Favorable Letters From Legislators Concerning His Candidacy for Treasurership.

Not only will Senator Ackerman, whose vote for him was announced in The Daily Press yesterday, but the entire Union county delegation will cast their votes for "Uncle Dan" Voorhees for State Treasurer to succeed United States Senator-elect Frank O. Briggs. It is said that a caucus will be held Wednesday and it is now practically certain that the Morris county man will land the prize. Senator Frelinghuysen as has been stated is still working hard for former State Senator Charles A. Reed. "Uncle Dan" claims that he has received twenty-nine favorable replies from legislators he had written to asking for support. Fourteen of the number pledged their votes to him. He adds that he has also received favorable assurances from Governor Stokes.

For the purpose of strengthening his fences for the coming fray "Uncle Dan" visited Trenton yesterday and held lengthy confabs with the Republican party leaders. With smiling confidence the Morris county "boss" assured a reporter that he expected to find little difficulty in landing the prize and in the opinion of many Mr. Voorhees stated a fact.

Ever since it became apparent that Mr. Briggs was to succeed John F. Dryden in the federal Senate, "Uncle Dan," as he is known among the politicians, has been conducting an active campaign for the treasureship. Hhe wrote personal letters to each of the Republican legislators asking for their support and he stated yesterday that he had received numerous favorable replies.

Friends of Mr. Voorhees' candidacy were claiming yesterday that their man would have sufficient strength in the Republican caucus to insure him the nomination on the rst ballot as they declared that, while they had been assured of the support of 30 of the 44 Republican Senators and Assemblymen.

Mr. Voorhees was at the State House nearly all day yesterday. During the morning he called upon Governor Stokes, Mr. Briggs and several of the lesser lights, while during the afternoon he spent most of the time closeted with Mr. Briggs in the treasurer's office. As one of the loungers in the corridors remarked, "It looked as though 'Uncle Dan' was familiarizing himself with the workings of the department which he expects to direct."

Mr. Colby has not stated his position in regard to Mr. Voorhees' candidacy as yet, but it is believed that he will absolutely refuse to enter the party caucus. When he bolted the Senatorial caucus last Tuesday Mr. Colby declared that he would never again participate in such an affair, and it is believed in some quarters that he will be able to persuade Assemblyman Guy L. Fake, of Bergen, to assume the same attitude.

LENT BEGINS TOMORROW

Announcements Made by the Rectors of Local R. C. and P. E. Churches.

FORTY DAYS FAST

Penitential Season Begins With Ash Wednesday and Ends On Easter Sunday, March 31.

Lent, the season of prayer and fasting, observed generally by the Romon and Anglican churches throughout the world, begins tomorrow. In all of the Catholic and Episcopal churches, special services will be held daily for forty days, beginning tomorrow, which is known in the church calendar as Ash-Wednesday, and ending on Easter Sunday, March 31. In St. Mary's and St. Joseph's Catholic churches and in Grace, Holy Cross, Heavenly Rest and St. Stephen's Episcopal churches, special announcements have been made by the rectors. These announcements follow:

Grace Church.

The Lenten season will be observed with special services at Grace church, under the direction of the rector, Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson. The services for Ash Wednesday include Holy Communion at 7 o'clock and morning prayer and Holy Communion with sermon at 10 o'clock in the morning. At 12 o'clock noon there will be the penitential office and there will be evening prayer and sermon at 8 o'clock.

On Sundays during Lent there will be Holy Communion at 7:30; morning prayer and sermon, with Holy Communion on first Sunday, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning; Sunday-school at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and evening prayer with preaching at 4:45. Services will be held at the colored mission at 11 o'clock in the morning and 8 o'clock in the evening. On March 25 there will be Annunciation B. V. M. and Holy Communion at 10 o'clock in the morning. The week day services will include evening prayer at 5 o'clock with address to the children on Friday; Wednesday, evensong and sermon, 8 p. m., Wednesday and Friday, mid-day prayers, 12 o'clock noon; Thursday, Holy Communion, 9 a. m.

Additional services for Holy Week include Holy Communion on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings at 10 o'clock; Wednesday evensong, 8 o'clock; Maundy Thursday, Holy Communion, 10 o'clock a. m. On Monday evening in Holy Week there will be the Passion service, "The Crucifixon," at 8 o'clock; Tuesday evening, The Story of the Passion; Maundy Thursday, Commemoration of the Institution at 8 o'clock in the evening. The services for Good Friday will be as follows: Antecommunion, 7 o'clock; children's service, 9 o'clock; morning prayer, litany and sermon, 10 o'clock; meditations on the Passion, 12 to 3 p. m.; evensong, 5 p. m. On Easter eve at 5 o'clock there will be evensong and public baptism. On Easter Day there will be Holy Communion at 7 and 8 o'clock; morning prayer, Holy Communion and sermon at 10:30 o'clock; children's carol service at 3 o'clock and evening prayer and sermon at 5 o'clock.

These special preachers are announced for Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock; February 13, Rev. E. Vicar Stevenson; February 20, Rev. Frederick A. Wright, Brooklyn; February 27, Rev. E. J. Knight, Christ church, Trenton; March 6, Rev. Albert Longley, Trinity church, Bayonne; March 13, Rev. E. Atherton Lyon, Christ church, Yonkers; March 20, Rev. Philip M. Kerridge, Easton, Pa.; March 27, Rev. Charles Fiske, St. John's church, Somerville; March 7, illustrated lecture, "History of the Episcopal church," Rev. Dr. Charles L. Cooder.

The Passion service to be held at 12 o'clock noon on Good Friday will be in charge of Rev. Melville K. Bailey. The church will be open daily from 9 to 5 o'clock for purposes of private prayer and meditation.

Holy Cross Church.

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, has announced the special services to be held at his church during the Lenten season. The Sunday services will include Holy Communion at 7:30 in the morning, also on the first Sunday of the month a second celebration at 11 o'clock in the morning. Sunday-school will be held at 9:45 o'clock in the morning in the parish house, except the first Sunday in the month, when the children's service is held in the church at the same hour. Morning prayer and sermon will be held at 11 o'clock and evensong and sermon at 7:45 o'clock.

Holy Day services will be held tomorrow, with Holy Communion at 7:30, morning prayer, litany and sermon at 11 o'clock and evensong and sermon at 7:45 o'clock. On Monday, February 25, Feast of St.

BACHELORS GIVE DANCE

One Hundred and Fifty Society Folk Attend Function at the Casino.

BEAUTIFUL DECORATION

Stringed Orchestra and Quartette Furnish the Music—Refreshments Served at Midnight.

The bachelor dance at the Casino, last night, was attended by over 150 members of the younger set from the city and borough, and including a few out-of-town guests. It was the first affair of the kind held in several years and was so successful that it is likely that others will be given in the near future. The large hall was decorated attractively, the stage bing hidden from view by a mass of palms and ferns. The electric lights were covered with red crepe paper, giving additional brilliancy to the scene.

Austin's full stringed orchestra furnished the music for dancing, and a pleasing innovation was the vocal and instrumental selections by the famous Eureka Quartette, colored, which entertained at the college smoker. The quartette interspersed the dance numbers with topical selections, while the dancing by the colored men made the hit of the evening. The quartette also entertained during the supper hour.

Refreshments were served at numerous small tables placed abou the hall. Sixty-five couples sat down to supper and with the exception of four married couples, all were members of the younger society set.

The committee of young men who arranged the dance included J. Hartley Mellick, Harvey Fisk, H. Whitney Baker, Willard Wadsworth, Morris J. Dumont and Roy V. Cox. The affair was held under the patronage of these well known society women: Mrs. Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. David Hill Rowland, Mrs. Charles Joel Fisk, Mrs. William B. Wadsworth, Mrs. Chapman Fisk and Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies.

GETS $200 DAMAGES FROM TROLLEY COMPANY

ABRAM GULICK WINS SUIT FOR DAMAGES AGAINST THE P. S. C.

The jury gave Abram Gulick $200 damages in his suit against the P. S. C. in the District Court yesterday afternoon. He sued for $300, compensation claimed to be due for damages sustained, or the result of a collision between a trolley car and his wagon on West Front street, near De Kalb avenue, November 5.

Gulick was thrown from his seat and so badly hurt that he could not return to work for two weeks. Dr. Wilde, of Bound Brook, who attended him, testified to that. Dr. J. H. Buchanan, witness for the P. S. C., acknowledged that Gulick was too badly hurt to return to work after the accident.

Lawyer John Bernhard, for the P. S. C., tried to prove contributory negligence. The testimony insinuated that Gulick was not sober. The effect of it was destroyed when Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., counsel for Gulick, put the plaintiff on the stand in rebuttal.

The jury received the case at 3:40 o'clock and brought in a verdict at 4:45. It surprised the P. S. C. lawyer, who had been confident the case was going his way.

Reunion of Seneca Club.

The members of the old Seneca Social Club held a reunion last night at the home of Miss Myra C. Dunavan, on East Second street. In addition to the playing of games and listening to a fine programme of vocal and instrumental solos, a feature was the reading of the last will and testament of the club by Alfred W. Dunavan. In this document all of the property of the organization was equally divided among the members. After the programme refreshments were served. Those present were the Misses Myra C. Dunavan, Elsie Dunavan, Marie Hahn, Cornelia Hansen, Edna Dilts, Hermenia Leitheusser and Leslie Crane, Edward Honeyman, Alfred W. Dunavan, Harris Fahn and Monroe Staats.

Sleighride to Westfield.

The Misses Florence and Nellie Berkhan, of Watchung avenue, arranged a sleighing party that went to Westfield, last night. There were thirty in the conveyance and at Westfield hot chocolate was enjoyed before the return trip was commenced.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss Nora Noonan, of this city, and Peter J. Delaney, of Elizabeth. No date has been set for the wedding.

BURNS WILL PROVE FATAL

Clothing of Servant at R. H. McCutcheon's Ignited From Range Searing Her Body.

NOW IN THE HOSPITAL

Heroic Efforts of William McDonough To Save Her Results In His Own Injury.

Miss Hannah Neilson, a domestic at the home of R. H. McCutchen, of Plainfield avenue, received probable fatal burns in an accident at the McCutcheon home shortly before 11 o'clock last night. She is now in Muhlenberg Hospital with her body seared from head to foot while the physicians assert that she has but very little chance of recovery.

In company with several other servants, Miss Neilson was in the kitchen of the house last night, enjoying a social talk before retiring. She stood before the range and unnoticed by herself or anyone else in the room her dress was very close to the front opening. It began to smolder from the heat and suddenly burst into flames, enveloping the woman from head to foot. She sprang from the room in a frenzy and despite the attempts of her companions ran from one hallway to another, all the time emitting piercing screams.

William McDonough, another employee of Mr. McCutcheon, was in the vicinity, and hearing the cries of Miss Neilson, ran to her assistance. She was so panic-stricken that he was compelled to grab hold of her and by main strength force her to the floor to do anything toward putting out the flames. He then secured a rug and by alternate beating with his hands and smothering, extinguished the last bit of fire. By that time nearly every bit of Miss Neilson's clothing had been burned off and she was suffering terrible agony.

The family had in the meantime telephoned fire headquarters, believing the house to be afire, and Chief Doane had started out with a hose wagon and the chemical engine. The police were also 'phoned and Chief Kiely went out in the patrol wagon, picking up Dr. Buchanan on the way. When the latter reached the McCutcheon home he found Miss Neilson in a serious condition and McDonough with two badly burned arms. Both were given immediate attention and Miss Neilson was then removed to the hospital in the ambulance. She is forty years old and has been employed by Mr. Neilson for the past fourteen months. So far as known she has no relatives in this country.

The servants who witnessed McDonough's action in trying to save Miss Neilson are loud in their praises of his bravery. He seemed absolutely fearless of the flames although they ignited his own clothing and he was in danger of inhaling them. He ignored himself until Miss Neilson had received every attention and then it was learned that his burns were almost severe enough to have him go to the hospital as well. He is the son of Peter McDonough, the horseshoer, and until a short time ago was employed by Adam Blair.

Medical Board Report.

Nothing but routine business was transacted at the February meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, at the Casino, last night. The medical board reported the number of patients for January as follows: Patients in the hospital at date of last report, 23; admitted, 59; discharged cured, 33; improved, 6; not improved, 3; died, 5; total number of patients treated, 82; remaining, 36; hospitals days, 1,034; operations, 57. In the dispensary: Patients, 42; visits of patients, 132; operations, 10.

Brick Flats Sold.

M. Abrams and Abram Kunzman acquired possession of the row of brick flats on Central avenue at Second street, yesterday, by purchase, from James C. Manning. The consideration is not mentioned in the contract that passed. Neither Mr. Abrams nor Mr. Kunzman could be seen this morning.

Will Consider License Applications.

The Common Council will hold an adjourned meeting on Monday night, February 25, to act on the applications for liquor licenses presented at the regular February meeting. There are twelve applicants, two wholesale and ten retail, and will probably be granted.

Designed Banquet Menu.

The menu card for the Board of Trade banquet will be illuminated with designs in color. The designs are line drawings, simple but very attractive. They were drawn by Miss May Berkhan, a graduate of St. Gabriel's Academy.

Miss Bertha Brewer, of Prescott place, has recovered from an attack of the grip.

SWIFT SWORN IN FOR FIVE-YEAR TERM.

Reappoints Edward Bauer Clerk of the District Court.

Judge C. Addison Swift took the oath of office yesterday morning before County Clerk James C. Calvert as judge of the District Court of Elizabeth. When he was appointed about a year ago it was to fill the vacancy created through the promotion of Judge Atwater. The Senate was not in session at that time, so that the appointment was only ad interim. Governor Stokes sent the name of Judge Swift to the present Senate for a full term of five years, and the nomination was approved.

One of the first acts of the judge upon being sworn in was to re-name Edward Bauer as clerk of the District Court.

Man Frozen to Lamp-Post.

New York, Feb. 12.—Policeman Schiffer in Third avenue at 8 o'clock last night noticed a man clinging to a lamp-post at the northeast corner of Thirty-fourth street. At 10 o'clock at saw that the fellow was in the same position and walked up to where he was. He found that the man was unconscious, with the fingers of both hands frozen tightly to the iron post. With his night stick the policeman pried the fingers loose and got assistance to carry the man to the East Thirty-fifth Street Police Station. There it was discovered that the men's arms and legs from the knees down were frozen. While first aid was being given an ambulance from Bellevue Hospital was summoned. Surgeon Cudderback saw at once that the man was in a critical condition. He took him to the hospital, where it was said late last night that he would not recover. At the station the sufferer regained consciousness long enough to say that his name was John Lenahan, that he was thirty-five years old and lived at No. 571 First avenue.

Would Censor Newspapers.

Washington, Feb. 12.—President Roosevelt wants to bar from the mails all the newspapers of the country which print the court proceedings of the Thaw trial. The President does not know whether or not he can do this, but he has instructed Postmaster-General Cortelyou to have the law looked up and to bar the newspapers from the mails if he can. Before conferring with the Postmaster-General the President directed Secretary Loeb to make public the following statement which he had prepared: "The President has communicated with Postmaster-General Cortelyou to know whether it is feasible to bar from the mails the papers that give the full disgusting details of the Thaw case. He does not know whether it is feasible, but if it is he wishes it done." At the White House the information was volunteered that the President had taken this action of his own initiative, without suggestion from any source.

Five Burn to Death.

Allentown, Pa., Feb. 12.—William Reidnauer, a baker, and his four children met death last night in a fire that originated in his bakery. Reidnauer had been making doughnuts or "fastnacht cakes" for today, Shrove Tuesday, when the hot fat set fire to the building. The man fought the flames alone until he saw that they had got beyond his control, when he called to his wife to summon help and then ran upstairs to rescue the children. In the hallway he was overcome by smoke and was burned to death where he lay. The charred bodies of the children were found in the second-floor rooms, where they had been sleeping.

Sixty-One and Unkissed.

Milwaukee, Feb. 12.—William Bartel, sixty-one years old, testified under oath yesterday that he had never been kissed by a woman nor had he ever kissed one. He was a witness in a case of a saloonkeeper on whose place a raid had been made. It was intimated that Bartel had hugged and kissed a young woman present. Bartel denied the implication and with dramatic pose and flashing eyes said: "I have never kissed a woman in my life, and no woman ever kissed me, and never will, so help me God."

Weakfish In An Oyster.

New York, Feb. 12.—Finding an enormous oyster in a lot of Lynbrooks received three weeks ago, L. D. Fays, a dealer at Jamaica, set it aside to show his customers. The oyster "acted uneasy." It opened and shut at frequent intervals. After a week Fay opened it. To his astonishment he found between the oyster and the lower shell a tiny weakfish, or sea- trout, two inches long. He dropped the fish into some water and it swam about as if relieved.

$1.50 ALL-SILK VOILE FOR - $1

This is one of the best silk offerings we have made in a long while, as you will agree when you see these splendid All-Silk Voiles. We are sure that other stores will be glad to get them at wholesale at the prices at which we are going to sell them at retail.

It was a lucky pick-up for us when we got them and we are glad to offer them to our patrons thus early in the season at such an exceptional price.

These Voiles are strictly pure silk, every thread of them, strong and lustrous; 44 inches wide; the most wanted silk for entire gowns, surpassing all others in popular favor, and we offer it in brown, wine, myrtle, navy, royal, gray, Alice, light blue, pink, rose, helio, corn, champagne, reseda, white, cream and black. Pick the shade you like best; they are all beautiful, and instead of paying us $1.50 a yard (the real value of the goods) take it at only $1.00

Pick a Pretty Petticoat.

PAY $5.00 INSTEAD OF $8.50.

Gladsome news is this for those who are ready to buy a nice Silk Petticoat; for we are going to save money for those who buy from this lot. Several hundred petticoats come with this purchase, about 200 of them being guaranteed taffetas in a number of excellent styles—all splendidly made, not only beautiful to look at but of a quality that will make them wear exceptionally well, enabling you to dress well without being extravagant.

These Petticoats may be had in black and in a wide range of colors. They are in the newest spring modes with circular flounce extra wide, with inlay of silk or cloth—petticoats that would readily sell for $8.50, because they are well worth it, to be placed on sale tomorrow at only $5.00

La Florence Corsets.

DEMONSTRATION THIS WEEK.

We would like you to become acquainted with the exceptional merits of the La Florence Corset which is strictly hand-made and is our own importation.

We are showing these splendid stays in the latest Parisian models in a variety of new and beautiful materials, prettily trimmed with satin ribbon bows and deep falls of lace; boned with genuine Green and whalebone; prices run from $3 to $12.

The Demonstration this week will enable our expert to designate for those who attend just what corset is best to their individual figure. If you desire perfect-fitting gowns it is essential that you have a corset that fits you accurately.

SUCH an achievement is worth a lifetime of effort—for certainly no greater value has ever been produced than you get in

PLAN NEW COUNTY BOARD TAX MEASURE

COMMISSION WOULD BE COMPOSED OF FIVE MEMBERS WITH LARGER SALARIES

Trenton, Feb. 12.—Assemblyman John C. Groel's bill providing for a new system of taxation in counties will soon be ready.

The proposed law provides that boards of equalization of taxes in counties of the first class, at present consisting of three members with salaries of $2,400 a year each, shall have a membership of five, each to receive $5,000. Three shall be real estate men who shall have been in business fifteen years, one an architect with a business experience of similar duration and the fifth any citizen who may be qualified to serve. One member of the board goes out of office each year, leaving four experienced men to serve in case the fifth should not be reappointed. The appointees shall devote their entire time to the work and appraise properties only on personal inspection.

"The increased expense of such a system," said Mr. Groel Friday, "would be small as compared with the increase of the revenues. Under the present system it is impossible to make a personal inspection to see that all properties are assessed at their true values. Higher salaries are provided in order that thoroughly efficient men may be procured, and because they will be required to devote their entire time to the work, a thing which the members of the present board cannot well afford to do. I had originally intended to include a contractor or boss carpenter in the appointive list, but specified an architect because requested to do so by members of the Hudson delegation. They said that an architect had been engaged to appraise Jersey City property for taxation purposes, and had proved the value of his profession for such work as this."

Criticism has been passed on Mr. Groel's bill on the ground that so large a board, drawing such high salaries, would be unnecessary as soon as the work of readjustment valuations could be carried out in all sections of the county. This would be in a very few years. It is also felt in certain quarters that the board should have at least one representative from the contractors, who are well qualified by their business experience to judge of valuations.

WOULD PROVE JERSEY MARKSMEN THE BEST.

Inspector General Spencer Adds Expert and Sharpshooter Classes in Rifle Practice.

Trenton, Feb. 12.—Orders issued Saturday to the New Jersey National Guard show that Inspector General of Rifle Practice General Burd Spencer, of Passaic, has not forgotten nor forgiven the alleged turning down of Sea Girt as the place of holding the national shooting matches, and himself as president of the national association. It is now the purpose of General Spencer to show the world that the New Jersey Marksmen are the best on the earth, as well as Sea Girt is the best rifle range in the country.

To these ends, General Spencer orders "hereafter the rifle practice of the guardsmen will include expert and sharpshooter classes, in addition to the several others exisiting in the past."

The classification is: Fourth class, all those who have not fired; third class, all who report and make an aggregate less than 40 out of a possible 100 in their two best scores; second class, all those who make an aggregate of 40 or better, but less than 50 out of a possible 100 from their two best scores; first class, all those who make an aggregate of 50 or better, but less than 60 out of a possible 100 from their two best scores; marksmen, all those who make an aggregate of 60 or better, but less than 70 out of a possible 100 from their two best score; sharpshooters, all those who make 80, but less than 90, in the same way; experts, all those who make an aggregate of 90 or better from their two best scores.

The decorations will be more costly than those given in the past, and everything possible to make New Jersey the banner State in marksmanship will be done.

Carnegie Helps Church.

At the Congregational church in Elizabeth on Sunday, a letter was read from Andrew Carnegie, through its secretary, offering to give the church $750 toward a new pipe organ. A rising vote of thanks was given, followed by the singing of the doxology. It was also announced that on the evening of February 21 Dr. Taft will be installed, this service to be followed by a reception to the pastor and his wife. The Ladies' Aid Society will have a meeting next Thursday at 2:30 at the home of Mrs. Boheneberger, 30 South Second street, to plan for the reception.

Reception to U. S. Senator-elect.

Trenton, Feb. 12.—The Republican Club of this city has fixed Tuesday evening, February 26, for the reception to United States Senator-elect Frank O. Briggs. It is planned to make the affair one of the largest of the kind held by the club, which is noted for its entertainments. Senators Kean and Dryden, Governor Stokes and all the State dignitaries are expected to be present.

Plainfield, N. J., February 12, 1907.

A POOR CHOICE.

"Uncle Dan" appears to have the State treasurership clinched and the reason why is plain. The truth has been told on the highways and by-ways. The Morris county man, who is a veteran at office holding, has always done the bidding of the machine and now he is to be rewarded with a $6,000 job. This does not alter the fact that former State Senator Charles A. Reed would be as much superior for the place as Mahlon Pitney or John W. Griggs would be for the berth that has been given Frank O. Briggs. Political conditions are rapidly changing, however, and it will not be long before better ideas of government will be firmly lodged in the hearts of the people of New Jersey. Then will the best men be chosen for public office.

THE THAW TRIAL.

President Roosevelt deserves praise for his speedy attempt to put a stop to the distribution through the mails of papers containing the disgusting accounts of the Thaw trial. While the rot and filth that appears as evidence in the case may be necessary in a court of law, there is no reason why the general public should have the lurid and disgusting details spread before it. The papers with such accounts in them go into the homes and are necessarily read by children of ten age. Thus incalculable harm is done. For this reason The Daily Press has from the first kept from its columns any reference to the trial.

DISFIGURED STREETS.

Just why no attention is paid by the city authorities to the dangerous and unsightly condition caused by the overhead feed wire of the P. S. C. running through Second street is indeed hard to understand. It is equally difficult to decipher why wires in general are allowed to be strung along the streets. That they are a disfigurement, no one will deny. Other matters of less moment seem to occupy the attention of those in authority, however, and it seems that it will be a long day before any attention is given this matter.

HOG STILL GROWING.

"Caruso," the big hog being raised by C. T. Rogers, of New Market, whose weight and tremendous appetite were reported several weeks ago, is still growing. Mr. Rogers thinks he will be able to smash all hog raising records for this section. He believes "Caruso" will take on weight enough to dress at 1,000 pounds in February. He will be slaughtered before March 1.

The hog's fame has spread over the country. W. J. Davis, a former New Marketer, now living in Los Angeles, Cal., has written Mr. Rogers that he saw an article on the big porker in a Pacific Coast paper.—The Daily Press, Dec. 27, 1906.

speak.

The problems of today are not emotional, but intellectual. The relation between capital and labor, the accumulation of wealth, the power of corporate enterprise, reform in administrative methods, are questions that require a trained leadership that shall settle them fearlessly, courageously, with prudence and without shock, and not leave them to be fanned to fury by demagogues who go to extremes and who exterminate the disease by killing the patient.

I have had some little to do with politics. I have heard anathemas hurled against the machine. I never yet knew the hour when the machine, if it was wrong, would not break under the attacks of intelligence when intelligence was awakened to its duty. Men want to do the right and they follow the trained leadership that in thinking makes them think and see the right.'

JOHN DOUD'S FUNERAL.

Mass in St. Joseph's Church Attended by a Large Gathering.

With a large gathering of relatives and friends in attendance, the funeral of John McBain Doud was held in St. Joseph's church this morning. A solemn mass of requiem was said by Rev. Father Miller and during the service he took occasion to speak at some length on the life of the young man, stricken down just after he had attained his majority. The gathering in the church included many companions of his own age and the words of the priest struck a responsive chord in the hearts of all, his commendable traits being known to young and old.

The display of floral tributes was one of the largest ever seen in the church and revealed as much as anything else the high regard in which he was held. The set pieces included a large pillow from the borough fire department, in which he was a call man; another from the employees of the A&P Tea Company and one from the young men who had been his closest associates.

The interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery and the pall bearers were six companions who had been named by him before his death. They were Grover Schuck, Hugh Ricketts, William Bechtle, Morris Brokaw, John McCullough and George Conover.

Y. M. H. A. BALL.

Held Last Night at Dancing Academy; a Great Success.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association held its first ball, last night, at the Plainfield Dancing Academy, West Front street. It was largely attended, and a complete success. Naylor's full orchestra played.

Out-of-town guests included delegations from the Raritan Club, the Y. M. H. A., of New York, and the Young Ladies' Social Circle, of Perth Amboy. There were special features, including shadow dances, and songs by Miss Daws, of Westfield; Harold Willard and Jacob Abrams.

The floor committee was made up as follows: Jacob W. Moledezky, floor manager; Herman Kahn, Samuel Rothberg, Meyer D. Moledezky, Meyer Rosenthal, Max W. Goldstein, Hyman Richard, Aaron Keiser, Edward Nadel.

MISS LIBBEY'S PLAY PRODUCED.

"Parted On Her Bridal Tour" Gets An Enthusiastic Reception.

Laura Jean Libbey's play, "Parted On Her Bridal Tour," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Monday, had its premiere in Brooklyn last night. It received an enthusiastic reception as the following dispatch to the Daily Press from Manager Wall will show:

Laura Jean Libbey,
Whose Play, "Parted On Her Bridal Tour," Had Its Premiere in Brooklyn Last Night and Comes to Plainfield Next Monday Afternoon and Night.

"Charles E. Blaney produced at his Brooklyn theatre tonight Laura Jean Libbey's dramatization of her famous novel, "Parted On Her Bridal Tour," or "Miss Middleton's Lovers," and was received by a house packed from pit to dome that hugely enjoyed the performance from start to finish. After the second act the audience, arose en masse and yelled 'Libby, Libby, Laura Jean.' Miss Libbey was seated in the stage box and responded with a neat little speech in which she thanked her audience. Victory Bateman, in the lead, scored heavily. The production is one of the best and largest Mr. Blaney has offered.

"JAMES WALL."

Martine's Engagements.

James E. Martine, "the farmer-orator," will be one of the speakers at the Americus Club banquet at Camden on Monday night, February 25. On March 12 he will make a speech at the Delaware Club, Jersey City.

LENT BEGINS TOMORROW

Matthias, there will be Holy Communion at 9:30 o'clock, evensong at 5 o'clock.

Week day services will be held as follows: Daily at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, except Wednesdays and Fridays, when the service will be at 7:45 o'clock in the evening. Sermons on Monday afternoons and on Wednesday and Friday evenings. On Thursdays there will be a celebration of the Holy Communion at 9:30 o'clock in the morning. The following programme of services for Holy Week is announced:

March 24, Palm Sunday; March 28, Maundy Thursday, Holy Communion at 9:30 o'clock; March 29, Good Friday, morning prayer and ante-communion service at 9:30 o'clock, "Three Hours' Service," 12-3 p. m.; evensong at 7:45 o'clock; March 30, Easter even, Holy Baptism at 5 o'clock; March 31, Easter Day, Holy Communion at 6 and 8 o'clock in the morning; children's carol service at 9:45 o'clock; morning prayer, sermon and Holy Communion at 11 o'clock; evensong and sermon at 7:45 o'clock. The confirmation class will meet in the church after Friday evening services throughout Lent.

The subject of the Sunday morning sermons by the rector will be "Some Sins and Virtues," as follows: February 17, Pride-Humility; February 24, Covetousness-Liberality; March 10, Envy-Gentleness; March 17, Anger-Patience; March 24, Sloth-Diligence; March 31, The Power of Recovery. The subject for Sunday evenings will be the sermon on the mount.

At the children's service, Monday afternoons at 5 o'clock, the rector will give a series of addresses under the general title, "Christian Heroes and the Lessons They Have to Teach Us." These talks to the children will be illustrated and the copies of the painting may be taken home by the children. The first children's service will be held Monday, February 18. A feature of these services will be singing by the girls' choir at the 5 o'clock servicest during Lent. On Wednesday evenings the rector will preach on "The Fundamental Truths of Christianity, and on Friday evenings he will give a series of explanatory talks on "The Office of Holy Communion," as contained in The Book of Common Prayer.

St. Stephen's Church.

Rev. Arthur S. Peck, rector of St. Stephen's church, has completed his list of special services for the Lenten season, and announces the following special preachers: February 22, Rev. E. G. Bowers, Christ church, Elizabeth; March 1, Rev. Arthur S. Phelps, St. Paul's church, Bound Brook; March 8, Rev. Harris C. Rush, Grace church, Linden; March 15, Rev. E. M. Rodman, Grace church, Plainfield; March 22, Rev. S. P. Simpson, St. Clement's church, New York; March 27, Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, Bishop of New Jersey; March 29, Rev. A. S. Peck.

The Lenten schedule is as follows: Sundays, 7:30, 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., Holy Communion, matins and evensong; Wednesdays, 10 a. m. and 4 p. m., Holy Communion and evensong; Thursdays, 7 a. m., Holy Communion; Fridays, 8 p. m., penitential office, special preacher; Saturdays, 4 p. m., children's service. Instruction for confirmation will be given weekly. The services for Holy Week are as follows:

Monday, 4 p. m., evensong; Tuesday, 10 a. m., Holy Communion; Wednesday, 7 a. m., 8 p. m., Holy Communion, confirmation; Maundy Thursday, 7, 10 a. m., 4 p. m., Holy Communion, evensong; Good Friday, 10 a. m., 12-3 and 8 p. m., service of the Pro-Anaphora, Passion service and evensong; Easter even, 10 a. m., 4 p. m., Holy Communion, first service of Easter; Easter Day, 6, 7:30, 10:30, 11 a. m., and 4 p. m., low celebrations, matins, high celebration, children's festival.

On Ash-Wednesday, early communion will be celebrated at 7 o'clock, litany and communion at 10 and evening service at 7 o'clock.

St. Mary's.

The observance of the Lenten season at St. Mary's church will begin tomorrow with the blessing of the ashes at 8 o'clock in the morning. In the evening there will be a Lenten sermon, the benediction of the blessed sacrament and the distribution of ashes. Rev. B. M. Bogan, rector, will have charge of the services during Lent, assisted by Father Delehanty.

Each Friday evening there will be devotions of the way of the cross. On Sunday evenings at 8 o'clock there will be a Lenten sermon and benediction and a similar service will be held every Tuesday evening. Father Bogan has not announced his special preachers as yet. He will probably take charge of the course of instruction during Lent and the masses on Sunday will be divided between himself and Father Delehanty. During Holy Week the service of the way of the cross will be on Tuesday and the Passion service and the adoration of the cross will be on Good Friday.

St. Joseph's.

Special Lenten services will begin at St. Joseph's church tomorrow morning in charge of the rector, Rev. Father William H. Miller. The first service will be at 7:30 o'clock, which will include the blessing of the ashes. In the evening at 8 o'clock there will be the benediction and distribution of the ashes. Every Friday evening at 8 o'clock during Lent there will be "The Stations of the Cross" service and every Wednesday evening there will be a sermon and benediction by Father Miller. There will be the usual special services on Sunday in charge of the rector.

Heavenly Rest.

Lenten services will begin at the Church of the Heavenly Rest tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, in charge of the rector, Rev. Mr. Short, of Trenton. There will be services every Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock and on Sunday mornings during Lent there will be services at 11 o'clock and the Sunday-school session will be held at 9:45 o'clock. Mr. Short will take charge of all services.

MEN'S CLUB SMOKER.

Grace Protestant Episcopal Church Organization Entertains.

The Men's Club of Grace Protestant Episcopal church held a smoker last night. Members of several other church clubs were present. All the other clubs were invited to attend.

The Eureka Quartette, which has sung at the Casino several times, furnished the music. Members of the Crescent Avenue, Congregational and Seventh-Day churches spoke of their clubs and the progress they were making.

Thermometer 4 Below.

Today is one of the coldest of the year, the thermometer registering 4 degrees below zero at 6 o'clock this morning. The low temperature continued throughout the day with no signs of going up. The weather is ideal for ice cutting and the Natural Ice Company is doing its utmost to harvest the large and available crop producted by the cold weather. Debele & Stahl commenced this morning to harvest the second crop of ice from their pond on Maple avenue. It is eight inches thick.

Fire at Hotel Waldorf.

Fire discovered beneath the flooring in the hallway at the Hotel Waldorf, today noon, resulted in about $100 damage. The fire was caused by a defective flue and evidently had been smouldering some time when detected by Henry Windham, the proprietor. He telephoned to fire headquarters and the chemical engine responded. Four extinguishers were used before the fire was put out. The greatest damage was caused by the cutting away of the flooring to reach the flames.

Elks' Minstrel Show.

Elizabeth, Feb. 12.—Before an audience which crowded Jacobs' theatre almost to the doors, Elizabeth Lodge No. 289, B. P. O. Elks, last night provided one of the most clever amateur minstrel shows ever given in this city. The entertainment had been arranged on an elaborate scale and was successfully performed in every particular.

—Advertise in The Daily Press.

—Freeholder J. Hervey Doane has had the snow removed from all of the county bridges, extending from Scotch Plains to and including Plainfield.

—Indian River oranges, naval oranges and Tangierines; Florida grape fruit and fancy apples are among the features in Neuman Brothers' assortment of fine fruits. Their prices are low.

—A. E. Park has taken a three-year lease on the old Stonewall Jackson stables, on Somerset street, and Monday he put ten men at work on the property, fumigating, painting and thoroughly renovating the entire buildings. On Wednesday he expects to fill up the stable with high class horses, both heavy draft horses and coach horses.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Melodramas like the mist, come and go, but the new play which will introduce Joe Welch, the inimitable comedian and character actor, in an entirely novel part, is destined to have long life. It is by Hal Reid and called "The Shoemaker," and will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night. During the four acts of this latest play there is not a dull period. The scenes shift from the heart of the Bowery, New York, to the far West. Mr. Welch has a role that must needs enhance his present enviable reputation. He will appear as Morris Goldberg, a trusting and confiding Hebrew shoemaker, who believes that every one is honest. Morris' only child, a daughter, is abducted, and he seeks to find her. He has many adventures, humorous, tragic and otherwise, before she is restored to him. While the piece is not of the lurid, mushy variety so common in stage literature of its kind, it nevertheless contains plenty of thrills and sensational periods that add to its merit. Mr. Welch has plenty of bright lines and in his latest role his many admirers are sure to like him better than ever before.

A dramatic treat is in store for all those attending the New Plainfield theatre next Monday afternoon and night, when "Parted on Her Bridal Tour" will be seen for the first time. The play is presented by Charles E. Blaney and is a dramatization of the famous Laura Jean Libbey's noted book "Miss Middleton's Lover." Nearly every one has at some time read one of Miss Libbey's novels. She has become famous for her thrilling writings and as this is the first of her wonderful stories to be produced on the stage it will no doubt be an event of the season which will be watched with great interest.

Every woman must wonder sometimes how it feels to be young, rich and beautiful and to be wedded to an English nobleman of ancient title and thoroughbred character. That it is not impossible for such a union to result in mutual blessing is shown in "A Marriage of Reason," Kyrle Bellew's new play which comes to the New Plainfield theatre Wednesday night, Feb. 20. J. Hartley Manners, the brilliant British playwright, is the author of the new play, which is a study of international marriage. He holds a brief for the British man and the American woman, and considers their union an ideal one. However, in the beginning, the marriage of Rita Forrest, the Chicago heiress, and Lord Delcombe, is mercenary in the extreme. The experiences of the American countess are set forth in detail. The characters of man and wife are remarkably developed, and great love comes to them as a result of their mutual respect for each other's sterling qualities.

Charles Klein's new American play, "The Daughters of Men," which is to be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Washington's Birthday, afternoon and night, deals with the question of capital and labor. The hero is a labor leader whose ambition is to bring about a mutual understanding and fellowship between employer and employed. A notable cast has been selected by Henry B. Harris to present this successful drama here. The play has had a long and prosperous run at the Astor theatre, New York, playing to capacity business at nearly every performance.

LITERARY.

"No more Chinese or reluctant kaffirs; but labor from the great central 'mill' as it were, driven by the mile-wide Zambesi through its fall of 400 feet," says W. G. Fitz-Gerald in an article on the tremendous new water power in South Africa, which appears in the Technical World Magazine for March. "The diamond mines of Kimberley should profit too—those queer volcanic 'pipes' from which have been won sixty tons' weight of glittering gewgaws, whose value can hardly be computed in figures. And the Transcontinental Railroad should be electrified by the same power; quarries and forests developed, and electricity transmitted on vastly increased Niagara lines to the gold fields of Mazoe, Hartley and Lo Maghunda, as well as to light the fast-growing cities of Salisbury, Gwelo and Buluwayo. Telegraphs and telephones, too,—but why continue the list? The force of the Falls is to be the new heart of Africa in the more literal sense that its power will drive life in all directions through the Dark Continent."

Charles Dana Gibson Again.

This time the great American artist appears before the public as the creator of the beautiful and exclusive set of "Gibson Heads," now being given away with the New York Sunday World. It is remarkable how such a thing can be done. The extra cost of art paper, fine printing, &c., is as nothing compared to the great price this artist is known to charge for his work. But this has not stopped The World. The pictures are beautiful, and are being given away with every Sunday's paper.

—For best results try The Daily Press.

—Capt. Stevens, of Madison Barracks, New York State, will conduct the inspection of Co. K at the armory on West Front street, tonight.

—Mr. and Mrs. David S. King are now residing at 27 Craig place, having given up their residence with Mrs. King's parents on the same street.

CHAPTER VI.

The Girl and the Canoe.

Bates did not refer to his encounter with the caretaker, and I resolved to keep my knowledge of it to myself. I always prefer to let a rascal hang himself, and here was a case, I reasoned, where, if Bates was disloyal to the duties Pickering had imposed upon him, the fact of his perfidy was bound to disclose itself eventually. Glancing around at him when he was off guard I surprised a look of utter dejection upon his face as he stood with folded arms behind my chair.

He flushed and started, then put his hand to his forehead, where a strip of plaster covered his wound.

"I met with a slight accident this morning, Mr. Glenarm. The hickory's very tough, sir. A piece of wood flew up and struck me."

"Too bad!" I said with sympathy. "You'd better rest a bit this afternoon."

"Thank you, sir; but it's only a small matter,—only, you might think the cut a trifle disfiguring."

He struck a match for my cigarette, and I left without looking at him again. But as I crossed the threshold of the library I formulated this note: "Bates is a liar, for one thing, and a person with active enemies for another; watch him."

All things considered the day was passing well enough. I picked up a book, threw myself on a comfortable divan to smoke and reflect before continuing my explorations. As I lay there, Bates brought me a telegram, a reply to my message to Pickering. It read:

"Yours announcing arrival received and filed."

It was certainly a queer business, my errand to Glenarm. I lay for a couple of hours dreaming, and counted the candles in the great crystal chandelier until my eyes ached. Then I took my cap and was soon tramping toward the lake.

There were several small boats and a naphtha launch in the boat-house. I dropped a canoe into the water and paddled off toward the summer colony, whose gables and red roofs were plainly visible from the boat-house.

I landed and roamed idly over leaf-strewn walks past nearly a hundred cottages, to whose windows and verandas the winter blinds gave a dreary and inhospitable air. There was, at one point, a casino, whose broad veranda hung over the edge of the lake, while beneath, on the waterside, was a boat-house.

I walked back to the wharf, where I had left my canoe, and was about to step into it when I saw, rocking at a similar landing place near by, another slight craft of the same type as my own, but painted dark maroon. I was sure the canoe had not been there when I landed. Possibly it belonged to Morgan, the caretaker? I walked over and examined it. I even lifted it slightly to test its weight. The paddle lay on the dock beside me and it, too, I weighed critically, deciding that it was a trifle light for my own taste.

"Please—if you don't mind—"

I turned to stand face to face with the girl in the red tam-o'-shanter.

I Turned to Stand Face to Face With the Girl of the Red Tom-O'-Shanter.

"I beg your pardon," I said, stepping away from the canoe.

She did not wear the covert coat of the morning, but a red knit jacket, buttoned tight about her. She was young with every emphasis of youth. A pair of dark blue eyes examined me with good-humored curiosity. She was on good terms with the sun—I rejoiced in the brown of her cheeks, so eloquent of companionship with the outdoor world—a certificate indeed of the favor of Heaven. Show me, in October, a girl with a face of tan, whose hands have plied a paddle or driven a golf-ball or cast a fly beneath the blue arches of summer, and I will suffer her scorn in joy. She may vote me dull and refute my wisest word with laughter, for hers are the privileges of the sisterhood of Diana; and that soft bronze, those daring fugitive freckles beneath her eyes, link her to times when Pan whistled upon his reed and all the days were long.

Her rubber-soled outing shoes had made possible her silent approach, and she enjoyed, I was sure, my discomfiture at being taken unawares.

I had snatched off my cap and stood waiting beside the canoe, feeling, I must admit, a trifle guilty at being caught in the unwarrantable inspection of another person's property—particularly a person so wholly pleasing to the eye.

"I believe—I believe that is my paddle," she said, a little timidly I thought, and yet with definiteness.

I looked down and found to my annoyance that I held her paddle in my hand,—was in fact leaning upon it with a cool air of proprietorship.

"Again, I beg your pardon," I said. "I hadn't expected—"

She eyed me calmly, with the stare of the child that arrives at a drawing-room door by mistake and scrutinizes the guests without awe. I didn't know what I had expected or had not expected, and she manifested no intention of helping me to explain. Her short skirt suggested 15 or 16—not more—and such being the case there was no reason why I should not be master of the situation. As I fumbled my pipe the hot coals of tobacco burned my hand and I cast the thing from me.

She laughed a little, then caught herself and gravely watched the pipe bound from the dock into the water.

"Too bad!" she said, her eyes upon it; "but if you hurry you may get it before it floats away."

"Thank you for the suggestion," I said. But I did not relish the idea of kneeling on the dock to fish for a pipe before a strange school girl who was, I felt sure, anxious to laugh at me.

She took a step toward the line by which her boat was fastened.

"Allow me."

"If you think you can,—safely,'" she said; and the laughter that lurked in her eyes annoyed me.

"The feminine knot is designed for the confusion of man," I observed, twitching vainly at the rope, which was tied securely in unfamiliar loops.

She was singularly unresponsive. The thought that she was probably laughing at my clumsiness did not make my fingers more nimble.

"The nautical instructor at St. Agatha's is undoubtedly a woman. This knot must come in the post-graduate course. But my gallantry is equal, I trust, to your patience."

The maid in the red tam-o'-shanter continued silent. The wet rope was obdurate, the knot more and more hopeless, and my efforts to make light of the situation awakened no response in the girl. I tugged away at the rope, attacking its tangle on various theories.

"A case for surgery, I'm afraid. A truly gordian knot, but I haven't my knife."

"Oh, but you wouldn't!" she exclaimed. "I think I can manage."

She bent down—I was aware that the sleeve of her jacket brushed my shoulder—seized an end that I had ignored, gave it a sharp tug with a slim, brown hand and pulled the knot free.

"There!" she exclaimed with a little laugh; "I might have saved you all the bother."

"How dull of me! But I didn't have the combination," I said, steadying the canoe carefully to mitigate the ignominy of my failure.

She scorned the hand I extended, but embarked with light, confident step and took the paddle. It was growing late. The shadows in the wood were deepening; a chill crept over the water, and, beyond the tower of the chapel, the sky was bright with the glory of sunset.

With a few skillful strokes she brought her little craft beside my pipe, which she deftly caught on the paddle blade and tossed to the wharf.

"Perhaps you can pipe a tune upon it," she said, dipping the paddle.

"You put me under great obligations," I declared. "Are all the girls at St. Agatha's as amiable?"

"I shouldn't say so! I'm a great exception,—and—I really shouldn't be talking to you at all! It's against the rules! And we don't encourage smoking."

"The chaplain doesn't smoke, I suppose."

"Not in chapel; I believe it isn't done! And we rarely see him anywhere else."

She had idled with the paddle so far, but now she lifted her eyes and drew back the blade for a long stroke.

"But in the wood,—this morning—by the wall!"

I hate myself to this day for having so startled her. The poised blade dropped into the water with a splash; she brought the canoe a trifle nearer to the wharf with an almost imperceptible stroke, and turned toward me with wonder and dismay in her eyes.

"So you are an eavesdropper and detective, are you? I beg that you will give your master my compliments! I really owe you an apology; I thought you were a gentleman," she exclaimed with withering emphasis, and dipped her blade deep in flight.

I called, stammering incoherently, after her, but her light argosy skimmed the water steadily. The paddle rose and fell with trained precision, making scarcely a ripple as she stole softly away toward the fairy towers of the sunset. I stood looking after her, goaded with self-contempt. A glory of purple and scarlet and gold filled the west. Suddenly the wind moaned in the wood behind the line of cottages, swept over me and rippled the surface of the lake. I watched its flight until it caught her canoe and I marked the nimsy craft's quick response, as the shaken waters bore her alert figure upward on the swell, her blade still maintaining its regular dip, until she disappeared behind a little peninsula that made a harbor near the school grounds.

The red tam-o'-shanter seemed at last to merge in the red sky, and I turned cheerlessly to my canoe.

CHAPTER VII.

The Man on the Wall.

I was so thoroughly angry with myself that after idling along the shores for an hour I lost my way in the dark wood when I landed and brought up at the rear door used by Bates for communication with the villagers who supplied us with provender. I readily found my way to the kitchen and to a flight of stairs beyond, which connected the first and second floors. I stumbled up the unfamiliar way in the dark, with, I fear, a malediction upon my grandfather, who had built and left incomplete a house so utterly preposterous. My unpardonable fling at the girl still rankled; and I was cold from the quick descent of the night chill on the water and anxious to get into some comfortable clothes. Once on the second floor I was sure of the location of my room, and I was feeling my way toward it over the rough floor when I heard low voices rising apparently from my sitting-room.

It was pitch dark in the hall. I stopped short and listened. The door of my room was open and a faint light flashed once into the hall and disappeared. I heard now a sound as of a hammer tapping upon wood-work.

Then it ceased, and a voice whispered:

"He'll kill me if he finds me here. I'll try again to-morrow. I swear to God I'll help you, but no more now—"

Then the sound of a scuffle and again the tapping of the hammer. After several minutes more of this there was a whispered dialogue which I could not hear.

Whatever was occurring two or three points struck me on the instant. One of the conspirators was an unwilling party to an act as yet unknown; second, they had been unsuccessful and must wait for another opportunity; and third, the business, whatever it was, was clearly of some importance to myself, as my own apartments in my grandfather's strange house had been chosen for the investigation.

Clearly I was not prepared to close the incident, but the idea of frightening my visitors appealed to my sense of humor. I tiptoed to the front stairway, ran lightly down, found the front door, and, from the inside, opened and slammed it. I heard instantly a hurried scamper above, and the heavy fall of one who had stumbled in the dark. I grinned with real pleasure at the sound of the mishap, hastened to the great library, which was as dark as a well, and, opening one of the long windows, stepped out on the balcony. At once from the rear of the house came the sound of a stealthy step, which increased to a run at the ravine bridge. I listened to the flight of the fugitive through the wood until the sounds died away toward the lake.

Then, turning to the library window, I saw Bates, with a candle held above his head, peering about.

"Hello, Bates," I called cheerfully. "I just got home and stepped out to see if the moon had risen. I don't believe I know where to look for it in this country."

He began lighting the tapers with his usual deliberation.

"It's a trifle early, I think, sir. About eight o'clock, I should say, was the hour, Mr. Glenarm."

There was, of course, no doubt whatever that Bates had been one of the men I heard in my room. It was wholly possible that he had been compelled to assist in some lawless act against his will; but why, if he had been forced into aiding a criminal, should he not invoke my own aid to protect himself? I kicked the logs in the fireplace impatiently at my uncertainty. The man slowly lighted the many candles in the great apartment. He was certainly a deep one, and his case grew more puzzling as I studied it in relation to the rifle shot of the night before, his collision with Morgan in the wood, which I had witnessed; and now the house itself had been invaded by some one with his connivance. The rifle shot might have been innocent enough; but taken in connection with these other matters it could hardly be brushed aside.

MEN OF HOLY CROSS CHEFS AND WAITERS

PARISH HOUSE TRANSFORMED INTO A FINE BIG RESTAURANT.

The long-heralded men's dinner at Holy Cross parish house, prepared by the male portion of the parish, took place, last night, and contrary to expectation no casualties have been reported. The crowd came with absolute fearlessness and so determined was it to fly in the face of fate that the head waiter was swamped with orders and had the time of his life trying to attend to the cash trade. Over 250 heroes and heroines sampled the men-u, as it was styled on the bill of fare, and the church will net $300 as a result, provided, of course, no damage suits are filed within the statute of limitations.

The men had labored hard and long to get the edibles together in proper form for serving and when they were carried to the dining room every bit of it looked like real food. There were times when the diners were a little uncertain as to what they were disposing of and the men-u did not help them a whole lot. Everything had a new name as well as a new flavor and this is the way the rations were described, starting off with a toast to the cook from "Bill Saunders" in order to keep him in good humor:

Cream of Clam (all males) Soup
NOTE.—These clams were picked entirely by men. They did not shake the tree as women do, but climbed up and gathered them.

Hospital Call "23"

February 11th, 1907.

All the committees worked hard in their respective branches to take care of the hungry folks but the response to the announcements was more than was expected. It is thought that some folks got tired of waiting, just as they do in resturants, and went away without getting a chance to sample the lay-out. For this reason the committee announces that anyone having tickets that were not redeemed can have their money back by returning them to anyone of the members.

The staff of artists that prepared the supper and saw to its proper disposal made made up as follows:

Commissary and Menu—Samuel Townsend, E. S. Hooley, J. L. Watson.

Kitchen Suuervision — Frederic Harrington, J. P. Stevens.

Head Waiters—B. A. Hegean, Jr., C. A. Reed, A. VanDeventer.

Serving Waiters—C. E. Murray, Morgan T. Townsend.

Advertising and Printing—W. L. Saunders, D. J. Randall, O. H. Voorhees.

Cloak Room—J. W. Hegeman, Paul Brakeley.

Reception—Rev. George A. Warner, Dr. J. H. Carman, George P. Dupee.

Chief of Cuisine—Geo. O. Stevens.

Mr. Saunders was unable to be at the spread because of his trip to Panama but the following telegram was received by Rector George A. Warner from him last night, dated at El Paso, Texas:

"My dear Mr. Warner: We are wishing we could be with you for the dinner tonight and in place of the sage hens down here have some of Mr. Stevens' smothered chickens. With best wishes for your success tonight. W. L. and Miss Louise Saunders."

The dinner will be continued tonight.

STATE BROTHERHOOD IN ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The first annual state convention of the Presbyterian brotherhood will be conducted today in Fourth Presbyterian church, East State and Clinton streets, Trenton. The convention will be under the auspices of the committee on Presbyterian brotherhood of the synod of New Jersey. The Rev. Frederick E. Stockwell, of Beverly, is the chairman. The session will commence at 9:30 this morning.

The Rev. Charles H. Erdman will speak on "The Brotherhood and the Spiritual Life," Waldo C. Genung on "The Brotherhood and Church Activities," and Judge John Reilstab on "The Brotherhood of Public Morality."

A recess will be taken at noon and a luncheon will be served in the chapel by the women of Fourth church.

Danish Lutheran services will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the W. C. T. U. rooms. There will be preaching by Rev. Mr. Kaier.

The Study Class of the Women's Association of the Congregational church will meet with Mrs. Bates, 243 East Sixth street, Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

GERMANS' BIG DANCE IN SAENGERBUND HALL

MASQUERADE BALL OF GESANG AND TURN VEREIN A SUCCESS.

With one of the largest crowds of merrymakers that has ever been noted at a similar affair, the eighteenth annual masquerade ball of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein was held in Saengerbund Hall, last night. The floor was taxed to its capacity from early in the evening until shortly before daylight this morning and the occasion passed into the looking-backward rank as one of the most successful the society has arranged and conducted.

Only dancers in costume were allowed on the floor until midnight and the sight of the masqueraders as viewed from the gallery was one well worth braving the cold to see. Happy Hooligans linked arms with Teddy Roosevelts, sailors and princes hobnobbed in corners and milkmaids and flower girls were everywhere. When all had assembled for the grand march a very pretty picture was forme d and there were frequent bursts of applause as some of the best figures were brought out. The march was led by the members of the general committee with Charles Meyer, Jr., directing. Paroubek's orchestra furnished the music for the dancing and it was one of the features of the evening.

The committee which had charge of the affair consisted of Otto Keller, chairman; John Retzer, Charles Meyer, Jr., Fritz Schmidt and Charles Caspar.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Baraca Class of Faith chapel, which will be addressed tonight by Rev. Frank Anderson, of Millville, pastor of the Baptist church at that place, has a membership of forty men. Mr. Anderson is the treasurer of the National Baraca Society and his talk tonight will be concerning the work of the organization in all parts of the country.

SCHOONER SINKS SOUND STEAMER IN COLLISION.

Many Passengers in Lifeboat Meet Their Death by Drowning in Zero Weather.

New York, Feb. 12.—The steamer Larchmont of the Joy Line, with many passengers on board, bound from Providence for New York, sank off the northwest side of Block Island early today after having been in collision with the three-masted schooner Harry Knowlton off Quonchontaug.

The passengers and crew from the steamer took to the boats, but many passengers are believed to have lost their lives, either by being drowned or freezing, as the temperature was below zero.

When the first boats came ashore from the steamer it was found that some of the occupants were dead. In the first confusion it was not known whether they had been pulled from the water after having been drowned or whether they were frozen to death.

Bodies are being washed ashore along the coast.

The schooner's bow was cut away and her captain ran her ashore west of Quonochontaug to prevent her sinking. The crew of seven men, including Captain Haley, reached shore safely in their own boats.

The cause of the collision it not yet known. The night was clear, but there was a strong northwest wind and the sea was rough.

The Knowlton, which hails from Eastport, Maine, was bound from South Amboy for Boston with 475 tons of coal.

NO OLIVE LEAF FOR HUDSON CO.'S G. O. P.

Fagan and Dickinson Factions Are in a Fight to a Finish.

Both George L. Record and Col. Samuel D. Dickinson, of Jersey City, denied yesterday a published statement that they had a political conference with the view of bringing together the Fagan and Dickinson factions of the Republican party in Hudson county. They admitted having met at a dinner, but insisted that politics was not discussed.

There is no chance of the two factions getting together unless Mr. Record is eliminated from the local political situation, and the Fagan forces will not agree to a proposition of that kind. Mayor Fagan will not be opposed by the Dickinson Republicans for a re-nomination, Colonel Dickinson and his followers having decided not to put up a candidate against him.

Efforts on the part of the Fagan-Record combination to prevent Col. Dickinson's re-appointment as Secretary of State, have been unsuccessful. The Colonel's term expires in March, and Gov. Stokes has let it be known that he will give the Hudson county Republican leader another term.

PRESIDENT M'CARTER DEFENDS THE P. S. C.

Head of Great Public Utility Concern Tells of the Difficulties It Encounters.

HE EXPLAINS ITS AIMS

Thomas N. McCarter in Speech Before Board of Trade Issues Warning Against Municipal Ownership.

The able speech made by President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation, on that public utilities' concern's aims, at the annual banquet of the Board of Trade last night, follows:

Thomas N. McCarter.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of Plainfield:

For the past two years, during the peak—as we say in the electrical business—of the public feeling against corporations in general, and quasi public corporations in particular, I have conceived it to be wiser, in the performance of my duty as President of Public Service, to refrain from speech-making, and devote my entire energy to the routine and arduous duties of my position. The public, rightly or wrongly, has not been in a receptive frame of mind, and anything that I, or one similarly situated might have said would have had little, if any, effect. The pendulum has swung so far, however, that the thinking men of the country are beginning to appreciate the gravity of the situation, and therefore it seemed to me, when I received the courteous invitation of my friend, your Mayor, to come here tonight and speak on this subject, that perhaps the time was ripe for me to frankly discuss before an intelligent audience of this character, the problems which confront me as the head of the large corporation over which I preside, and affect us all as citizens of the Commonwealth of New Jersey.

To begin with, at the risk of wearying you, I am going to give you a bit of my personal history, in order that you may appreciate the viewpoint from which I approach my present duties, and I am also going to tell you something of the history of Public Service, for any discussion of public utilities in New Jersey is necessarily, for the most part, a discussion of the affairs of that corporation.

I was educated as a lawyer, and I pursued my profession until the formation of Public Service and my election to its Presidency in 1903. The few years prior to 1903 had been formative or constructive years of the underlying companies now in the Public Service, and in my professional work I had been considerably employed in doing the legal work involved. In several instances I invested money in the enterprises which I was conducting legally, out of one or two of which I made money, out of others not. My point is, that I was not one of the gentlemen concerned in the original exploitation of these various enterprises. Not that I am casting any reflection upon those who were; that work was done by some of the strongest men this State has produced. It was a strenuous undertaking, and undoubtedly shortened the lives of Vice President Hobart and the late B. M. Shanley, of Newark. There is much to admire in the work of these gentlemen and their associates. They quickened the growth and development of our State, they gave employment to thousands of people, and they made living more comfortable. But from the present standpoint it is clear that they made mistakes too, in that they over-discounted the future, and over-capitalized some of the great properties they constructed. This

TRIBUTES TO LINCOLN

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss and Former Assemblyman Swackhamer Recite His Virtues.

NOBILITY OF CHARACTER

"If Lincoln Had Lived We Should Not Have Had to Wait So Long For Reunited Country," Says Divine.

The Men's Club, of the First Presbyterian church, appropriately observed the anniversary of Lincoln's Birthday, at a dinner given in the chapel last night. There was a large atendance of members and friends of the club and so successful was the affair that it is proposed to make it an annual one. The dinner was served at a number of tables and after enjoying an excellent menu which was served under the direction of several women of the church, the assemblage listened to two fine addresses, one by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, and the other by S. S. Swackhamer, of the borough, both speaking on Lincoln. S. W. Dunning, as president of the club, presided, and first introduced Dr. Chambliss, who was General Robert E. Lee's army chaplain. Dr. Chambliss said:

"I was one of thousands of young men, and older men, who thought that they were hard hit by Providence when in 1860 Lincoln was elected President. The men of today could never know how the men of the South felt in those days—how wild they were with what they believed to be patriotic fire, kindling and blazing at the thought that they were about to be robbed of what they had been taught to regard their constitutional rights. The spirit of secession was not universal, but so nearly so that it seemed as if man, woman and child were ready to die rather than submit to the political doctrine which triumphed in the election of Lincoln. Courage, at least did not seem to be lacking.

"True it had not been tried, but the day soon came when it was tried, and the day lengthened into months and into weary suffering years for both sides, until at last the God of battle gave the victory to one side and left the other only a 'Lost Cause.' How far apart then were North and South. It seemed that nothing less than the compasses of eternity could span the chasm. But it has been spanned, bridged, filled up. And no intelligent man doubts that the awful chasm would far more quickly have been closed but for the accursed stroke of the assassin's hand which five days after the surrender fell upon that generous, broad-minded, great-souled, sweet-hearted man, whose memory we cherish this evening.

"Such sentiments concerning Lincoln were not even then uncommon in the South. He had not then, indeed, been accorded the lofty place which he has since attained in that latitude as in this as to all the elements that go to make a great man. But his kindness, his sympathy, his goodness, his honesty, his incorruptible purity of motive and purpose no honorable man questioned, and the cruel, monstrous blow which struck out that great light in the temple of freedom thrilled with horror every brave heart in the South as it did in the North.

"If Lincoln had lived, we should not have had to wait so long as we did for a re-united country. The miracle of the ages is presented in this country today. I would venture to say that never before since history began has anything appeared comparable to the union, peace, oneness of national spirit now witnessed in this land within scarcely more than a single generation after a war, the most terrible and most tremendous in cost of blood and treasure of modern times. I wonder what Lincoln would say—with what amazed, bewildered eyes he would look upon this land, if he could now awake from his sleep at Springfield and look about him—the country which was torn and bleeding at every pore, when he lay down to sleep, now lying in the calm, sweet sunshine of peace and prosperity more perfectly the home of a united people than ever before. And he would wonder to see an old Confederate chaplain at a Lincoln birthday dinner, speaking the praises of Lincoln with a heart full of reverence and love."

The genuine applause that was given throughout and at the end of the talk by Dr. Chambliss was only equalled by that accorded Mr. Swackhamer, who spoke as follows:

"Thomas Carlyle has said: 'Great men are the fire pillars in this dark pilgrimage of mankind; they stand as heavenly signs, ever living witnesses of what has been, prophetic tokens of what may yet be, the revealed, embodied possibilities of human nature.' To me one of the most charming, absorbing, fascinating themes in literature is biography. "It

BRIGGS A ROOSEVELTIAN

United States Senator-Elect Defines His Views on Matters of National Interest.

ADMIRES PRESIDENT

He Will Stand Pat On the Constitution, Believing It To Be the Safest Guide—Favors the Panama Canal.

When Senator-elect Briggs goes to Washington he will be a Roosevelt Republican in practically everything excepting the Brownsville negro troop muddle. He will stand hard by the constitution as a guide for his political course, and will strive to do his governmental work on a strictly business basis. This was the substance of an interview had with him today.

"I am inclined to be a trifle old fashioned in my political notions," Mr. Briggs said, "and I think we have yet to find a better guide in our governmental affairs than the Constitution of the United States. It is true, of course, that new industrial and social questions have arisen and press for solution, but they are no greater nor more difficult than those which confronted the framers of the constitution."

On specific matters now pending before Congress Mr. Briggs declined to express himself, taking the position that it is not for a new man, without experience, to criticise the men who are endeavoring to solve the pending problems.

"As a business man I appreciate the very great importance that the Panama Canal is going to be to this country and I believe that work should be carried on in a business like manner, without any regard to politics. I do not believe that anywhere in the land is the importance of a protective tariff more thoroughly appreciated than in New Jersey. It is my firm belief that all laws should be rigidly enforced. If the Sherman anti-trust law is a good one to keep on the statute book it should be enforced."

"I have naturally had the interest of an active business man in all matters of national import and have formed many opinions of my own. I shall go to Washington predisposed not only in favor of the policies and work of President Roosevelt, but a warm admirer of such men as Secretary Root, Secretary Hitchcock, Secretary Taft and Attorney-General Bonaparte, whose work has excited my interest. My situation with regard to legislative matters is not changed. As the representative of the people of New Jersey it will be my duty in the future to thoroughly investigate all phases of questions that are to be passed upon by Congress in order that I may intelligently act for the best interests of both State and nation. This I propose to do.

As a West Pointer and former army officer, Mr. Briggs has taken an especial interest in matters affecting the army, and heartily indorses the President's ideas of maintaining an efficient army and strengthening the navy.

"On these matters," said Mr. Briggs, "I am in entire accord with President Roosevelt. We should, as the President says, do everything in our power at all times for the cause of honorable peace and there is no surer guarantee of peace than having a navy of sufficient size to make warlike nations hesitate."

"The army and navy should be kept up to their present strength, and this can only be done in the case of the navy by constantly replacing the worn-out and obsolete ships by good ones."

When asked as to his opinion on the Brownsville incident, Mr. Briggs replied:

"Well, that is a point upon which with my present information I am inclined to disagree with the President. I think a proper course there would have been a court-martial. If the commanding officer was unable to maintain proper disciplinen he should have been court-martialed."

Shriners Will Entertain.

The Plainfield members of Salaam Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles Mystic Shrine, and their wives, will leave Plainfield Friday night on the 6:18 train from the North Avenue station for Newark, where they will attend the "ladies' night" entertainment to be given by the Shriners in Krueger's Auditorium. This will consist of a vaudeville show, supper and dance. The Plainfielders will return home in a special trolley car.

Prof. Krebs Speaks at Somerville.

Prof. H. C. Krebs, of the North Plainfield Public Schools, and Rev. Dr. Demarest, president of Rutgers College, were speakers at the Lincoln dinner given by the Men's Club of the First Reformed church, Somerville, last night. Prof. Krebs spoke on "The Obscure Hero," and Dr. Demarest's subject was "Reminiscenses of Old Rutgers."

MISS NEILSON DIES FROM EFFECTS OF BURNS

PASSED AWAY IN MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL AT 5:30 YESTERDAY.

Miss Hannah Neilson, the servant at R. H. McCutcheon's home who was terribly burned through her clothing catching fire from a range, Monday night, died in Muhlenberg Hospital at 5:30 yesterday afternoon. The woman was beyond hope when received at the institution and all that could be done for her was to alleviate her sufferings. The flames had left their effects on nearly every part of her body, the face and head alone escaping.

Although Miss Neilson had been in Mr. McCutcheon's employ for over a year, the family or the other servants did not know much about her. She came to this country from Sweden and it is thought all her relatives are there. Mr. McCutcheon is making a determined effort to locate them and pending the result the body is being held at Undertaker Casey.

William McDonough, who made a vain attempt to save Miss Neilson and who received bad burns himself in consequence, is doing very nicely. His arms were blistered from the hands to the shoulders and he will be kept from work for several weeks.

CROWTHER FOR JACKSON.

Middlesex Assemblyman Wants Defeated Senator for Treasurer.

Assemblyman Frank Crowther, of Perth Amboy, one of the speakers at the Board of Trade banquet last night, remained in the city until this morning. Before leaving for Trenton he was seen by a representative of The Daily Press and questioned concerning his opinion regarding the contest for State Treasurer.

"I don't know any more about that question than you do," replied Dr. Crowther. I am for Former Senator W. H. Jackson, of Middlesex county. You know every representative has a favorite son and I would vote for him on the first ballot. If I then learned that he did not have enough votes to elect him, I would stand by the decision of my party caucus, believing their choice to be for the best interest of all."

SECRETLY MARRIED.

Marriage Announcement of Miss Van Winkle and Ellis Emery Surprises Friends.

Announcement was made yesterday of the marriage of Miss Violet Van Winkle and Ellis H. Emery. The young people were wedded secretly on December 23, at Westfield, by Rev. C. J. Greenwood.

The families knew of the marriage several weeks ago, but announcement cards, sent out yesterday, gave their friends the first intimation of it. The couple had been formally engaged, and there was no opposition to the match. They simply took into their heads to wed quietly, it was said by the bride's family this morning. Mrs. Emery has been living with her brother, Frank Van Winkle.

Elizabeth Post Office Site.

Final selection of a site for the new post office building in Elizabeth will be made on March 13, according to a notice received this morning by Postmaster Charlock from the Postoffice Department at Washington. The communication is signed by Secretry L. M. Shaw. One of the government architects was in Elizabeth a short time ago looking over the proposed sites. His selection will doubtless be one of three: Morris avenue, near the Central Railroad station; East Grand street, near Broad, and corner of Broad and Caldwell place.

Silk Company Directors Elect.

At a meeting of the directors of the Watchung Silk Company, yesterday, the following were elected for the following year: President, J. Fred MacDonald; vice-president, E. M. Laing; secretary, Henry Fifke; treasurer, W. R. Codington. All had been serving with the exception of Mr. Liefke, who succeeds Allen B. Laing.

Finest P. O. in the District.

E. M. Norris, assistant inspector of salary and allowance division of the postal department, was in Plainfield yesterday inspecting the local post office, which includes the new quarters recently acquired. Mr. Norris said he was pleased with the office and its equipment, declaring it to be the finest one in his district.

—The next meeting of the Sesame Club will be held tomorrow morning at the residence of Mrs. M. A. Zook, 126 East Sixth street.

—Lovers of fresh fruits and vegetables should see the large display at Neuman Brothers store. Indian River oranges and grape fruit, fancy apples, Boston head lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers are included in the list.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Guinn entertained a few friends at their home last evening.

SENATOR REED HOPEFUL

In the Race For Treasurership Provided No Deal Has Been Made.

VOORHEES' WILD CLAIMS

Somerset County Leader for the First Time Explains How He Was Made a Victim for Newspaper Criticism.

After repeated efforts a representative of The Daily Press pursuaded former State Senator Reed today to break his silence and tell whether he is a candidate for the State treasurership. That he will make an effort to land the prize provided the State leaders have not stacked the political deck, he admitted, adding that he could not believe that the great majority of the legislators would allow the office to be turned over to a favorite of the State machine as a part of a deal. His defeat for the same office five years ago by a single vote he credits to newspapermen he had unintentionally antagonized at that time.

"Your name, Senator," said the reporter, "has been prominently mentioned recently in connection with the office of State Treasurer, but there seems to be considerable doubt as to whether or not you are a candidate."

"When it was recently announced that Senator Dryden had withdrawn," said Mr. Reed, "and Senator Briggs became a candidate several of my friends from different parts of the State at once urged me to become again a candidate for the office of State Treasurer. They recalled that five years ago I had been defeated by only one vote, the tally standing thirty to thirty-one, and said they thought that I ought to try again. They promised me their hearty support."

"Did you agree to become a candidate?"

"Well, it was like this. A story was persistently circulated that a conference of four or five gentlemen had decided that after Treasurer Briggs was chosen United States Senator, Mr. Daniel Voorhees, of Morris county, should be elected State Treasurer. It was also asserted that the Governor strongly urged that this agreement should be carried out and that he would help in any way in which he coul. It was also said that Senator Ackerman would support Mr. Voorhees. Of course if all these stories are true, and all these forces united, there is very little encouragement to any one opposing Mr. Voorhees. However these stories have been denied and repeated and denied again. I do not know whether they are true or not, but will be able to determine by the events of the next few days. If I find that the cards have been dealt and the result is certain I shall not pursue the matter further. My own belief, however, is that but few members of the Senate and House of Assembly will be bound by any dea' made in advance and without their knowledge.

"In this belief I am strengthened by the fact that I have already received several assurances at support and my information convinces me that Mr. Voorhees is very much overestimating his strength. It is certain that he has nothing like the number of pledges claimed for him. There are several other candidates for the office and my name will be submitted to the Legislature with the rest, and I will highly appreciate any support which I may receive."

"How was it that you were defeated five years ago for this office when you were a member of the Senate?" asked The Daily Press man.

"Of course it was because the other fellow got the most votes," said the Senator. "As a side light upon that however it is perhaps fair to say that I had been so unfortunate as to antagonize the large crop of legislative correspondents who represent the newspapers at the State House during the session. The election of State Treasurer followed soon after the choice of John F. Dryden for United States Senator. In that contest I was with those who opposed his election. The newspaper men asked that they be admitted to the Republican caucus at which the choice for Senator was to be made. Such caucuses had always been secret and most of those opposing Mr. Dryden were apposed to having the caucus open to reporters. I was unfortunately, for me, put forward to voice this opposition and did so. Very naturally many of the newspaper men, who had always treated me well, resented my opposing them in this respect. Most of them in turn opposed my election as State Treasurer. It has always been claimed that they brought about my defeat and I believe they did. At any rate I lost by the narrow margin of one vote and I am sure that if they had been with me I would have won easily."

William Staats, of Newark, has been spending several days in town with friends.

TRADE SCHOOL AND MUNICIPAL CELEBRATION BROACHED AT THE BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET

ALBERT STEINER BADLY HURT WHILE COASTING

COLLIDES WITH A SLED AND IS GASHED ABOUT HEAD AND BRUISED.

Speeding down Hyde's hill, near the Park Golf Club, yesterday, on a bob sled in company with several young people, Albert Steiner, teller at the Plainfield Trust Company, who was steering it, ran into another sled near the bottom of the grade. He was thrown off and received several deep cuts about the head and bruises about the body. The other occupants of the bob were also thrown off into a snow bank but escaped injury.

Mr. Steiner being on the front of the bob received the full blow of the collision, his head striking the other sled, inflicting several gashes and almost closing his eye. His companions ran to his assistance and gave temporary aid until the injured man could be removed to his home. A physician was obliged to take eleven stitches to close up the cuts. It is not believed that the eye was seriously injured.

Those who witnessed the accident declare that Mr. Steiner's escape from probable fatal injury was remarkable. Charles Lee, Jr., of Grove street, had preceded Mr. Steiner and his party down the hill on his bob. Thoughtlessly, it is said, he left his sled directly in the path of the coasters, and Mr. Steiner was unable to steer clear of the obstruction in time to prevent the collison.

SIMPLE FUNERAL SERVICE OVER HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Double Obsequies of Mr. and Mrs. James Armstrong Attended By Large Gathering.

The double funeral of Mr. and Mrs. James Armstrong, who were taken ill on the same day and died within a few hours of each other, was held at their late home on Prospect place, yesterday afternoon. It was conducted by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. The service was extremely simple.

The floral tributes extended included a large wreath from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and a set piece from Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R. K. of P., Mr. Armstrong being a member of both.

Interment was in the North Plainfield cemetery, the pall bearers being Asa D. Pope, Robert Jahn, William Baker, Harry L. Keen, Thomas M. Muir and Benjamin A. Moore, all members of Perseverance Lodge.

Somerset County Teachers to Meet.

The programme will include an address by W. A. Ackerman, supervising principal of the Somerville Public Schools; class exercise in beginning reading by Miss Cora P. Lyndon, of North Plainfield; "The Making of a Teacher," John Enright, county superintendent of schools of Monmouth county. Luncheon will be served at the close of the programme. C. G. Horner, president of the association, will preside, and Miss Rita S. Dailey, secretary, will act in her position.

Jersey Central Brakeman Killed.

Frank C. Thompson, aged 38 years, of Bound Brook, employed as a brakeman on the New Jersey Central, was killed in the Jersey City yards Monday night. He had just coupled cars on his train when he stepped backward onto passenger tracks in the path of an on-coming train. Thompson's brother, John Thompson, also an employe of the railroad, witnessed the fatality.

First of Three "At Homes."

Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies, of Road Ending, gave the first of a series of three "at homes" yesterday afternoon, when a large number of friends called during the appointed hours. Mrs. Corlies was assisted in receiving by her two daughter, Mrs. H. C. Adams and Mrs. W. C. DeLanoy. The second "at home" will be held Tuesday, February 19, and the third one on Tuesday, February 26.

CITY'S 40th BIRTHDAY

Mayor Fisk Suggests Observance of the Completion of Plainfield's Fourth Decade as a Corporate City in 1909.

Business and professional men, political lights and prominent workers in the community to the number of 150 gathered at the Board of Trade banquet at the Casino, last night. The dinner was noteworthy by reason of a carefully prepared explanation of the conditions confronting the P. S. C. by President Thomas N. McCarter, who made the chief address.

United States Senator-elect Briggs, who was expected, sent his regrets. In a special delivery letter, which the toastmaster read, he said a pressing business matter prevented his appearance.

Besides Mr. McCarter, the speakers were Assemblyman Frank Crowther, of Perth Amboy; Rev. B. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's R. C. church; Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross Protestant Episcopal church; and H. I. Bowne, of East Orange. Mayor Fisk was toastmaster.

Hung profusely with shields and rosettes of red, white and blue, and broad streamers, with palms ranged at the front of the stage, the Casino auditorium was as handsome a banquet hall as might be desired. A big picture of Lincoln, with flags on either side, hung over the front of the stage. The order of the tables was the opposite to that of past dinners. The speakers' table was placed before the fireplace, instead of at the other end of the hall. A long table ran down the center of the hall, another before the stage, and three smaller ones flanked the center board on either side. At the speakers' table besides the toastmaster and the orators were Mayor N. B. Smalley, Alexander Gilbert, Charles W. McCutchen, and L. B. Woolston, president of the Board.

The dinner began late. It was set for 6:30 o'clock, but 8 o'clock was not far off when the first course came on. The menu was elaborate. The menu cards were handsome, decorated in red and black. They were designed by Miss May Berkhan and David J. Carney. During the dinner the Eureka Quartette, which has become more or less of a regular feature at Casino affairs, sang and played.

Mayor Fisk spoke briefly in starting the oratorical ball arolling. He was greeted with sustained applause, and three cheers, led by E. E. Iremonger, chairman of the Republican City Committee. At Mr. Fisk's suggestion, a silent toast was drunk to the memory of Lincoln.

Mr. Fisk said, among other things: "The Board of Trade stands for progress and for the right; and against the wrong. A body of men of this kind, composed of our best business and professional men of the community, always carries through what it conceives to be its duty to do. Its aim is to find out what is good for the city and then to find out how to get it.

"The thing they are now pushing is the consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield (applause). This matter originated with them in its newest phase, and through their efforts a commission for the investigation of the subject is now at work. We may hope to hear something from that commission soon. It is not well to speak of the work of the commission at this time, but I will say that, as far as Plainfield is concerned, we have learned to love that little girl on the other side of the brook, and we are going to keep at her until we get her." (Applause.)

President McCarter was the first speaker. He spoke on "Public Utilities," and recounted the difficulties under which the P. S. C. worked. He won warm applause by promising to investigate the conditions complained of by the Plainfield Protective Association in street lighting, to discipline everybody found derelict in duty. Mr. McCarter was cheered after his speech. He's remarks will be found in another column.

Mayor Fisk in commenting on Mr. McCarter's speech, said that Plainfield was well cared-for so far as its franchises were concerned. He pointed out that the streets were kept in condition and sprinkled by the P. S.

PLUCKY WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE.

Trenton, Feb. 13.—Mrs. Harriet Curran Dunham, of New Brunswick, has instituted a suit for divorce against her husband, Smith R. Dunham, who disappeared from New Brunswick on July 14, 1902, leaving his wife and two small children. The disappearance of the man created comment, it being charged that a young woman left the city at the same time. Mrs. Dunham claims in her petition that she has never heard from her husband since his disappearance.

Dunham was the New Brunswick agent for a piano house. After he left the firm announced that his accounts with it were straight, and Mrs. Dunham was made the agent and hac continued in that capacity, educating her children from the proceeds of the business. Mrs. Dunham has retained Judge Theodore B. Booream to presecute her case, based on desertion. Notice will be given to Dunham through advertisement. The petition sets forth that the couple were married in New Brunswick by the Rev. William White, who was then pastor of the First Methodist church of that city, on uly 30, 1889.

was all done, however, in the open, under due forms of law, and without public hostility at the time; in fact those who were given an opportunity to "come in" were regarded as highly fortunate. In the course of a short period these securities became widely scattered for value, in the hands of the investing public. It is not too much to say that they passed into the possession of the rich and the poor, the corporation and the individual, the husband and the widow. While we all, I think, disapprove now of the extent to which this over-capitalization was carried on, we must remember that the theory on which it was based was justified at the time, both by law and public sentiment, and that without the expectation on the part of the promoters of some profit above the ordinary interest return, these properties with their resultant benefits would not have been constructed.

But time was passing on, and it gradually became apparent that while in the main, gas and electric properties were profitable, and justified expectations, the street railroads did not. By the winter of 1902-1903 it was evident to those at all in touch with the situation, that without new capital for necessary improvements, and for the restoration of impaired credit, the railroads could not go on. Just at this time a horrible catastrophe occurred. A carload full of school children collided at a dangerous crossing in Newark, with a Lackawanna train, resulting in much loss of life, great personal injury, and filling the whole country with consternation. This was the last straw which, it was quickly seen, would break the camel's back. Something had to be done, and that quickly, or a great financial panic stared New Jersey in the face. The railroads could not meet their accruing obligations. This was becoming generally known, and I knew it professionally, as well as a matter of general information. While the securities were held broadcast, the policy of the constituent companies was shaped by a comparatively small number of men. To these gentlemen I suggested, as the solution of the problem, the formation of a new company, with a large cash capital, which should acquire, upon fair terms, all the constituent properties, good and bad, represented by them, the theory being that during the critical period the strong and prosperous should carry the financially and physically weak properties.

Thus Public Service was formed, with a cash capital of $10,000,000 fully paid up, without one dollar of water. It shortly acquired all of its gas, and many of its electric properties by lease. The stocks of the financially embarassed railroads, and of the United Electric Company of New Jersey, which served Essex, Hudson and a part of Union counties electrically, and which was also in a struggling condition, were exchanged for the obligations—not the cash—of the new company, but in the doing of it approximately $60,000,000 of stock obligation was transformed into approximately $20,000,000 of new obligation. This transaction was certainly free from the injection of water.

At this juncture the gentlemen put up to me, as the suggestor of the enterprise, its successful consummation as a going concern, and I withdrew from my profession to accept its presidency. This fact is only of importance as showing the untrammalled point of view with which I approached my duties. At the commencement of my administration I hal, and I still have, three and only three objects in view.

1st. The making good of every dollar of all these under-lying bonds and securities by whomsoever held, and the prevention of the financial panic that would have ensued, and gentlemen, unless socialism and confiscation are to prevail in this country, which they are not, that object has been attained beyond preadventure.

2d. The giving of efficient and economical service to the peopl of this State in the three great public utilities of gas, electricty and street railway transportation.

3d. The assurance of an ultimate fair return to the stockholders who have invested their money in the stock of this company at par, first to the extent of ten million dollars, subsequently increased by two and one-half millions, now making twelve and one-half millions in all, thus far without a cent of return thereon. These, then, have been the three objects before me. The first, that of safe-guarding the underlying securities has, happily, as I say, been accomplished. What of the second—the giving of efficient and economical service to the people? Let us bear in mind that the company operates all the important gas, electric and street railway proeprties in the State, as far south as Camden, with the exception of the gas property in and about Elizabeth, and the street railway system in Trenton. This is a vast undertaking, and that it is not done with entire satisfaction to the public or to ourselves, no one knows so well as I. Remember, if you please, that Public Service came into possession over night, as it were, of a vast number of properties of different kinds, in all stages of efficiency and decomposition, and this was only four years ago. In the railway department alone we are in process of amalgamating into one homogeneous whole, nine different systems of railroads that previously had no interdependence. Many of them were in a state of physical, as well as financial collapse, and have had to be rebuilt. This work is progressing, but it will take several years to complete. We have in these four years already spent upwards of $26,000,000 in the improvement, extension and rehabilitation of the properties, and have appropriated over six millions additional for similar expenditure this year. This money, over and above the $12,500,000 of capital stock, has been raised by the sale of securities. We have built and rebuilt over 110 miles of track. We have purchased 568 new cars; we have built new power stations; we have extended the Camden gas pipe line from Trenton to Plainfield, and so on almost ad infinitum. The community is growing so rapidly that it is difficult to keep pace with it, let alone to improve conditions. Nevertheless, they are being improved; each year there is a substantial improvement, and this will continue if present administrative policies prevail, until the time will surely come when this company will give as satisfactory service as the nature of the business will permit. It will never be perfect; it is not perfect anywhere.

The gas business has been developed to a reasonable degree of satisfaction. I say advisedly, that where poor results in this line of business are observed in a house, it is almost universally found to be due to defective burners or the condition of the service pipes in the house. The uses to which gas is put are ever on the increase, and the whole business has a most encouraging prospect.

The electric business is in a state of development and transition. Machinery, now today, is obsolete tomorrow. The business is subject to aerial disturbance and subways and conduits are a frequent source of trouble. The troubles of street railway operation are legion, and in winter time are always with us. They are caused by difficulties too numerous to mention, over many of which the company has no control, such as snow, vehicular traffic, blocking of cars, etc. Of course we are not free from blame. No concern handling over 10,000 employees in work of this character, is free from error, from the president down to the humblest employee. All we can do is to do the best we can, and that is the honest purpose of my administration.

My attention has been called to a recent report made by an expert on the gas and electric service in Plainfield. He makes no substantial complaint of the gas service, but does speak caustically of the condition of the incandescent street lamps. I am now having an investigation made, and if his report is well founded, the defects will be corrected, and those responsible for the neglect disciplined.

As to the second branch of the subject of which I am treating, viz., the economy of service, I am proud of what we have accomplished and are doing for the people of the State. To summarize briefly, a complete transfer system has been put into effect between the nine railroad systems at all connecting points, where none formerly existed, and the five cent fare zone has been extended to the limits of reason, it being now possible to ride over 15 miles for a nickel in certain localities. The price of gas, which ranged from $1.80 down at the time of the formation of Public Service, is gradually being reduced to the universal dollar standard—a fair price for a city like Newark, but an extremely low price for a smaller or suburban locality. Here, when we took hold, the price of illuminating gas was $1.40; it is now $1.15, and on January 1, 1909, it goes to $1.00. The electric base rate is being reduced to 10c., involving, in some cases, a reduction of 50 per cent. This new rate becomes generally effective, with one or two exceptions, on January 1st next. Four years ago the base rate here was 18c. Such a low rate as 10c. never could have been obtained for a community of this character except as a result of consolidation. After the searchlight of the Hughes investigating committee was turned on in New York, the base rate for Manhattan was fixed at 10c. and for Brooklyn 12c. The mere mention of this demonstrates how favorable a rate the 10c. one for a suburban lacality like New Jersey is. I am indeed proud of all of this.

We have also promulgated a new schedule for public lighting that admittedly brings the price down to nearly a cost basis, it being our policy henceforth not to expect to reap much profit out of this character of business.

While all theis reduction has been going on, the price of nearly everything else has been going up, labor, coal, oil, manufactured products of every character all advancing, while the cost of the finished product—gas, electricity or transportation, as the case may be, has been coming down. This state of affairs, with its attendant results, if carried to extremes, was commented on with great force by Samuel Spencer, the late president of the Southern Railway, in a public address shortly before his death. The public should realize that there is a point beyond which these opposing forces must not go, if conflict is to be avoided.

All this is of the very greatest importance. It has a direct bearing on the ability of corporations to raise the necessary capital to properly extend. If rates are to be put below the point where fair earnings on obligations can be secured, fresh capital can not be secured, and stagnation of enterprise will result. James J. Hill says, it will take five billion of dollars to properly develop the steam railroads of this country during the next five years. Where will it come from if such dangerous theories prevail? What is true of the steam railroads is equally true of public utilities. It takes, and will continue to take, for some years, if not indefinitely, about four million dollars annually of new money, to fiance the new business and extensions of Public Service. This does not include a mile of extended railroad track. In these troublous times, even this comparatively small sum of money is not easily acquired. This situation, so far as new extensions are concerned, is accentuated by the passage, in response to a well defined but, in my opinion, mistaken public sentiment of the so-called limited franchise law, restricting the period for which franchises may be granted to twenty years, except where by vote of the people the period is lengthened to forty years. This does not affect Public Service to any extent, for I am entirely satisfied that we have enough to do to develop the properties we now have, without further substantial extension. In a sense, it is a direct benefit to Public Service, for it prevents others from obtaining what Public Service already has. But it will, in my judgment, retard the development of the rural sections of the State. In these times it is utterly futile to consider the financing of rural country lines upon any such limited basis, and we are not attempting it. This is not the manifestation of any dog in the manger policy, but simply a recognition of conditions. I will give you one or two illustrations:

The State authorities have chosen as a site for a new Normal School a location between Montclair and Paterson, not now reached by our lines. They have requested us to fill in this gap between these places, and we ought to do it, but it is out of the question. For the last three years your fellow townsmen, and my very good friend, Mr. Mellick, has interested himself in the extension of our Park avenue line here, by the Golf Club over to Metuchen. We agreed to build, but the matter was delayed because of difficulty in obtaining consents, until after the passage of this law. Now I have been forcel to disappoint Mr. Mellick by telling him that the extension is impracticable—a fact which as a banker I have no doubt he will very well appreciates. And so the instances might be multiplied. In thus speaking I have no desire to create any fresh agitation of this matter. I simply give my views. There is a bill pending in the Legislature at the present time to repeal the operation of the law outside of first class cities. I never hear of it before its introduction, and we shall neither favor or oppose its passage. My own view of the correct solution of this problem is that the grants should not be limited, unless for a very long term of years, like a leasehold of land, but that there should be frequent intervals of from ten to twenty-five years apart, when the terms upan which the franchises are to be enjoyed should be revised to the mutual fairness of the public and the company. This plan obviates the financial difficulty and yet preserves to the public all that is really substantial.

The third aim of Public Service, as I stated some time ago, is to earn a fair return to stockholders upon their investment. We have been going four years. In 1906, for the first time, we earned a little over five per cent. on our stock, and that on a gross business of $21,000,000 and a stock capital of $12,500,000. I think that all will agree that this is as close a margin as any legitimate business should be conducted upon. But with the enormous increase in the Company's business each year, unless all conditions change, within a reasonable time the earnings will substantially increase. At least this is our hope and belief. How then shall these earnings be distributed? The day of stock-watering and overcapitalization of properties of this character is over, and properly so. Governor Stokes in his annual message of 1906 strongly inveighed against this evil, and recommended legislation to prevent it. In compliance therewith the Legislature of last year passed a very drastic act, with which I do not think the public are very familiar, but which positively forbids public utility companies from issuing their obligations for less than par, except a reasonable banker's commission, and forbids the issuance of all stock, except for par. Heavy penalities are attched, including the rendering of the securities invalid. The Governor will bear me out, I think, that because of my familiarity with the subject, I, at his request, prepared this bill, and I am in hearty sympathy with his provisions.

I believe that we should recognize conditions as they are, without any attempt to undermine values or confiscate securities heretofore issued under forms of law; that stockholders of existing companies should be allowed to receive ten per cent. annually—a fair business profit, upon their investment before there is any further restriction placed upon these companies by taxation or otherwise. Until such time comes, the companies are taxed sufficiently in all conscience.

The taxes of Public Service for the year 1906 amounted to the vast sum of $920,000. Taxes are assessed upon the tangible property of the company, just as all other property is taxed, and in addition thereto there is a tax of two per cent. of the gross receipts of the company as a franchise tax for the use of the streets. This tax is paid to the State, but is distributed among the municipalities concerned. The Legislature of 1906 recognized a distinction between the extent of the use made of a public street by a gas company with pipe underground, an electric company with wire overhead or underground, and a street railroad company occupying so much more of the highway, and decreed that the franchise tax on the latter class of property should be gradually raised one-half of one per cent. a year, until it reaches five per cent. This distinction, although it will materially increase our taxes, I believe to be sound.

No better method of taxing a franchise than on the basis of gross receipts has ever been discovered. It is simple, safe, automatic and true. It has been suggested that this method should be abandoned, and that franchises should be taxed by the assessor, just as real estate and personal property. This method has none of the virtues of the gross receipts plan, and is fraught with difficulty. It opens the door for the worst kind of graft. The assessment can only be made arbitrarily—a very dangerous plan. But, some one will say, base the assessment on the difference between the assessed value of the company's tangible property and the market value of its securities. The first place, this is utterly impractical. The franchises overlap from one municipality to another. The same company controls franchises of various kinds in different localities, but the same securities represent all franchises. It would be absolutely impossible in New Jersey, in any considerable number of cases, to accurately ascertain the securities represented by any particular franchise. Nothing but chaos could result, or rather an arbitrary assessment. This is quite a different situation from that in New York city, where one company has all its franchises within the limits of the city. If such a method of assessment could be worked out, it would amount to a tax on earning power pure and simple, which has not yet been adopted in New Jersey on any class of property. There is no more reason for taxing this class of property on the full amount of its earning power than there is of similarly taxing every other class of property. If we should be thus taxed, so should every commercial business of every character. Let us see how it would work out as far as Public Service is concerned. This plan of assessment for taxation is equivalent to taxation upon the market value of all securities. The total market value of Public Service securities at the present time is approximately $200,000,000. Assuming the average tax rate of the muncicipalities to be $1.50—it is not less—this would impose a total tax of $3,000,000 annually, whereas we now pay approximately $1,000,000. Such a result would be both confiscatory and disastrous. It would not be tried, and the assessing powers would have to fall back on an arbitrary assessment, which might or might not increase our present taxes. In a great corporation of this character, taxes, while properly charged to operating, are of the nature of a fixed charge, and should be certain and beyond the power of manipulation. No, the present method is right until the earnings available for distribution exceed ten per cent. of bona fide stock capital. What then? In some of the New England States a principle has been adopted that seems to me fair, viz.: of requiring companies able to pay dividends in excess of what is considered a reasonable amount, to pay an amount equal to the excess dividend over the so-called reasonable dividend, by way of additional taxation. Thus the prosperity of the company and additional taxation go hand in hand. Governor Stokes has given his approval of this method, and the Legislature of last year appointed a commission to consider it. That commission is now at work and will shortly report to the Legislature now in session. I confess the plan

Spring and Summer Gowns

Just in time for those who are leaving for the South early this month, we have secured from three makers of repute their sample lines of Spring and Summer Gowns, and we secured them at such prices as will enable us to sell you the complete gown at less than the cost of dressmaking, to say nothing of the cost of material, most of which in these suits is imported.

Handsome creations from some of the best dressmakers we know of, including many charming imported gowns, are here and ready for southern tourists.

Particularly charming are these Lingerie Dresses of handkerchief linens and heavy hand-embroidered linens; beautifully modeled, exquisitely made; embroidered in the newest and most novel effects; imported to sell at $59, $69 and $79; selling here at these moderate prices—$39.50, $45.00 and $49.50.

Handsome Silk Dresses and Shirtwaist Suits for spring and summer wear are here in a very large variety of designs and qualities; made of beautiful new stripes, charming checks and in plain colors in most attractive yoke, jumper and bretelle effects. These dresses are valued at $18.50 to $25 and $35; we are offering them at just about half— $9.95, $12.50 and $18.00.

Beautiful White Dresses of Persian lawn, dotted swiss and batiste; exquisitely trimmed with handsome laces, embroideries and fancy beading; made in pleasing models—light, airy and delicate—as summery as can be; offered at just a little more than half their real value—some are actually half. Values $8.50, $12.50, $18.50 and $25. Priced at $5.50, $7.50, $9.50 and $12.50.

Linen and Rep Summer Skirts in handsome models, beautifully made in every particular; intended to sell at $6.50 to $12.50. Specially priced at $2.75, $3.50, $3.98.

Winsome Waists

Our collection of waists is simply superb. We are very positive that no store in Newark begins to equal this showing either in quality, style or variety.

Handsome Waists of French batiste, all-over embroidery and handkerchief linen of the finest, sheerest quality; exquisitely trimmed with the most fashionable laces, including hand-made Maltese, Armenian, French and German valenciennes with motifs and medallions; many exclusive designs to choose from at prices beginning at $10.95 and going up to as much as you will care to pay.

Fancy Dress Waists for wear on special occasions; charmingly made of Brussels net in white and cream, all-over laces, Cluny, baby Irish and chiffon cloth in such shades as will combine harmoniously with fancy costumes, being particularly nice for three-piece suits; prices range from $12.50 to $40.00.

Lingerie Waists and Messalines in the newest and most fashionable models; particularly nice for southern climates; daintly trimmed with German valenciennes laces and eyelet embroideries; fancy yokes and long line effects; very moderately priced at $5.75, and $9.95.

GERMS CAUSE DYSPEPSIA

IF YOU DON'T KILL THE DISEASE GERMS THEY WILL KILL YOU. PEPSOIDS DRIVE THE GERMS OUT OF THE STOMACH AND REBUILDS IT. WRITE FOR A FULL SIZED BOTTLE—FREE.

A noted physician of Pittsburg, Pa., in a recent letter to Dr. Oldman says:

"In your prescription known as 'Pepsoids' you have given the medical world the greatest and most valued discovery in medicine of the present century. You have at last solved the problem that has baffled the skill of the best physicians of recent times, how to cure permanently all Acute or Chronic Stomach Diseases known as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Catarrh of the Stomach and Digestive Weakness. I have used your prescription, 'Pepsoids,' in hundreds of cases without a single failure. I attribute the success of your treatment mainly to the fact that the disease germs of the stomach cannot resist Pepsoids. Your theory that most Stomach Diseases are brought about by multitudes of nefarious disease-breeding germs must be correct, judging from the remarkable results attained from the use of your 'Pepsoids.' I consider 'Pepsoids' the best and most valuable remedy yet discovered, for the treatment of stubborn stomach ailments."

Pepsoids cure Dyspepsia and all Stomach Diseases, in a new way, by repairing the wornout lining of the Stomach and at the same time, destroy all disease-breeding germs. Dyspepsia and the worst forms of Stomach Disorders once cured in this way never returns.

Pepsoids are sold at drug stores at 50c. a bottle on an absolute guarantee or money refunded.

If you have not used Pepsoids before, we will send you a 50-cent bottle FREE. Send us your name and address and you will receive promptly, a full sized bottle.

You do not obligate yourself to pay a cent. All we ask, after Pepsoids have cured or greatly benefitted you is, that you recommend Pepsoids to your friends. Try Pepsoids to-day—they will cure you. The Vio Chemical Co., Chicago, Ill.

Plainfield, N. J., February 13, 1907.

The speech delivered by President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation, at the Board of Trade banquet last night, concerning the history and purposes of that great public utilities' concern, as well as his resume of the difficulties it has encountered, can not fail to clarify many wrong impressions gained by the public. His remarks constituted an able presentation of the P. S. C.'s business and more particularly the part it has played in the history of the State during its brief existence. The people of Plainfield and for that matter all residents of New Jersey surely will have a better idea of the corporation and its work as a result of its president's timely talk.

The Plainfield Press thinks former Senator Charles A. Reed, of Somerset, is the logical candidate for State Treasurer. Queer kind of logic that produces that sort of conclusions.—Trenton True American.

Judging from the lines of reasoning to be found in the True American's editorial page, it certainly must seem to be queer logic to the Trenton paper.

The political wiseacre who can figure out the meaning of the moves being made by various leaders in the Legislature these days has not yet been found. Queer stunts are occuring daily and the question "what's the game" still remains unsettled. That some of the shining lights have political bees in their bonnets will not be denied.

George L. Record hastens to deny the report circulated by some papers that he has buried the hatchet with Samuel D. Dickinson. The hoodoo of the "New Idea" movement had been almost forgotten when some correspondent resurected him to play a part in the alleged love feast.

If there is any city in the State that has been given the go-by by celebrities more than Plainfield, we'd like to hear from her. Frank O. Briggs please write.

CIRCUS ENDS.

Y. M. C. A. Troupe Makes Its Last Appearance Before Large Crowd.

With Ray Ewry, holder of eight world's championships in broad and standing jumps, as the star of the troupe, the Y. M. C. A. circus closed last night. The audience taxed the capacity of the gymnasium. The show went off with even more snap than on Monday, and the conviction that the circus must be made a permanent affair was born of the decided success of the performance.

The Y. M. C. A. gymnasium team took the place of the Newark champions on the horse and the bars, and they went through the work with marked success. Tornello, the wire-walker, threw a surprise on the audience in his act. Announcer Barrows told the audience that Tornello couldn't appear on account of a sprain, and a truculent-appearing man in the gallery demanded his money back. He said he only came to see Tornello, who wasn't any good at that; he could do better himself. Mr. Barrows invited the kicker to make good. The truculent one promptly hustled to the floor, climbed on the wire, without removing even his overcoat. He was on the job from the start, and the spectators clapped vigorously when he stripped off outer clothes and make-up and disclosed the "great Tornello" himself in spangles.

There was a children's matinee yesterday afternoon. The troupe had its picture taken.

Captain Frank D. Ely, Pay Corps, U. S. Army, on four months' leave of absence, arrived in Plainfield yesterday, when he joined Mrs. Ely, who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Brooks, of Rockview avenue. Captain Ely has been stationed in Denver, Col., and left there last Friday.

BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET

C., and how the franchises paid $6,000 a year. He touched on the water investigation briefly. The water company, he said, had assured him that every assistance in arriving at the truth of the subject would be afforded the commission; and that, in the event of municipal ownership seeming wise, no impediment would be thrown in the way of securing the plant.

Rev. Mr. Warner, the second speaker, pleaded for a trade school in this city. He spoke with a touch of humor, and was roundly applauded at frequent intervals. He said, in part:

"Several years ago while traveling in the far west I visited the Board of Trade rooms in the city of Los Angeles, California. The impression made upon me was of a vivid and lasting sort. Practically a whole building consisting of several spacious rooms was given over to a systematized collection and display of State products and exhibits of the city's energy used in the development and transportation of the raw materials. What Los Angeles as a city with her facilities for trade, her location and climate, her resources of various sorts, were all set forth as inducements to investors and capitalists to locate in the city. The genuine pride of the westerner in booming his city, and the hustling powers characteristic of the men of the frontier were splendidly shown forth in the object lesson set before one in the Board of Trade building.

Every good citizen loves his home town and is willing to give his time, means and influence for its betterment. The normal, natural man was ever thus. I think we are all of the sane, healthy, vigorous type of manhood and every man here is an enthusiastic partisan, conscious of Plainfield's advantages, anxious and desirous to see her progress. Our city—and when I say our city I mean Plainfield and North Plainfield, for the two communities have identical interests and the line dividing them is imaginary and of arbitrary enactment, rather than a physical barrier such as a stone wall would be,—our city as a whole has before it a future which is largely in the hands of the business men, the progressive men of this community representing its trade interests and here tonight for its annual dinner. Such a Board of Trade and business as is represented here tonight must needs do something beside eating its annual dinner and listening to speeches. It must be an alert, progressive body of men, large minded and of sound executive ability—considering the present with thankfulness which does not degenerate into a sloth which is content with a minimum amount of progress, and which looks forward with the eye of the seer into the future planning for the accomplishments of its ideals.

I consider myself one of you. In every way permit me to do my share. Without getting into politics, disclaiming party lines, may I comment briefly on a defect as it seems to me of the present division which sets Plainfield and North Plainfield apart as two separate boroughs. It is a moral defect and its influence is that of a stronger community strengthening and safeguarding its welfare at the expense of its weaker neighbor. In the question of the liquor traffic as a municipality, you have done the very best of service in the community; the regulation of the traffic, the high license and the hours have all been attended to admirably and at 11 o'clock every man who has not satisfied the craving for drink is turned loose, crosses an imaginary line a few streets away and by actual count of persons interested from twelve to fifteen drunks are found in one saloon alone in North Plainfield and the night is made hideous and the young of the community and the women if they are by any chance coming home from a place of amusement have to meet this. Those who know how our county laws are framed know full well how our borough as a municipal-it is powerless to deal with it. Give us consolidation I say or else give us a stone fence so broad and high that the new stone spire of Holy Cross church shall only appear over the top of it. But it was not primarily of this subject that I wished to speak to you tonight. My interests lie along another line and I give them to you in the nature of suggestion.

For ten years past my work has taken me in large part among the boys and young men of the community in which I have been placed. I have shared their confidence and been acquainted with their difficulties. One very suggestive hint by way of observation has come to me, namely, that some boys and youths are fitted for a very considerable mental training some are not; some at the age of fifteen or sixteen become discouraged because their brighter, studious companions outstrip them in school, they hate books, teachers and such companions as just mentioned. What is a boy to do? He may run away. Some boys do. He may ask to leave school and be put into an office position; sometimes the request is granted, othertimes refused. He may hang on at school, play hookey as often as possible and company with the idle and vicious. Office positions in our cities are becoming increasingly hard to get and the boy is not of the right calibre for it. Again I ask what are you going to do with him? It seems to me that a partial solution may be found in the placing of a boy in a properly equipped trades' school.

How many great men have been some times connected with working at a trade! Moses was the son of a poor slave who worked at brick-making; David was a shepherd boy; Euripides was the son of a fruiterer; Virgil of a baker; Horace of a freed slave; Tamerlane of a shepherd; Ben Johnson a mason; Shakespeare of a butcher; Melanchthon, the great theologian of the Reformation, was an armorer; Luther was the child of a poor miner; Fuller was a farm servant; Carye, the originator of the plan of translating the Bible into the language of the millions of Hindustan, was a shoemaker.

St. Paul showed that men could serve God in honest daily labor. Business is a school in which men are learning God's lessons of truth, honesty, fidelity, patience, or Satan's lessons of dishonesty, deceit, selfishness.

What a splendid thing for Plainfield, for New Jersey if this Board of Trade should use its efforts to the establishing of such a school in our midst. Think of the young fellows in the various factories who would jump at the chance right here in Plainfield. Then Emerson's Man the Reformer will see its truth justified. Kebles' beautiful lines descriptive of the connection of work with character will surely come true. For several months past I have been looking carefully into the subject of trade schools and the bearing they might have on "the boy problem." I find the tendency of modern educators is towards manual training as one of the means of culture and education. May I divide my subject very briefly into two heads. First, the need of trades schools; second, the part they play in education.

Listen to this:

Quotations.—At the Social Education Congress, in session in Boston, industrial training for boys was strongly advocated by Frederick P. Fish, president of the Bell Telephone Company, Frank A. Vanderlip, and others. Professor Charles R. Richards, of Columbia University, said that labor union rules limiting apprentices were so stringent that in a few years the death of now living skilled workmen, with no successors to take their places, would cause a scarcity which would intefere seriously with the manufacturing industries.

Here is a summing up from one of the sanest and oldest papers of the country, The Youth's Companion:

Investigation by the National Bureau of Labor shows that industries are suffering from a lack of trained workmen with an all-round knowledge of their trade. The apprentice system has all but disappeared, and its place has not yet been taken by an adequate trade school system. The extensive use of machinery and the subdivisions of labor have given rise to thousands of occupations in place of a few well-defined trades. Many of these occupations consist of a single simple operation. Production on a large scale has destroyed the personal relation between employer and employe, between master and apprentice. A young worker may spend his life pulling a lever on one kind of machine and never know anything of the other processes in the factory. Employers are unwilling to take apprentices, journeymen are unwilling to instruct them, and ambitious boys are unwilling to become apprentices. The bureau believes that even under modern complex conditions, the old-fashioned apprenticeship would be very useful. It is a grave question how the foreman, the superintendent, the master workman of the future are to be made out of the boy of today.

"Now as to my second point. The part that such schools play in education may be found in the realization that manual labor, the working at a trade calls into being some of the highest capacities of a man and fits and trains his character. Work it is that demand precision, perseverance, inexhaustible patience, endurance, honest workmanship, will, determination and courage. Aren't these all the fine side of men? Patience, honesty, endurance, determination, courage and numberless other qualities, how they grow in a man and become fine by his work we little realize!

The common round the daily task
Will furnish all we ought to ask,
Room to deny ourselves
A road to bring us daily nearer God."

"The toastmaster has told me to amuse you for about ten minutes," said Assemblyman Crowther in opening; he obeyed the behest with marked success. He told stories that kept the diners alternately roaring and giggling. He closed with a tribute to the water front of Perth Amboy, to the American spirit in Perth Amboy's foreigners, and to Lincoln's memory.

Father Bogan followed Mr. Crowther. He said, in part:

"I am deeply grateful for the honor conferred upon me in asking me to say a word to this gathering. I am grateful for the spirit in which you give c ordial greeting to me, a Catholic priest. In the short time I have been here, I can say that your tokens of friendship have made me feel perfectly at home.

"I didn't know that I was to speak until this morning, but the inspiration has been such that preparation has not seemed necessary. I have heard tonight what should go down in the history of the Public Service Corporation as a classic and frank statement of what that company is striving to do. I feel a personal friendship toward President McCarter now, and I feel sure that the next time the meter in any house gets to living a fast life he will come up to the house with his wrench and fix it.

"I feel as I believe you feel, from the honest presentation of the difficulties of the P. S. C., that those difficulties will be straightened out. I believe the promises of the company are honestly made.

"A serious thought in conclusion. It may be out of place to champion the cause of our religion, but I ean say that if our men are true to the teachings of the church they will uphold the honor and the dearest wishes of the city. I may say for the men of our parish that they will respond to every call of civic duty, without an appeal from their priests. They strive for the right, above class distinctions, and their principle is to be true to their convictions. This is not a challenge; this is merely a statement of what I feel as the spokesman of our men. If their holy faith be misunderstood, let those who question look to the results of its reachings. Dear fellow citizens, give those men the benefit of the belief that they are honestly striving to attain the execution of honest convictions." (Sustained applause.)

Mr. Fisk did not read Major Briggs' regrets until after Father Bogan's speech. Mr. Bowne was introduced as a substitute for the senator-elect. He told a string of stories under the head of "The Humorous Side of Life."

In bringing the dinner to a close Mr. Fisk reminded the diners that Plainfield would complete its fortieth year as a corporate city in 1909. "Hold yourselves in readiness," he said, "to join in the celebration we will hold at that time."

The dinner committee was made up of Mr. Fisk, Alexander Gilbert, B. F. Coriell, W. L. Saunders and H. W. Marshall. Among the guests were Frank Bergen, general counsel of the P. S. C., and Hamilton F. Kean, former chairman of the Republican County Committee.

"GLYCEROLE OF ARNICA"

For Chapped Hands.

There is no preparation which has given such general satisfaction as Randolph's "Glycerole of Arnica." It has successfully "stood the test" for many years and is a very healing remedy, perfectly absorbed by the skin, without any greasy after effect. Delightfully perfumed with Extract of White Rose.

MILLVILLE PASTOR AT FAITH CHAPEL

ADDRESSESS BARACA CLASS ON YOUNG MEN AND THE CHURCH.

The Baraca Class, of Faith chapel, held its first business meeting, last night, and combined it with a social hour, including an entertainment and an address by Rev. Frank Anderson, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Millville, who is State secretary and National treasurer of the Baraca movement.

At the business meeting the class adopted the new constitution. The entertainment followed. There were violin solos by Frank Malin, accompanied by Miss Marie Viebrock; soprano solos by Mrs. Andrew J. Stiglitz and baritone solos by John Calder.

Mr. Anderson spoke on the subject "Young Men and the Church." He devoted the greater part of his talk to impressing upon those present the importance of enlisting the aid and support of men in Christian work, of going out in the highways and byways after them. He did not favor the plan of taking in members by the hundreds, preferring the system of picking them and using them in the particular line for which they were best fitted. He said that the Baraca movement had been found to be a great agency for the development of men in special lines. He mentioned by way of illustration that he was a classmate of "Christy" Mathewson, the great baseball pitcher, at Bucknell University. He was a member of the college baseball team, but he did not appear to have special ability at that time, in fact during his early career he was frequently knocked out of the box. Later he developed into one of the greatest pitchers of the day, because he was especially trained for his work.

Mr. Anderson gave a brief history of the Baraca movement and told of its increasing influence and membership throughout the State and the whole country. It is a work especially by men for men and is meeting with great success. He interspersed his address with amusing incidents which kept his audience continually in good humor.

The social hour then followed, during which there was a women's contest, the contestants being blindfolded and set to work cutting ducks out of paper. Miss Bertha Peck received the prize, it being a lemon wrapped in an endless amount of paper. During the social refreshments were served by members of the Baraca Class. The local organization has had a remarkable growth since its institution six weeks ago, the present membership being forty-two. Six new members were received last night.

PEARY LECTURE DATE.

Arctic Explorer Will Return Here On March 4.

The date of Peary's lecture on his arctic trip, at the theatre, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., has been set. He will be here on March 4.

The lecture will be entirely new. None of the matter used at the First Methodist Episcopal church will be part of it. The pictures will be new, as well.

Discussed Missions.

The study of "The Island Kingdom," in progress by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, was continued in an interesting paper on "Samoa, Tonga and Micronesia," written by Miss G. S. Whitney and read by her sister, Miss Whitney, at the monthly meeting held yesterday afternoon in the church lecture room. Among interesting facts about these islands was the statement that one of them has been a coaling station for the United States since the Spanish war. The establishment of a witness for God in the many islands of Micronesia is full of encouragement to the missionary student. The paper was preceded by devotional services, led by Mrs. Mary B. Pierce, the subject being "Jezebel or Power of Wife's Influence." Current events of unusual interest were given by Miss Ella Serrell.

Women Form Partnership.

Miss Ellen Mullen and Miss Hattie Squires, saleswomen at the Woodhull & Martin Company store, have decided to form a partnership and in the spring will open a store for the sale of laces, embroideries, etc., in the store now occupied by Greer & Greenwood on East Front street. Both young women have been connected with the Woodhull & Martin store since the original firm began business here and they have a host of friends.

SOCIAL AT HOPE CHAPEL.

Societies Combine to Arrange and Present a Pleasing Programme.

Under the combined auspices of the various cocieties of Hope chapel, a social and entertainment was held in the Sunday-school rooms last night. It was in charge of G. Herbert Condict and was attended by a large gathering.

The programme opened with the singing of "My Country 'tis of Thee," by the gathering, after which the following numbers were given: Introductory remarks by Mr. Condict; vocal selections by Mrs. L. R. Howard, musical selections by the Sagamore Club, address by Rev. L. R. Howard, songs by Thomas Hendry, piano selections by Mrs. Howard and Miss Bertha Jones, reading by Mrs. Stuart Simmons, addresses by John Leal, Stuart Simmons and Dr. J. S. Zelie. Refreshments were served in conclusion and a social period followed.

The committee which arranged and had charge of the affair consisted of Mrs. L. R. Howard, Mrs. Clark and David Bowden.

Company K Inspection.

Captain Stevens, of the Madison Barracks, accompanied by Major Martin, the former captain, inspected Company K, at the armory, last night. Every member attended the inspection and Captain Stevens complimented the organization on its fine showing. Major Martin was the recipient of congratulations upon his promotion, and he thanked the members for their kind expression.

M'CARTER DEFENDS P. S. C.

strikes me as both practical and equitable.

As an alternative proposition, it might be well to provide that instead of the increased taxes, the company paying the excess dividend should be required to make some further reduction in the price of its commodities. This would probably be the better plan. I do not think the public is as much interested in the problem of increased taxation of public companies as it is in their efficient and economical service. A plan somewhat similar to this has also been successfully developed in New England. At all events, in some such manner these corporations can be controlled for the future with just results to the public and to shareholders.

Time will not permit of my entering here upon the question of municipal ownership. So far as public lighting goes, it may be possible for a large municipality to handle this business honestly and economically, but I do not believe it to be a wise experiment, especially in view of the very low prices at which the c ompanies are now offering to do the business. From the company standpoint, as the margin of profit disappears, so does the intensity of their desire for the business. In its broader espects, I have studied this question much, and without regard to its effect upon any private interest I may have, as a citizen proud of his State, I say woe betide the Commonwealth when she enters upon any policy of municipal ownership or commercial trading as carried on with such dubious results across the sea. It is not to my mind a proper function of a democratic government.

One more matter before I conclude. We hear much in this day about corporation control of legislation, and this charge is frequently specifically brought against Public Service. The facts are these: About ten per cent. of the bills introduced into the Legislature directly affect the business and affairs of this company. Some of these bills are meritorius, more are ill-considered and altogether impractical. Of course I deem it my duty to see that our interests are protected in every legitimate way. I would not be fit for my position if I did not. We do not introduce the bills. It is seldom that we need any affirmative legislation. We simply meet what we find. If ten per cent. of the bills introduced directly affected the bond business of Harvey Fisk & Sons, the banking business of Ladenburg, Thalman & Co., of which brother Mellick is a member, or even the cement business presided over by Senator Ackerman, I think you would promptly find a sturdy delegation of Plainfielders hustling to Trenton. That is all there is to it. Some years ago we did cooperate with the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company for the abandonment of the Morris Canal. I have always regretted it, not because our object was improper, but I think we should abstain from anything of the kind. Our only object was to transform a dirty ditch in Essex and Passaic counties into a modern open air high speed subway to the lasting benefit of these communities, and for their good I hope it may some day yet be accomplished, but not upon our initiative. No, we do not control politics; on the contrary Public Service is the football of the politician, the prey of the grafter, and the chief concern of the visionary theorist.

Gentlemen, we live in a great State. We are all Jerseymen, and we should be proud of it. The State is no longer a by-word; she is rapidly forging into the front rank of sisterhood of the Union. She is about to be linked to the metropolis of the Nation by a wonderful system of tunnels, built for electric railways. The influx of popoulation should then be enormous, and increased prosperity for all should follow. We shall try to do our part. My ambition is that when I shall lay down this work, the pendulum will have swung back from the pole of hostile criticism to a point where all fairminded men will say "in the face of almost insuperable conditions, he has done the best he could."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Something quite a departure from the usual calibre of melodrama will be the offering at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night. Incidentally the new play, which is by Mr. Hal Reid, and called "The Shoemaker," will introduce Joe Welch, the popular character actor and comedian in a novel role, that of a Hebrew mender and maker of shoes. Mr. Welch is one of the few exponents of a certain type of Jews who make their homes on the East side of New York after coming to America from foreign shores. He has lived in the midst of these people all his life and knows the character as well as he does himself. As the poor shoemaker, who breaks none of the ten commandments because his nature will not permit him. Mr. Welch is said to have a role that fits his unique talents to a jot. There are numerous opportunities to overact the role, but Mr. Welch portrays him just as he is. In the play the scenes shift from New York to the far West. Despite his new environments Mr. Welch keeps within the picture of the type, sustaining all of the vital elements of the man's nature till the final curtain.

The attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday afternoon and night will be "Parted on Her Bridal Tour," presented by Charles E. Blaney. The play is a dramatization of Laura Jean Libbey's famous novel, "Miss Middleton's Lover," which has been read by millions of the English speaking race. The play is on the pure and wholesome order and not of the "blood and thunder" type, of which the theatre going public is surfeited. It is unique, thrilling and instructive and as good as a Sunday-school lesson to the young girl who has to work for a living as it points out the pitfalls and paths of temptation. It will appeal to all classes as the rich and the poor receive just portrayal in this powerful play of the emotions. The story is cleverly interpreted by a strong company which has for its leading woman Miss Victory Bateman who has been specially engaged by kind permission of a noted New York manager who had her under contract for five years and so much did her personality resemble that of "Irene" in Miss Libbey's great play "Parted on Her Bridal Tour" that she has been secured to play the important role. The scenic and mechanical effects are thoroughly up to date in every respect.
